It became imperative for Richardson Brothers to secure another outlet for the water from their laundry because Boston would no longer allow of its being emptied into Horn Pond by way of the public sewer through the Town Meadow. Just what to do was a problem of large magnitude. Unless the city could furnish them proper drainage the laundry must go to some other locality, and as it is an establishment constantly employing not less than 75 hands, with a large weekly payroll, and a handsome amount of property for taxation purposes, its retention here by furnishing proper sewerage was a matter worthy of a big effort. Our city authorities thought it could be done—and they did it. Street Supt. Jones had an interview with the Boston Water Board and with the officers of the B. & M. RR. Co., which, whatever passed between them, resulted in his setting 50 or 75 men quietly to work putting in a sewer from the Railroad's extension of the Boston sewer at the Main street railroad crossing to the laundry pipe at Walnut street, and his undertaking was a complete success. When a movement similar to this was agitated last year Medford flew to arms, so to speak, and threatened Woburn with all sorts of terrible things if she attempted to run any more of her sewerage through the Boston pipes into Mystic Pond, and if they had been aware of what Mr. Jones was doing the authorities of that excellent but sleepy old burg would have tried to kick up a firstclass row.

But they did not know. Mr. Jones hurried the work as rapidly as possible and on Saturday evening it was finished up in fine shape, at a cost of about $300, and the Woburn Steam Laundry is a fixture.

We give more space to this achievement of Supt. Jones because of the peculiarities of the sewerage question, the trouble it has caused in the past, and what is possible to grow out of it in the future. Of course Medford is not hurt a particle by additional Woburn drainage through Boston's Mystic Valley Sewer; but she looks at it differently, hence the fuss. But we have secured our drainage this time without any trouble, and let that suffice for the present.

E. Cutter, Jr., of Boston, to be Director of the Orpheus Club.

The Orpheus club members are happy. They received a leader yesterday, and the annual meeting last night was one of the largest and most enthusiastic ever held, over 35 members attending. The principal business of the evening was the selection of E. Cutter, Jr., of Boston as musical director to succeed the late George W. Sumner. The matter was finally decided very quickly but the choice was made after a most hearty indorsement of the candidate by B. J. Lang of Boston, who was Mr. Sumner's teacher, and has also given Mr. Cutter instruction. Mr. Lang recommended Mr. Cutter in unqualified terms of praise as an all-round musician, a first-class director, who is "exact, punctual and imperative." Mr. Trask, president of the club, wrote Mr. Cutter but the letter went astray. Receiving no reply, he wrote Mr. Lang, who did not receive the letter until Tuesday. Mr. Lang started at once for Boston, reached there yesterday morning and sent Mr. Cutter at once to this city. Mr. Trask was in Hartford, but returned last evening in time to see Mr. Cutter a few minutes. In the mean time a delegation of the Orpheus club officers had entertained the visitor and were much pleased with him. So the choice last evening was unanimous. In the selection which is made over a strong list of candidates, the club had in mind a teacher on the pianoforte who could take Mr. Sumner's pupils, and believe they have accomplished this. Cutter is accompanist for the Apollo club of Boston which is recognized as the finest men's chorus in the country. For five year's he has been director of the Lexington chorus of men's voices, and he is also organist and director of the Cambridge choir, where T. L. Cushman of this city sings. He is about 35 years old, short, slender, but full of energy. The selection is an admirable one and it is a matter of congratulation that so well equipped a musical instructor is available to Springfield people.—Springfield Republican.

Mr. Cutter is a Woburn boy and has relatives and many friends in this city who will read the above notice with pleasure. The Cutters are a musical people. Ben, a brother of E. Jr., is one of the foremost violinists in Boston and was for some time a member of the

The Women Conference of the Women's Auxiliary of this State and Rhode Island will be held at Cambridge Thursday Oct. 2, 1890.

Tuesday afternoon the Woman's Auxiliary have their first meeting of the fall. Hour of the meeting 3 p. m., but let all be there at 2.45 so as to have few moments beginning.

Many warm friends of our Association are not quite satisfied that it is best to debar the women from our gospel meetings, and possibly we who have settled the question in our own minds long ago, do not have patience always to explain why the meetings are limited to "men only." As the question will be raised frequently while our special meetings are going on, a few reasons are given below:

1. The avowed work of the Association is for young men.
2. This work is for them specially because they most need it.
3. Experience proves that best results are obtained in this way.
4. The churches hold and care for the girls and young women, and young men cannot do for them what the church now does for them successfully.
5. Speculation is the business of today and we hold that we are in this direct line of work thus our mass meetings.

Purchasers of kitchen supplies will do well to direct their attention to the interesting announcement which those well-known business people, Messrs. Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom, make in another column. With no attempt whatever to confuse or bewilder the searcher for truth they simply place before him in a modest, honest, businesslike manner the fact that they are selling the various kinds of kitchen furnishings away down below the ordinary prices, and they prove their claim by publishing the prices at which those goods can be bought of them.

About Law Schools.

WOBURN, Sept. 24, '90.

MR. GEO. A. HOBBS: In the last issue of your paper I noticed a paragraph referring to Mr. E. H. Lounsbury's entrance to the Harvard Law School, in which you complimented the gentleman for choosing "the best," meaning that the Harvard Institution was superior to any other Law School in the country.

That little paragraph occasioned considerable comment among the legal fraternity of this city and also among people who have watched the career of the law schools of Harvard and Boston Universities.

The almost unanimous opinion was that the Harvard School was not at all on a par with the Law School of Boston University. The instructors of the Boston school have such a reputation that even the most enthusiastic admirer of "Fair Harvard" would not compare the latter's legal talent with the former gentlemen. When too, we consider that almost three fourths of the Harvard graduates intending to practice law choose to study at the B. U. L. S. it would seem poor judgment to class the latter inferior to the Cambridge School.

Hoping that the article was intended only as a compliment to Mr. Lounsbury's judgment and not as a slur upon other Law Schools, I remain,

Yours very truly,

JOHN J. WALSH.

Why This Sudden Change?

If Congressman Banks should conclude to let Woburn select Postmaster Reade's successor next February by ballot, as some people hope he will, and as several Congressman have done before him, it would not be at all surprising if Mr. Reade should be chosen to succeed himself. Stranger things than that has happened in this ever-changing world of ours.—[JOURNAL.] Why this sudden change, Mr. JOURNAL? When Winchester elected its present postmaster you were most severe in your condemnation of such method. What's up?—Winchester Star.

Don't you remember to have read, my boy, when you went to school: "Circumstances alter cases?" Do? Then why this interrogatory?

It Is So!

Woburn Public Library.

The annual vacations are at an end, the autumn session of the schools has begun and the scholars are already well started on the work of the year. In consequence of this there is quite a lively and wideawake appearance at the Library and we are glad to see the interest and enthusiasm manifested by our young people in their search for subjects and answers to questions. The public library is the place where the scholar can be taught how to use books as the student in science is taught how to use the instruments put into his hands; it is in fact the workshop where the material may be found in which to accomplish all he may desire.

A number of valuable and important books have been placed upon the shelves during the last few weeks, among which are "Rambles in the Black Forest" by H. Wolf where a good description is given of that part of Germany so little known to any but the Germans until recently. The English are now beginning to vary their route and to pass by rail throrgh this picturesque forest tarrying at Friberg to see the waterfall illuminated by the electric light. Americans too are growing more adventureous and occasionally stop for a short time on the heights of Blauen to inhale the country air and admire the Alps from a distance.

"White Mountains" by Julius H. Ward proves the author not only to be possessed of a close acquaintance with the physical traits of this wonderful region he describes but is, as it were, on intimate relations with these grand mountains, valleys and highlands. To those who are visiting the White Hills it will suggest and aid, and to those who know and love them it will illuminate memories and increase appreciation.

Books about Africa are decidedly the fashion in literature just now. One of the books is "Scouting for Stanley in East Africa" by Thomas Stevens who many readers will remember as the writer of the interesting book "Around the World on a Bicycle;" this work, so full of peril and incident, will be found a good introduction to Stanley's great work on that country "In Darkest Africa." In view of the enormus amount of public interest taken in this work we have placed three copies in the hands of our patrons. It is in two volumes and contains a thousand pages and is a graphic account of his greatest achievement.

"Talks with Emerson" by Charles Woodbery is a book alive with meaning and suggestion, well adapted to interest young men, and is an evidence of the influence of Emerson's personality over them, for it is said that seldom any other writer or teacher in our history ever so completely won the reverence and the affection of this class. The author's account of his personal associations with Emerson casts no new light on the character of the man but is well worth reading. "Economic and Social History of New England" by W. B. Weeden covers a new field of inquiry and one which now possesses a greater degree of interest than ever before to students of social and industrial questions. It is not a general history of New England and touches its political history only as it effects its social interests.

"A Social Departure" is the title of a book of travels—a journey round the world by two young women. It comes to us neatly bound with over 100 illustrations and is prolific in entertainment and instruction. Its style is bright and alluring and all those who delight in books of foreign travel will receive much pleasure from this. It is very "American" now for women to travel alone, and why should it not be when we reflect upon what the statistics are relating to the surplus female population? Certainly it is a privilege no one will deny them when they possess an eye which has been trained to some understanding of the beauty and majesty of the natural world and an intelligence somewhat educated by study into a knowledge of the manners and customs of so many different nations. They travelled 3900 miles across the great North West, through the Rocky Mountains describing many strange experiences and novel scenes in the silent, solemn heart of the Rockies; they discuss intelligently the opening of trade between China and Japan by the new railway and steamship lines. They ride in the jinrikisha at Japan and tell us all about the marvellous and quaint little shops in the "Land of the Rising Sun;" to China for a short time with the Celestials, and then to India where they see and admire the beauty of the Taj at Argra.

The eighth volume of the Riverside Library for young people entitled "Girls and Women" will be found an excellent guide for young persons. It teaches that the highest aim should be to acquire a noble character, even if one has to sacrifice ambitions and talents. A few rules are laid down which are essential to health "Breathe fresh air;" "Take plenty of exercise:" "Work regularly with body and mind;" "Study something new every year;" "Make home pleasant;" "Be charitable but let the charity come from the heart." Though this book is designed for young people the middle aged and old will find much in it that will appeal to them.

But what can we give to the boys? what books can we put into the hands of those who can so skillfully wield a bat or toss a ball? Manual of "Physical Training" by Edwin Checkly where good instruction is given on how to care for the body; correct habits of walking; standing and breathing, and as extraordinary honor is now paid athletic heroes it becomes our young men to give careful attention to physical culture that they may all become like the ancient Greeks.

Boston Theatres.

Katie Putnam, one of the successful soubrette stars of the day, will bring a new play to the Grand Opera House on Monday. It is called "Love will find a way." The Grand Opera is giving the public some fine dramatic entertainments this fall.

Light, unsubstantial and practically plotless as it is, "Castles in the Air" is the means by which no little enjoyment is brought to the lover of amusement and melody. De Wolf Hopper, characteristically droll, has plenty to do in the operetta. Piquant Della Fox is certainly as nimble, graceful and alert a singing soubrette as the lyric stage has presented. Klein is very amusing as Hopper's foil, and Seabrook's quaint and original vein of humor finds apt expression. This is the last week of this handsomely mounted lyric production at the Globe Theatre.

A great swinging drawbridge, opening and closing on the busy river that runs through Chicago, will be the scene of a most exciting situation at the Globe next week. "Money Mad" is the play. It is an American melodrama, by Steele Mackaye, and was greatly successful in New York. E. J. Henley and a special company will appear in the play under J. M. Hill's direction

Mr. Charles W. Bennett has bought the shop opened formerly by the late R. J. Alley with the adjoining lot of land. Mr. Fortis has opened a blacksmith shop in one part of the building.

Mr. E. W. Locke of Chelsea, "Father Locke," gave an entertaining lecture in the Town Hall on Thursday evening of last week. The lecture consisted of reminiscences of his experience in the war and at the conclusion he gave several of his stirring songs. A large number of the company present patronized the baked bean supper in the upper hall. The entertainment was given by the committee for athletic sports at the Cattle Show and they desire to thank their friends who so very generously assisted them.

Wyoming.

There now seems to be no question that the Republican State ticket in the new Commonwealth of Wyoming has been elected by an ample majority. There has never been any real doubt that such would be the result, but the pertinacity with which some of the Democratic newspapers have been claiming the new State has given rise to an impression in some quarters that Wyoming might actually be in the uncertain column. Now that it has gone Republican, our Democratic friends will wish that instead of having professed such unbounded confidence that the State was a Democratic one, they had stuck to their earlier policy of stigmatizing the admission of Wyoming as a "partisan outrage." It is, of course, to the complexion of the Legislature that the chief interest attaches, and it is now made clear beyond any doubt that Wyoming will add two to the already large Republican majority in the national Senate.—Boston Journal.

An Elevated Railroad Rumor.

There are rumors of an elevated railroad which will start from Stoneham and, skirting Spot Pond, pass through the western part of Malden, Edgeworth, Somerville and Charlestown terminating Haymarket Square.—Boston Herald.

Suburban elevated railroads have got to come, and come pretty soon too. The only way they can be staved off is for the Street Railway Company to adopt electricity for a motor without any unnecessary delay.

Banana Fritters.

Pare, split and cut in two, six bananas; sprinkle the pieces with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, the juice of an orange, and let them stand for an hour. Make a batter with the fruit juice, a small cup of flour, one egg, a little milk, and a teaspoonful of butter; dip and fry. The most delicious of dainties, have no attraction for the individual who has no appetite and suffers with dyspepsia. Ayer's Sarsaparilla improves the appetite and aids digestion.

It is an economical young man who escorts his sister to entertainments, instead of some other fellow's sister. Such a young man studies his pocketbook, and when he marries he will supply his family with Brussels soap, because it's economical and good.

"The beautiful little mackerel gulls, which a few years since were so plentiful in our Maine bays and estuaries, have entirely disappeared, and are now never seen," says the Lewiston Journal. This is a mistake. These birds are quite numerous in Frenchman's Bay.

It's economical—Brussels soap.

"It's getting quite dark now," remarked Cholly as they sat on the front piazza. "Yes" she answered, with a touch of scorn as she surveyed the distance between them. "One might imagine you were afraid of the dark."

It is universally admitted that a mother should, if she is able, nurse her child. If she can not, or if for good reasons it is not advisable, then Mellin's Food, which has been proven to correspond physiologically with mother's milk, should be used.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

LESSON XIII, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, SEPT. 28.

The Cases of Those Who Failed to Accept the Gospel—The Rich Young Man Whom Jesus Loved—What Was the Sin of Dives?—The Personality of St. Luke.

The teachings comprised in the twelve lessons preceding are so many, varied and important that a specific review, or even satisfactory mention of each principle advanced, is manifestly impossible. A few salient points, however, should be noted: The development of Christian doctrines; the fact that these lessons deal chiefly with teaching and very little with personal history, and especially the instances given illustrating the reasons why men do not accept the gospel and order their lives in accordance therewith. In the cases of those bidden to the supper, one was kept away by his wife, and another by his oxen; one by an unreasonable fondness, and another by mere love of property.

Again, in the case of the wealthy young man we have a very peculiar and affecting instance. The text plainly shows that he was a youth of much nobility of character, and another evangelist adds that Jesus loved him. He was no doubt "one of the most popular men of our community," as the modern phrase has it, and yet he had not abused his wealth or popularity, for he was chaste, temperate and just. And yet even he failed to accept Christ—he had too much money, or at any rate thought too much of it.

Other characters are the greedy rich man, the lazy and voluptuous man, the merely indifferent man, and finally Dives, against whom no serious allegation is made—he seems to have been what some call "a downright good fellow," "a jolly dog," eating and drinking and having a "good time," "never bothering his head about reforming the world," but "letting each fellow look out for himself."

And on him a special condemnation falls—and what a fearful condemnation! Out of all who rejected Christ, as recorded in the quarter's lessons, he alone is followed beyond the grave and selected as an instance of final and complete reprobation. Not the murderer, not the extortioner, not even the impenitent thief—simply the man who had drifted along and enjoyed himself and never inquired about the sick and sorrowing. Are we at liberty to conclude that the state of society in the Roman empire at that time and the luxury then beginning among the wealthy were considered in this parable? And surely there never was a time when the lesson was so applicable as now; for there never was a time in the world's history when so many great fortunes were so suddenly acquired as in the United States in this generation. Never was the moral responsibility of the wealthy so great as now. Wealth is not sinful; but as to a life of mere enjoyment Christ has given us the divine view in His account of Dives. Of all the sinners mentioned during the quarter's lessons Dives is selected as the utterly hopeless case.

It should also be specially noted that the work of the last quarter is practically a study of Luke's gospel; the student should, therefore, as occasion serves, examine the authorities as to Luke. Here it is sufficient to state that he was a physician and man of learning, a companion for some time of St. Paul and author of the "Acts of the Apostles." Other facts of his life are not clearly proved, but the primitive Christians received by general tradition the statement that he was a native of Antioch, a Greek by blood rather than a Jew, or, at any rate, of Greek rearing and culture, one of the earliest converts and a very careful and diligent student of all things connected with the earthly life of Christ. The style of his writing shows that he had the "historical sense" very well developed.

The first mention of this gospel is alleged to be by Clement of Rome, about the year 100; and it is spoken of as a work already generally known to Christians and accepted as authority. For these and many other reasons the best judgment is that Luke wrote his gospel not long before the destruction of Jerusalem, and with the assistance of St. Paul. Tradition adds that he died a natural death at the age of 84, after preaching in various countries. As to the style of Luke it should be noted that he is careful to fix the time of each important event by mentioning the rulers in power at the time. The construction is artistic: First is the address to Theophilus and a citation of authorities, then the advent of John the Baptist and events in historic order to the beginning of Christ's ministry, and then the development of doctrines and lessons in regular order.

The quarter now closing opens with an impressive lesson on the proper use of the Sabbath; it is not to be kept by mere rigid formalism, as the Pharisees kept it, but with a joyous devotion. The old Jewish Sabbath is done away with. The parable of the supper follows, and here, as in many other places in Luke, the fact is emphasized that those who held rule among the Jews, with very rare exceptions, had no welcome for Jesus. The beginning of a Christian life—"taking up the cross"—the finding of the lost sheep and the lost piece of money and the prodigal son as an example of forgiveness follow as regular chapters in a serial discourse upon the work of grace. The parable of Dives and Lazarus is the most vivid picture of the life beyond the grave given in Christ's teachings, and appropriately closes this division of this gospel.

The miracle of the ten lepers, the parable of the widow who prevailed by prayer and the contrasted prayers of the Pharisee and publican logically come together as containing our Lord's teaching on the power of prayer in healing for the soul. Other parables and incidents follow, each introducing an important principle of the Christian faith, and the quarter closes with another and most emphatic lesson upon the hostility of the chief priests and the scribes. The student curious upon such matters should consult some of the recent discussions on the prophecy concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, and especially the question lately debated with some heat as to whether St. Luke recorded the prophecy before or after its fulfillment. As the city was destroyed in A. D. 70, and as Luke was traveling with St. Paul as late as 61 (in the spring of that year they reached Rome after the shipwreck), the question is one of great interest.

A Careful Georgian.

A wealthy Georgia man died recently, and after the last sad rites the family made a search for the will, but could not find it. Finally some one suggested that the body should be exhumed. This was done, and in the inside pocket of the grave coat the will was found. The careful citizen had put it there for safe keeping.—Chicago Times.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science has made a gift of $2,350 to the Toronto university for the encouragement of the study of physics.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. L. Flanders & Co's Drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

It is again announced that the Dominion Government contemplates dissolving Parliament and appealing to the constituencies on the question of unrestricted reciprocity.

New York also suffers from the flea pest. The uptown private dwellings and apartment houses are overrun by the noxious insects, just as they were a year ago.

QUIET WAYS ARE BEST.

What's the use of worrying,
Of hurrying
And scurrying,
Everybody flurrying,
And breaking up their rest?
When every one is teaching us,
Preaching and beseeching us,
To settle down and end the fuss,
For quiet ways are best.
The rain that trickles down in showers
A blessing brings to thirsty flowers;
Sweet fragrance from each brimming cup
The gentle zephyrs gather up.

There's ruin in the tempest's path;
There's ruin in a voice of wrath;
And they alone are blest
Who early learn to dominate
Themselves, their violence abate,
And prove, by their serene estate,
That quiet ways are best.

Nothing's gained by worrying,
By hurrying
And scurrying,
With fretting and with flurrying
The temper's often lost;
And in pursuit of some small prize
We rush ahead and are not wise,
And find the unwonted exercise
A fearful price has cost.

'Tis better far to join the throng
That do their duty right along;
Reluctant they to raise a fuss,
Or make themselves ridiculous.
Calm and serene in heart and nerve,
Their strength is always in reserve
And nobly stands each test;
And every day and all about,
By scenes within and scenes without,
We can discern, with ne'er a doubt,
That quiet ways are best.

—Evangelist.

A Few Suggestions About Shoes.

Never try to wear a shoe that is too small for you, nor one that is not a good fit for your foot. By good fit is meant one that fits sufficiently snug not to wrinkle, nor to allow your foot to slip around in the shoe, yet loose enough to allow plenty of ease and comfort, with square toes, low, broad heels, and particularly from three-quarters to one inch longer than you could wear if you allowed your big toe to go to the end of the shoe.

A long shoe gives a more graceful effect to the foot, is more comfortable and lasts longer. Be careful not to run your shoes over at the heel or sides; this is the result of carelessness, and in many people really amounts to a deformity, besides quickly ruining a shoe. Never let shoes get hard or dry by drying them by the fire, which dries and injures them badly; dry them gradually, and if quite wet rub on a little bit of castor oil or tallow before drying, as the steam generated in a wet boot or shoe will scald it and cause it to crack.

Occasionally wash off the old dry blacking, applying a little castor oil. Do not put on a thick, heavy coat. When polishing shoes a gentle brushing with a soft brush is better for the shoes than the vigorous work of the bootblack. Never put on or handle a patent leather when it is cold; always warm it thoroughly before bending the leather; if put on when warm, and in a warm room, a patent leather shoe may be worn out in the cold without injury. Do not wear rubbers over a nice, new pair of shoes, as they spoil the leather. Keep an older pair to wear under rubbers when possible; always take your rubbers off when entering the house.—Good Housekeeping.

Railroad Etiquette.

A peculiar sort of politeness toward women is frequently seen in street and elevated cars. A man will keep his seat for blocks while a woman hangs by a strap; then he will rise and, lifting his hat, motion her to the seat as if he were a very gallant gentleman indeed. At the next corner or station he leaves the car. One of these men fell into a trap the other day. He was in a bridge car, and all the way over a woman stood directly in front of him. As the train slid down the grade into the New York station he got up, touched his hat, and pointed toward the seat he had left vacant. When the woman, instead of thanking him as he had been thanked before for giving up what he had no further use for, stared coldly and walked toward the door, while the other occupants of the car laughed at his discomfiture, he suddenly realized the mistake he had made through absent mindedness and rushed for the platform completely put to rout.—New York Times.

Dietetic Value of Fishballs.

The fried fishballs or the brown bread and baked beans of New England are found to contain nearly the right proportions of nutrients required to maintain an adult workman in proper condition, according to Voit's standard. The pease porridge, seasoned with savory herbs, in which a little bit of pork is stewed, is also consistent with that standard, as are the hog and hominy of the southern negro, in the proportions in which it is served—one peck of meal to three and one-half pounds of bacon for a week's supply.—New York Grocer.

Her Choice in Veils.

Helen—Dear old guardian, you are mistaken. I am going to take—the—veil.

Helen (demurely)—But, please, my veil will have orange blossoms on it.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Didn't Want Any Interference.

Cumso—Though your affairs are in a tangle your guardian angel still has an eye on them.

Banks—Well, I'd be much obliged if my guardian angel would mind her own business.—Chatter.

Teacher (holding up a palm leaf to try to get scholar to use "fan" as a verb)—What do people do with this?

Fifty Spasms a Day.

Had Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., lived two thousand years ago she would have been thought to be possessed by evil spirits. She was subject to nervous prostration, headaches, dizziness, backache, palpitation and forty to fifty spasms a day. Though having been treated by eight physicians for years without success, she was permanently cured by one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. A trial bottle of this new and wonderful medicine and a finely illustrated treatise free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

That robust protectionist speech of Senator Moody the other day will considerably disconcert those individuals who have professed to see strong signs of a "tariff reform" sentiment in the Dakotas.

COLD SUMMER 'WAY BACK.

The Oldest Inhabitant Outdone by a Member of the Ananias Club.

"If I don't miss my guess very much we will have snow before morning," exclaimed Patrolman Josh Spears.

"If you remember, the winter of 1762-63 was a very open one. In fact, if I remember rightly, there was but little weather too chilly for a man to go in his shirt sleeves. Why, I was running around then barefoot, quite a chunk of a lad. It was in many respects a most remarkable winter. For instance, we cut hay on the 1st of January. Well, the winter went away and spring happened along. It was just like any other spring; but an old Indian chief who lived near our house in Brown county said that before the year was done the winter would make up for lost time. We didn't pay much attention to the warning, laughing it away as an idle jest, and soon it dropped out of mind entirely. The 23d day of August, 1763, was the hottest day I ever knew. The sun raised blisters on the street pavements, and wells a thousand feet deep went dry. It was not safe for any person to be where the sun could get a good square lick at him. If he did he would shrink up and die right there. About 7 o'clock in the evening a light breeze came up, and the people ventured out. In the western sky there was just such a cloud as I pointed out to you a few minutes ago. We didn't know what it meant then, but we found out later on. By 8 o'clock that evening the atmosphere was cool and pleasant, and every one went to bed to catch a little sleep, for the intense heat of the previous nights had driven sleep from our eyes. In the morning there was six feet of snow all over the town. Every bit of running water was now frozen, wells and cisterns were frozen solid, all grain and vegetable life were killed, and flowers withered before the snow like bananas before my friend Hart. Several houses where the windows had been left opened were half filled with snow. It was a cracking cold morning, the mercury was 60 degs. below zero and it seemed to be growing chillier every minute.

"About 11 o'clock a high wind came up, and the snow was piled in drifts about the city. It was banked up against the Lutheran church to a height of 70 feet. As if that was not enough, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the snow commenced falling again. It did not come down like plain, every day winter snow. There were no flakes, but spheres about the size of base balls. They were as hard as chilled steel until they struck the earth, and then they burst, not because of the hardness of the ground alone—though it was frozen so hard that it could not be broken with dynamite cartridges—but there was a peculiar atmospheric condition that was heightened when the snowball came in contact with the earth, and this brought about the bursting I mentioned previously. There was not the least bit of noise attendant on the bursting—or, I might say, by a violent attack on the English language that the explosion was perfectly noiseless. But a thousand different colors darted and dashed from the fragments. It was the most wonderful pyrotechnic display I ever witnessed. It was broad daylight, too. The result of this strange unnatural shower of snowballs was that over fifty feet of snow was piled upon that city"——

"Where—where were the people?" asked Sergt. Joyce in a voice faint from suppressed emotion.

"Dead. Every one of them dead. In that city of 25,000 souls not a single person escaped. They were smothered by the snow or killed by the pellets that came from the clouds. No living thing, not even a dog, escaped, and when the glad sunshine came out again and melted the snow, the raging waters washed the buildings from the face of the earth, and to this day not a sign can be found of the once beautiful and enterprising city."

At this moment a commotion occurred at the front door, Sergt. John Lowe rushed breathlessly into the room with the intelligence that a man had been frozen to death on Blake street, near Indiana avenue, and the club filed out to capture the body before it could get away.—Indianapolis News.

Circus Men Smoke Good Cigars.

I shall probably sell a box of imported cigars the day Forepaugh's circus strikes Lewiston. Forepaugh's and Barnum's men always smoke the best imported cigar they can get when in this city. Two for sixty cents always hits 'em. In the winter, when there are plenty of theatres and operas in the city, we always have a big trade on imported goods with star actors and singers. The Key West trade has been picking up very fast lately. The local trade in these goods is way ahead of the imported business. Key West goods run all the way from $60 to $100 a thousand.—Interview in Lewiston Journal.

Electricity as a Purifier.

It has been discovered that a current of electricity passed through impure water restores it to purity by destroying any living germs with which it may be impregnated. Animalculæ which escape the eye, and which almost elude the microscope, cannot escape the all searching power of the electric flash.—Exchange.

Watered Stocks.

"You seem to be very fond of soup, Mr. Skiparlor," remarked the landlady, as he asked for a second help.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists. Sample bottle free.

The somewhat stately Mr Vaux is regarded more in the light of an interesting relic than as a live factor by the hustling Democrats of the third Pennsylvania District, and it is thought to be practically settled that he will be succeeded in the next House by Mr. William McAleer.

As physicians claim that brain work is twice as exhausting as that of the muscles, if the eight-hour rule for manual labor is enforced, brain workers will be entitled to claim a reduction to four hours.

The Short Lived Humorist.

So scarce is the funny man that you must seek for him when you want him. He is not nearly so numerous as his reputation. He loves life and light and warmth, and is so vivacious in his mere enjoyment of life that possibly he sometimes multiplies himself to one's irritated imagination, as one light winged, restless fly, child of the summer, seems to be a hundred or a thousand to the wise man, bent upon improving his mind and tempting eternity by reading the "Encyclopædia Britannica." The "end man" is a May fly, living in the sunshine for one happy day and then forgotten. In a semi-critical paper a few months since Mr. Lukens mentions by name about 250 American humorists who have made merry with their friends during the past 200 years. It is a pathetic record of strangers. Read it, and underline the names which have a familiar sound to your ears.

Blot out the names you cannot remember to have read or heard before, and if you are under 40 years of age the condensation of the paper will startle you. The people have not been led into the wilderness of frivolity by the end man. Sometimes the funny man, in a moment of madness, consents to lecture two nights in succession. The second lecture is almost invariably a dismal failure. "One consecutive night" is the limit of the funny man's course. But people do like to be amused a little, and so the end man is usually put on. Frequently he is informed—and the unconscious seriousness of the committeeman who so informs him is funnier than anything in the lecture—that "we have had the very best lecturers in the country on our course this winter, the strongest minds and the greatest thinkers in America, and now our people want a little change."—Robert J. Burdette in Forum.

His Wife Became a Beggar.

A Ragusan, returning home from the United States after twenty years' absence, was accosted on landing by a beggar woman, who asked him for alms. They recognized each other simultaneously. She was his wife! A remarkable tale of villainy was at once unfolded. The husband had prospered in America, and from the first had sent home fifty florins a month for the use of his wife. As his position improved he increased the amount until it reached 200 florins monthly. But the priest had never given the poor woman more than five florins, and after fifteen years of constant embezzlement he had forged certificates of the deaths of both husband and wife, sending that of the latter to the former and vice versa, and then retiring from the scene. The husband married a rich American lady, with whom he returned to Europe. The wife became dependent on charity. Hence the romantic meeting.—London Tit-Bits.

Price of Onyx Slabs.

Onyx is worth in the rough from $3 to $15 per cubic foot. The price is not steady, as it depends on the demand and the length and shape of the block got out as well as the appearance of the onyx. The market for onyx is something like the market for meerschaum, only less regular. A man who buys a block of onyx takes it to some extent on speculation. He does not know how it will saw and polish. There may be cracks inside of it which he does not see, and the grain and streaks on the outside may not be carried through.

The onyx in its rough state looks like other stalactites and stalagmites, though it might be taken for marble by any one not in the business. It is worked much as marble is, by sawing and polishing, except that more care has to be exercised and that the polishing is more difficult. When it is worked up it will sell for $1 to $5 a square foot, according to its appearance and size.—New York Sun.

A Wandering Locomotive.

A locomotive of the Consolidated road, which was housed safely in the roundhouse at Bridgeport, Conn., one night, had a surprising attack of somnambulism before dawn. When no one was in or near it it started out of the roundhouse and came to a short and undignified halt in the turntable pit. In some way the steam was forced through the whistle so that it was impossible to shut it off, and the stranded engine gave a shriek of distress which lasted an hour and made every one in the town alive to its predicament.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Ex-Emperor's Joke.

A bon mot, to which fate has since added an ironical comment, has been attributed to the ex-emperor of Brazil. On being shown one of those mechanical wonders which always interested him more than the cares of government, a wheel that made we know not how many revolutions in the minute, "Why," said the monarch, "it actually beats our South American republics."—Spectator.

Preserving Milk.

The latest idea for the preservation of milk has been made the subject of a patent. The air in a receiving vessel is purified, and then the milk is drawn directly from the cow into the vessel in such a way as to prevent the atmospheric air from coming in contact with the milk.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Arkansas Democrats are still at their work of fraudulent counting. The Union Labor candidates received 1597 majority in Crittenden county, but after holding back the returns for ten days the Democratic canvassers have thrown out enough votes to give the offices to the Democrats.

What Stronger Facts and Figures

RECOMMENDATION can a medicine have than the testimony of those whom it has cured? One such case is worth columns of puffery. We would request all who are afflicted with Blood Diseases to read the following:—

SALT-RHEUM.—Mrs. T. P. Cushing, 87 Suffolk st., Chelsea, Mass., writes: "For a long time I was troubled with salt-rheum. My hands would crack open, bleed, and itch terribly, causing great suffering. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, but received no benefit, until I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, four bottles of which cured me."

CANKER.—Mrs. W. Gaige, Poultney, Vt., says: "I have suffered much from canker humors. At times, I was unable to eat or swallow solid food. Last spring I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and quickly found relief. After taking two bottles of this medicine I was cured."

RHEUMATISM.—E. F. Harris, Buckland, Mass., certifies: "Eight years ago I had so severe an attack of rheumatism that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried many remedies, but received no relief until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which restored me to health."

CATARRH.—Seth Schreiver, Sag Harbor, N. Y., testifies: "My daughter suffered for years from an obstinate and offensive catarrh. Having heard Ayer's Sarsaparilla highly recommended, I resolved to try it. Before my daughter finished ten bottles she was entirely cured."

ERYSIPELAS.—Rev. S. J. Graham, Buckhannon, W. Va., writes: "Having been afflicted with erysipelas for nearly twenty years, I was at last induced by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I procured a bottle, which gave me relief before I had used half of it. I took three bottles, and have had no indication or symptom of the disease since."

BLEEDING PILES.—My wife has been more or less troubled with bleeding piles for thirty years. She tried many doctors and remedies, but obtained no relief until she began to take which effected a cure."—A. C. Deats, Sheshequin, Pa.

Made by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"I always recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla because I believe it to be the best blood-purifier in the market."—Joseph Myer, Jr., Elmira.

West Virginia.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is very popular here."—J. H. Purdy, Cameron.

Massachusetts.—"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla ever since it was first placed upon the market, and have yet to learn of a case where it has failed to give satisfaction."—F. & E. Bailey & Co., Druggists, Lowell.

New Jersey.—"We keep other kinds, but find Ayer's Sarsaparilla does more good."—Mullens & Son, Gloucester.

Virginia.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is very popular here."—Robert Lecky, Druggist, 724 Brook av., Richmond.

Texas.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is in greater demand here than any other similar preparation."—N. W. Lewis, Druggist, Manor.

North Carolina.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla sells better than any preparation of the kind, and gives better satisfaction."—R. J. Mitchell & Son, Oxford.

Ohio.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla sells better than all other blood-purifiers put together."—T. H. Armstrong, M. D. and Druggist, Powhatan.

Wisconsin.—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives better satisfaction than any other."—V. Bardouski, Druggist, Milwaukee.

Florida.—"We can safely say that during the past ten years we have sold more of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, than of all others put together."—J. Otto & Son, Key West.

Woman's Column.

Woman Suffrage in Mississippi.

In the Constitutional Convention now in session at Jackson, Miss., Delegate John W. Fewell, on August 21, offered a resolution as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that it is a condition necessary to the solution of the franchise problem that the right to vote shall be secured by proper constitutional enactment to every woman who shall have resided in this State six months and who shall be 21 years of age or upward, and who shall own or whose husband, if she have a husband, shall own real estate situated in this State of the clear value of $200 over and above all encumbrances. The vote of every woman voting in any election shall be cast by some male elector, who shall be thereunto authorized in writing by such woman so entitled to vote, such constitutional enactment not to be framed so as to grant to women the right to hold office.

Under the rules, the resolution shoud have gone to the committee on elective franchise, but by unanimous consent Mr. Fewell was allowed to take the floor in support of his resolution. He made the most of his opportunity, and in a twenty-minutes' speech made a deep impression on his hearers. He urged that a special committee be appointed to report upon the question, but the committee on elective franchise regarded such a reference, with the instruction suggested, as infringing upon their prerogative, and after two hours' discussion Mr. Fewell struck out the objectionable clause of his resolution, and had it referred in the usual way.

Delegate Hudson of Yazoo, also offered an amendment providing for woman suffrage with a property and educational qualification, and with the Australian ballot system. The Associated Press despatches say: "The woman suffrage idea is growing in favor among the best minds of the convention."

Since the admission of Wyoming, nothing so important to the suffrage cause has occurred as this action of the Mississippi Convention. The question is very new in Mississippi. It is not surprising, therefore, that limitations are suggested that would not be thought of here. The great fact is the proposal that the women be allowed to vote.

No distinction is to be made against colored women, since "every woman," black or white, who has $200, etc., may vote. For the great boon of citizenship, both colored and white women will strive to accumulate property.

We know that many Southern women have earnestly desired the suffrage. Now is their opportunity to second the effort to secure it to them by showing their ready approval of this proposition of the convention.

Let us hope that Mississippi will follow Wyoming and lead all the other States in securing for its women the right to vote. LUCY STONE.

Why continue the use of irritating powders, snuffs, or liquids Ely's Cream Balm, pleasant of application and a sure cure for catarrh and cold in head, can be had for 50c. It is easily applied into the nostrils, is safe and pleasant, and is curing the most obstinate cases. It gives relief at once.

The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for catarrh, colds in the head and hay fever. It is not a liquid or a snuff, but is easily applied into the nostrils. It gives relief at once.

A Russian officer in command of a company of athletes numbering 67 men ordered them to swim across the Volga in a place where the river is over one and a half verst wide, with two officers at the head and one in the rear. The whole company acquitted themselves creditably. The feat was performed toward the evening. When the swimmers had made about a third of the distance a steamer was noticed coming on them at full speed. The officer at the head of the company ordered "halt, with faces upward!" and was obeyed as promptly as if on the parade grounds. The company waited until the steamer passed, and then proceeded until they reached the opposite shore. Their swim backward was performed without interruption.

Miss De Simper—"I want to buy a diamond necklace." Jeweller—"Something worth about $1500?" "O my! I am an actress, and want something positively stunning." "I see. Here is one with 15 4-carat stones. I can sell you that for $13.

Literary Notices.

THE COTTAGE HEARTH for October contains many things in prose, poetry and pictures that will please and instruct its army of intelligent readers. Among them are stories and sketches and brief biographies that are very entertaining, while the domestic, fashion and special departments contain a great deal of valuable information for the ladies. We give THE WOBURN JOURNAL ($2 a year) and THE COTTAGE HEARTH ($1.50 a year) for $2 paid in ADVANCE, without exception.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for October is on our table. The steel engraving Before the Battle is a very handsome picture presenting the portraits of Miuna Irving, the popular poetess, and her soldier husband. The fashion-plate and illustrations, present some new and effective fall styles. The needlework designs are varied and effective. The literary part of the number is excellent, and can only be equalled by the highest priced periodicals. The opening story One October Morning is well illustrated and well written. "Imprisoned Rainbows" by Louisa Jamison closes a series of interesting articles on precious stones. The Watch of the Big Heart Lode by M. G. McClelland is one of the best stories we have ever read in a long while, and Three Warnings by Lucy H. Hooper will facinate every lover of the supernatural. Things Worth Knowing and the household department are brim full of interesting and useful matter. This favorite magazine always grows better and better. Terms, Two dollars a year. Addrsss, PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

W. Clark Russell, famous for his delightful sea-stories, and author of The Wreck of the Grosvenor, Marooned, etc., contributes the complete novel to the October number of LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE. The story is entitled A Marriage at Sea, and is a tale of love and adventure upon the deep. It is impregnated with that buoyant air and sea-flavor which lend a peculiar charm to Mr. Russell's stories, and makes them as refreshing to the mind as is a dip in the ocean to the body. Clean, healthful, invigorating, Clark Russell's stories are the best antidote to the morbid novels which are at present inundating the market. Tartuffe in Ebony is an entertaining sketch by a young Southern writer, Jeanie Drake. A New England professor and an admirer of the Southern darky from afar goes South and engages what is technically known as colored help. The manner in which the trusting professor is imposed upon by a dark-hued Tartuffe is very amusingly described. Rose Elizabeth Cleveland contributes an article entitled My Florida. She tells of the southern section of Florida, which she has frequently visited, and gives a great deal of practical and useful information regarding the best time for going to Florida and the mode of life and precautions that should be observed during a visit. Some of the other articles are: Electric Lighting, Round-Robin Talks, The Public and Stage, etc.

After the spirited ballad of Piping Jean which opens the October WIDE AWAKE, the reader comes upon a good foot-ball story entitled John MacGregor's Lesson; while this story describes a foot-ball game between this school and Philips Academy at Andover, the chapters of The New Senior at Andover, chronicle a base-ball contest between the same two schools; the first story is illustrated from life photographs of a typical team of each school. Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford is at her best in the war-story One Good Turn. An Adirondack Camp is a breezy chronicle of a particularly jolly time had by some particularly jolly young people. Jack and Æsop's Jackdaw is one of the brightest of the School and Playground series of stories, while The Scarlet Specter of Sandy Ridge is perhaps the strongest yet of Miss McLeod's Acadian Old-Folk Lore tales Brer Lizard's Coats is a quaint bit of story. Alexander Black's Camera Club has seven fine photographs by amateurs. A Quilt Expedition brings back to notice an old-time species of sewing-work, and gives twenty-four popular counterpane designs. A Story of 1812, Part I, is a true story of Commodore Perry. Margaret-Patty Letters, Puk-Wudjie tale of Father Maple's War-Paint, Jack Weatherwax, Hero, Pets of the Treasury, Letter-Writing for Young Folks, and Mrs. Sallie Joy White's article upon Insurance and Advertising agencies as business openings for women, together with the Men and Things department, complete the prose of the number. The poems are by Graham R. Tomson, Mrs. Whiton-Stone, Kate Putnam Osgood, and Mary E. Wilkins. WIDE AWAKE is $2.40 year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

Buried the Cheese.

In the suburbs of Boston lives a merchant who is something of an epicure, and not infrequently he brings home with him from the city on his return from business some tid-bit or other. Not long since he found some particularly choice Roquefort cheese, and the day being Saturday he took a piece home with him for his Sunday dinner.

Arrived at the station he was met by his man with the buggy, and in driving home he put the bundle on the bottom of the carriage, where it lay forgotten until the next day. At dinner he remembered the delicacy, and sending for Patrick, he asked what he had done with the package of cheese which he left on the bottom of the buggy.

"Was that chase, sor?" responded Patrick, in evident surprise.

"Yes, of course it was cheese. What did you do with it?"

"Well, upen me soul, sor, it never intered me comprehension that it was chase. It smelled that powerful, sor, and I wint and buried it, manin' no harm."—Boston Courier.

A strange bird that came from the swamps of lower South Carolina is mentioned by the Charleston News and Courier. "Roughly described it is about the size of a hen, but with wings about twice the length. The wings present a handsome plumage of yellow and black, with small polka dots over the feathers. The feet are like those of an eagle, with long, sharp claws. The most remarkable thing about the bird is its head, which has the remarkable shape of a heart, and is covered with white feathers. The bill is shaped like that of a human nose, so that the head, with the almond-shaped eyes, looks more like the face of a human being than of a bird."

Doleful reports are received from Dakota. A dispatch, dated Ellendale, N. D., Sept. 8, says: "This country has reached a point where it cannot invite immigration, cannot retain what settlers it has, and must become hopelessly bankrupt unless a system of irrigation be adopted or some means be found to insure crops or give the people profitable employment. Charity was accepted in special cases last winter; it will have to be bestowed much more generally next winter." But very little rain has fallen during the last two years, and thousands of farmers have been ruined. They are getting out of the State as fast as possible.

We do not know that Saturday was a particularly brisk day for Democratic declinations, but the papers contained letters from no less than three eminent Massachusetts Democrats declining nominations to Congress in as many different districts. Such a rush of declinations does not bespeak a great deal of confidence in the result. It is not a Democratic failing to decline nominations that are likely to lead up to elections.

Out on the other side of the Rocky Mountains the Democratic papers are busily explaining that the result in the First Maine District was all due to the Kittery Navy Yard. But just how the employment of 450 men at Kittery, only half of them residents in Maine, could by any hook or crook increase Tom Reed's majority two thousand, the Democratic organs have not yet made clear, nor do we think that they are likely to.

An Irishman of Company D, Third Maine, was eloquently describing the first battle of Bull Run, in which he had been one of the promptest participants. A member of the Seventeenth Maine asked Pat, "Did you run?" "Faith, and I did," replied Pat, "and the fellers that didn't are there yit!"

"My object in calling this evening," he began, with a nervous tremble of his chin, "was to ask you, Katie—I may call you Katie, may I not?" "Certainly, Mr. Longripe," said the sweet young girl. "All of papa's elderly friends call me Katie." And he said nothing further about his object in calling.

Ex-Gov. Bullock of Georgia, who has been visiting New York, repeats his confident prediction that the tariff issue can dissolve the solid South. "The only question," he says, "that keeps the Democrats together is the negro. If the negro could only be eliminated from politics the Democratic party South would break like ropes of sand, because the protection feeling is strong and growing."

The Woburn Journal

A FAIR COLUMBUS.

It was "steamer day" at Nassau. If Nassau, like most other civilized places in the Nineteenth century, had telegraph or even daily mail communication with the rest of the world, "steamer day" would not mean so much as it now does to its inhabitants and visitors.

The passengers land. Waiting friends rush forth to greet some; others walk through a row of curious faces on either side and up toward the hotel. Small darkyes rush around and besiege them with all manner of requests—"Carry your bag, boss?" "Drive for you, boss?" "Does you want a boy, lady?"

By noon the excitement had moderated, and we strolled down to the wharf and pitched silver coins into the clear water thirty feet deep to see small negroes dive and bring them from the white sand bottom, where they lay clearly visible. I strolled away from my companions, and passing several small schooners laden with sponges lying along the wharf, each with two or three ragged children, a negro or two, and perhaps a sallow faced, scrawny white man lounging or chewing sugar cane, I came to one cleaner looking than the rest. She was built, as are all the Bahama schooners, with fine clipper bows, a rounded stern and small masts and spars. She was neatly painted, and on her stern were the words "Lillian," with her home port, "Watlings Island."

As I stood looking at her suddenly a young woman came up the companion way and said, "Good day." "Good day," I answered. "You've come some distance, have you not?" "Yes," she replied, "from the furtherest of the 'out islands.' I suppose you're from New York?" To my affirmative reply she to my surprise said: "And how was Irvings' Faust? I should so dearly love to see Ellen Terry as Marguerite."

After a moment's pause, during which time I vainly sought to fathom in my mind how a woman on a Bahama island schooner could have followed New York theatricals so closely, I gave her my unbiased opinion of the matter. She was then silent, and I meanwhile had an opportunity to study this Bahama curiosity. She was about 26 years old, and was neatly dressed in an inexpensive light material. Her luxuriant hair, of a dark brown color, was tastefully arranged, and she wore a large brimmed, but not unbecoming, straw hat, which had evidently seen better days.

Although much burned I could see her skin was fair and her hands delicately formed. Her expression was one of demure sadness, and after my study I came to the conclusion that she was more than an ordinarily handsome woman. I decided to linger and continue the conversation. "May I come aboard?" I ventured to say. "Certainly," was the reply. "John's gone out to the steamer and I'm keeping watch for him. I should be glad to have you tell me the news. We get little except when we come to Nassau."

"Who is John?" I wondered, "and how much news can people get who only rely on Nassau for it?"

I stepped on board, however, and my fair hostess excusing herself for a moment stepped down into the cabin and returned a moment after with two small chairs, which she placed under a small awning that shaded half the cockpit. She motioned for me to be seated, and I obeyed. There was silence for a moment after we sat down, and then my hostess said, speaking very slowly and with evident effort: "You must think it very strange that I spoke to you and have allowed you to talk to me, but I saw you were a gentleman, and I do grow so lonely and so anxious to see and talk with some one from the great world now and then. The ladies up at the hotel, if I go up there, I do not know, and I suppose I seem queer to them, for they look askance at me, and I haven't the courage to speak to them. John is always so busy when we're here, and besides John doesn't seem to care for anything but sponges and salt and wrecks.

"Sponges and salt and wrecks?" I asked myself. "What manner of man may John be?"

"Yes," continued my hostess, "it's very lonely on Watlings. You see there are only 675 people on the whole island, and of these only about 300 are white, while I don't suppose there are 40 I know. We're 180 miles from Nassau, and although I'm always teasing John to bring me over here, he won't come but three times a year unless there's a wreck."

"A wreck?" I asked.

"Yes," she went on nonchalantly. "We don't have much luck nowadays. We haven't had a good wreck since the big Spanish steamer went on Eleuthera three years ago." The situation dawned. My fair friend was the wife, daughter or sister of a Bahama wrecker—perhaps a pirate.

"What's the matter? You seemed disturbed."

I murmured in a rambling way something about wrecking being a pleasant occupation.

"Oh, I see," and she laughed, and a wonderfully musical laugh it was, too. "You are shocked at John being a wrecker. Why, you wreck railroads in the north, don't you, and sometimes banks, I've heard? John doesn't really wreck ships. He merely helps to strip them when they are wrecked."

I felt relieved, but dire memories of childhood tales, of false lights and murdered crews would come in my mind. "And who is John?" I asked.

"Ah, John is the dearest, sweetest, noblest fellow living—that's John. I'm sure you'd like him."

I tried again: "Were you born on Watlings?"

"Oh, dear, no. I was wrecked there. Wasn't it romantic to be wrecked on the island Columbus first landed on?"

I mildly remarked that I had been taught Columbus first landed on San Salvador or Cat Island.

"Oh, my, no. You're all wrong. It's been proved he first came ashore at Watlings. Why, I often, on fine mornings, get John to drive me over to the southeastern point of the island, where it is thought he came ashore. There's the loveliest white beach there, and the broad blue ocean stretches out and away before you as you look eastward. I make John go away, for John isn't romantic, you know, and then I sit down and close my eyes and think intently for a moment. Then I open them and I see the queer old fashioned ships with their worn sails, their high sterns and the royal banners waving, tossing at anchor beyond the reef; I see the line of boats with flashing oars advancing; I see the dusky Indian forms standing at the edge of the wood, and just above where the surf breaks on the beach I see the old mariner kneel under the banner of Spain, his sword uplifted and his eyes raised to heaven. Oh, it's a glorious picture, and I never tire of calling it forth. Life on Watlings, you see, has its compensations."

As the woman told this story she unconsciously acted it out, rose from her chair, and with flaming eyes and cheeks a new and fair Columbus led a fancied band. I had grown deeply interested, and I determined to know her history. "Tell me about yourself," I said, "and how it comes that you, with your evident education and accomplishments, choose to live on a place so remote and lonely as Watlings Island."

She blushed a little, was silent a moment, and then in a low voice said: "Well, I don't mind telling you. It's not a long story. I see I've given you a wrong impression, for although it is lonely at times, I'm really very happy, and I wouldn't change places with any woman. I am an English woman, and I was born near London. My father was a civil engineer in good circumstances, and with a twin sister I had every possible advantage of education. My mother died when I was about 15, and as we had no near relatives we were much with our father. We were near enough to London to run in at evening to the theatres and the opera; we read much, sang and played a good deal, and rode continually.

"Ten years ago last autumn my father met with a sudden business reverse. He was offered a remunerative post in California, and decided to go there. A ship belonging to a friend of his was just about to sail for the isthmus. We were offered passage on her at a low rate, and in three days' time found ourselves at sea. I needn't tell you of the voyage. It was all new and strange to us of course, we two girls were the pets of the ship. I saw with relief my father, who had broken much under his losses, improve in health and spirits, and as we neared the tropics the glowing sunset skies were emblematic of our hopes of life in the new world.

"We had been out some thirty days when one afternoon, as the sun set in a dark bank of clouds and the air was close and sultry, I noticed the captain looked anxious, and heard him say something about the Bahama reefs to the mate.

"That night a hurricane struck us, and for hours we were in what seemed a dull gray cavern of water and sky. The ship plunged madly before the gale, and with our father we sat in the cabin, clasped in each other's arms. The morning broke scarce less dark than the night. Suddenly the wind shifted and the ship righted and seemed to stand quivering like an over driven horse.

"A few minutes passed when, with a wild roar, the storm was on us once more, and we drove madly in another direction. There was a sudden crash, my father sprang, half dragging us, toward the companion way; I saw a huge wall of water rolling down upon us—it fell and all grew dark. I remember a sensation of sinking, of being whirled around, a dull, booming noise in my ears, and I opened my eyes to find myself lying on a sandy beach, two rough men looking down on me, while a third and younger one, kneeling beside me, was chaffing my hands. Frightened, but too weak to scream, I feebly said, "Where am I?"

"'On Wattings island, miss,' said the young man.

"'Yes,' said one of the older men, 'and a narrow squeak you had for it, too. If I hadn't thought it was mighty queer seaweed washing in over you reef, you wouldn't have been talking now.'

"'Where's my father?' I said.

"'With all the rest,' was the reply. 'Hush!' said the younger man, 'see how weak she is? Then I fainted.

"I woke to find myself on a rude cot in a small cottage, tended by a negress who only spoke a Spanish patois. The wreckers, for such they were, had carried me there. The sun was shining brightly and the storm was over.

"Days passed, and when I could go about I learned that I had been the only one saved of the entire bark's crew. The wave that had engulfed her and drowned all but myself had washed me over the coral reef on which the bark had struck. The wreckers on the shore had seen me, and daring the waves, high even between the reef and the shore, had rowed out and rescued me just as I was sinking.

"Utterly crushed as I was I did not at first realize my position. I was told I could go to Nassau on a schooner in about a month, but I felt no inclination to do aught but to stay where fate had thrown me. The young wrecker was very kind to me. Every day he patroled the beach in search of the bodies of my father and sister.

"At last one day they came ashore. He told me of it, but said I mustn't see them. I wondered then why, but learned afterward that the sharks had mutilated them. They were buried in a little lonely cemetery, and the next year, when the bishop of Nassau came in his yacht on his annual visitation, he read the burial service over them. Meanwhile I grew well and strong in the soft, warm air and under the tropic skies. I learned to like the half wild life, and the few white people and all the negros half worshipped me.

"One day a schooner brought some papers and I read our bark had been given up as lost and my name was among those drowned. These papers recalled me to myself, and I determined I would go to Nassau, and, if I could, thence to England. I told the young wrecker, who had become my firm friend and companion, and whom I had taught to read, of my decision. 'Well, miss,' he said, 'if you feel it so I suppose you're right, but I hate to think of losing you.' This and his evident sorrow touched me and made me think whether in the world to which I was returning I would find such a simple, loyal devotion as had here been mine.

"When the day came for my departure all the inhabitants turned out to bid me farewell. A queen could not have had a more loyal leave taking than the 'English miss,' as they called me. The young wrecker went with me. He said he had business in Nassau.

"That night—a night so soft and sweet it seemed as if storms had never brooded there, the Southern Cross blazing low on the horizon—the wrecker came to where I sat on the deck of the little schooner. 'Miss,' he said, 'I'm nothing but a "Conch," a poor, ignorant Bahama native, but I cant bear to have you go away. We all love you, and I more than all. I must tell you. You know our life is poor and rude, that we are far away from the world, but if you won't blame me for even daring to hope, miss, you know I have the handsomest schooner of the Watlings fleet and the best cottage on the island. I'm sure I'd do my best to make you forget your troubles, miss, and the sponge fishing is better, miss, and there's a good many Wrecks yet, miss—and I love you, miss.'"

Here she stopped, ckecked herself and blushed.

Of course you spoke kindly to him," I said, "and told him you were sorry, but he mustn't speak again"—

"Of course I didn't. You're like all men. What's the name of this schooner?"

"Lillian," I replied, wonderingly.

"Well, that's my name, and here," as a tall, broad shouldered, roughly dressed young man appeared on the wharf, a bunch of roses in his hand, and eyed me curiously, "here's my wrecker and his name is John."—James B. Townsend in Journalist.

DID YOU EVER

of your favorite baking powder to see if all the ingredients are published?

Ammonia, a substance injurious to health, is an adulterant of some high-priced baking powders advertised and generally believed to be "absolutely pure." Cheap, prize, and gift powders contain alum, terra alba, &c., as well as ammonia.

Housekeepers who desire pure and wholesome food should refuse to buy ANY baking powder, no matter what its reputation, unless all the ingredients are frankly made known.

For many years all the ingredients used in Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder have been published on every label, and the analysis as stated is verified by Official Reports, the highest testimony in the land.

The Big Desert Can Be Reclaimed.

M. J. Dybowski ridicules the popular notion that the Sahara consists largely of shifting sands and contends that this hot region might be colonized and utilized for agricultural purposes. All that it needs is water; and the main drift of M. Dybowski's communication is to show how abundant this is at small depths below the surface. In many parts palms, when once planted, can reach it with their roots. In others very shallow artesian wells suffice, and the water flows continuously. He advocates a system of irrigation from artesian wells, and, as a proof of the abundance of water, mentions one such well that yields over a thousand gallons per minute. When once palms are established the whole aspect is changed by rich vegetation that grows around them.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at H. L. Flanders & Co. Drug-store.

Not many eastern people, unless they are acquainted with the forests of the Mississippi valley, and more especially those found on the higher Alleghany mountains, know what a really large hickory tree is. The shellbarks of southern Indiana are sometimes 150 feet tall, with trunks four or five feet in diameter, and bare of limbs for seventy or eighty feet, and even larger trees can be found in the still almost untouched forests of eastern Tennesee and western North Carolina. But those large trees are doomed, and before many years have passed every hickory tree of sufficient size and proper quality will have been sacrificed to supply the ever increasing demand for the wood.

They All Failed.

The following letter from Mr. W. A. Thomsom, of Columbus, Wis., is peculiarly interesting: "My wife," says he, "has been treated for her head, stomach and nervous prostration by three doctors in New York, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, one in Cincinnati, and at the large institute in Buffalo for 16 months. They all failed. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine helped her wonderfully." This should be used in all headaches, backaches, changes of life, nervous disturbances, fits, rheumatism, etc. Ask at Charles H. Buss drug store for a free trial bottle and Dr. Miles' new book on the Nerves and Heart.

"I think I shall go up in the Adirondacks this summer." "What do you expect to get there?" "In debt, mostly."

Why Crabs and Lobsters Are Red.

The shell of the crab and lobster owes its bluish gray color to the superposition of two pigments or coloring matters which have been isolated—a red pigment and a blue one. As long as these two pigments exist simultaneously the crustaceans remain gray. But the blue pigment is very fugitive, and sometimes under the influence of a disease it is destroyed, and crabs are found with portions of their shell more or less reddish. When the crustaceans are immersed in boiling water the blue pigment is entirely destroyed, and the red pigment, which is very stable, appears alone in all its brilliancy.

Forced To Leave Home.

Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call at their druggists for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicines. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggists to-day for a free sample of this grand remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large size packages 50 cents.

Pretty Little Capri Girls.

One of the prettiest sights I know is to meet a band of Capri girls, aged from 12 to 16, returning from their day's toil. Here they come with their skirts tucked up on one side, the red kerchief carelessly tied at the back of their shapely heads, from under which the dark, wavy hair escapes; cheeks flushed after hard work, eyes shining, tongues chattering. As they pass they look you straight in the face, smile merrily and wish you "Buona sera," with audible comments on your personal appearance. But they are not difficult to please, and as long as you have an agreeable expression the general verdict will be that you are "una bella signora."—Cornhill Magazine.

"Don't Care to Eat."

It is with the greatest confidence that Hood's Sarsaparilla is recommended for loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and similar troubles. This medicine gently tones the stomach, assists digestion, and makes one "real hungry." Persons in delicate health, after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a few days, find themselves longing for and eating the plainest food with unexpected relish.

A Regular Stamp Market.

There exists in Paris a regular market or exchange for old stamps. It is held every Sunday afternoon in the Avenue Gabriel, Bhamps Elysees, and is attended by some fifty or sixty persons of all ages and social standings. Among the number can be seen such famous collectors as M. Philippe de Ferrari son of the duchess of Galliera; the Baron Arthur de Rothschild, Dr. Legrand, Mr. Campbell, Mr. T. Tapling, Mr. Castle and M. Marco del Pont.

If Your Skin

Is rough, and pimpley or covered with blotches and sores, and you want a clean, smooth skin and fair complexion, use Sulphur Bitters. The best medicine in such cases I ever sold.—C. E. Scheffler & Co., Druggists, Lawrence, Mass.

The Author's Compensation.

The usual royalty paid to the author of any book, provided the publisher takes the risk and bears the expense of publication, is 10 per cent. of the retail price on each copy sold. Frequently the publisher is exempted from paying royalty on the first 1,000 copies. Some publishers have blank forms for contracts with authors, but contracts for publishing different books vary so widely that a general form cannot easily be made.

Many settlers in Big Bend country in Washington have been driven away by the ravages of squirrels, which swarm there in countless numbers.

Why Royal Baking Powder is the Best.

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the United States Government.

I will go still further and state that, because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the Purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

MAJOR GOULD WITHDRAWS.

Major J. Henry Gould, the Republican candidate for State Auditor, has withdrawn from the ticket, and the only wonder is that he ever sought the office.

It seems that away back prior to 1872 Major Gould was United States Collector of Internal Revenue at Savannah, Ga., and that he came out short to the extent of $50,000 to $75,000, for which indictments were found against him in the U. S. Courts of that State. He it is said fled farther South to escape arrest. His boudsmen were sued and judgment obtained against them for the amount of shortage.

A few days ago a full record of the Court proceedings in these cases against Gould and his surities was printed in circular form and widely distributed throughout this State. When presented to Gould and asked for an explanation by the Chairman of the Republican State Committee he admitted the facts, but claimed that he derived not a cent of benefit from the money illegally taken.

Gould has served since then several terms in the Massachusetts Legislature and why the story of his alleged crookedness has never before been made public is a mystery.

At the suggestion of the Chairman aforesaid Gould has withdrawn from the Republican State ticket.

CAPTAIN WYER FOR SENATOR

The Republican Senatorial Convention for the 5th Middlesex Districts was held at Ayer Junction last Wednesday with full delegations.

On the first (informal) ballot Captain Edwin F. Wyer of Woburn secured 27 votes, Foster of Tewsbury 7, scattering 2.

On motion, Capt. Edwin F. Wyer was made the unanimous choice of the convention.

The nominee was introduced to the convention and made an excellent speech of thanks which was applauded to the echo from opening to close.

Capt. Wyer will be elected Senator for the 5th Middlesex District by close on to 1000 majority.

THE OPPOSITION TO FOX.

Mr. Curtis Guild has come out in open revolt against candidate Fox and will doubtless support Sherman Hoar, the Democratic nominee. He made the announcement at the Fifth District Republican Congressional Committee meeting last week.

If Mr. Guild succeeds in drawing off more than one Republican vote from Mr. Fox it will be a surprise to everybody who knows him.

Fox hardly fills the bill of an ideal Congressional candidate but he will be elected high and dry. His solid footing with "the b'hoys" of the District will insure that.

THE TARIFF BILL.

At last McKinley's famous Tariff Bill has passad both branches of Congress and is now law. It went through the Senate by a vote of 33 to 27, only three alleged Republicans voting with the Democrats against.

It will prove a beneficial measure, on the strength of which the Republican party ought to win an easy victory in 1892, for to them belongs the sole credit of originating and enacting it.

ADJOURNED.

The Fifty-first Congress adjourned sine die last Wednesday evening.

Judged by the amount and character of its work it has proved to be the greatest Congress for many years, and the Republican party have a right to feel proud of its record.

☞ Last Saturday's issue of the Boston Evening Traveller contained a portrait and racy biographical sketch of a resident of Medford who was the original of Longfellow's "Village Blacksmith," and a picture of his home there. He was for many years a Medford blacksmith and occupied a shop by the side of the road that Longfellow used to travel over on his frequent trips from Cambridge to Medford to see his friend the poet Pierpont. It was quite an achievement on the part of the Traveller to hunt up this venerable character and give the public his likeness, history, home, and relations to "The Village Blacksmith."

☞ Two prominent gentlemen of this city are more talked about than any other two for Democratic candidates for Representatives to the Legislature and their names are Dr. George P. Bartlett and Robert J. W. Phinney, Esq. Messrs. Jones and Moreland are out of the race; new men must be selected; and the Democratic choice will probably fall on the above gentlemen, for we learn that the Woburn Democrats will insist on having both candidates.

☞ The Woburn members of the Republican Committee for this Congressional District are: Hon. B. F. Whittemore, Capt. E. F. Wyer, W. N. Titus, Charles F. Spear and George C. Conn, Esquires.

☞ The Democratic Senatorial convention for this District will be held at Ayer on next Tuesday.

— Mr. S. R. Moreland advertises a good new-milk cow for sale.

— Rev. Dr. March has been visiting in central and western Massachusetts this week.

— Forest Hooper keeps quite a number of as good plumbers as can be procured in Boston.

— Rev. J. F. Winkley, formerly rector of the Episcopal Church in this city, died yesterday.

— Hon. B. F. Whittemore has a card in this paper which will be likely to interest some people.

— The benefit to Miss Katie McDonald netted $350, and she richly deserved every penny of it.

— Alderman Julius F. Ramsdell and wife are expected to return from their visit away to-morrow.

— A great many Woburn people went to the Burlington Cattle Show and Fair and enjoyed it very much.

— Mr. S. W. Twombly (we always think of him as a Woburn man) will visit the White Mts. and Vermont next week.

— A. C. Wyer left Boston last Monday morning with an excursion party bound for the Corn Palace at Sioux City, Iowa.

— If the Agricultural Society of Burlington will hold their Fairs no oftener than once in three years it will be long lived and give good shows.

— Capt. G. M. Buchanan and family have come back to Woburn to live. They occupy the house of Col. Grammer, Mrs. Buchanan's father.

— Mrs. C. P. Bates of Yonkers, N. Y., is visiting friends and relatives in this city. She is a Woburn girl and many people are glad to see her here again.

— Mr. I. C. Buckminster has bought out Mitchell, the druggist in Dow's block, and has put out his sign. He is from Leominster and is experienced in the business.

— Mr. C. M. Munroe has a change in his advertisement this week which will bear a careful perusal. He has put in a splendid stock of hats, caps and men's furnishing goods.

— Col. A. L. Richardson has fallen into the habit of taking his camera along when strolling about the city streets. He gets a good many nice pictures on the fly, as it were.

— Carter & Nichols find that the rush of the ice season is over and now, gentlemen, hand in your orders for coal. This firm have as good coal and as much of it as any establishment in this vicinity.

— The funeral of Mrs. Annie Ferrin, wife of Peter Lafferty, a most estimable lady, who died very suddenly last week, was one of the largest ever seen here. She had many warm friends and was respected by everybody.

— Yesterday Relief Corps, No. 84, took an open street car on the East Middlesex line drawn by four milk-white horses and visited the Soldiers Home at Chelsea. They had a delightful ride and pleasant visit.

— The largest assortment of Parlor Cabinets in this country can be seen at Paine's Furniture Warerooms, 48 Canal streets, Boston. They are represented in every wood and size and style. Prices range from $5 to $500.

— Charles Verner played "Shamus O'Brien" to a big house at Lyceum Hall last Monday evening. When he comes to Woburn with this popular Irish play Verner never fails to draw a crowd. He makes a perfect "Shamus."

— Mr. Gilman F. Jones accommodated the people who wanted to go to the Burlington Cattle Show last Wednesday in good style. He kept his barges going to and fro at short intervals and every one could go just about when he wanted to.

— Particular attention is directed to the advertisement in this paper of the Commonwealth Clothing House of Boston which is the leading establishment of the kind in that city. Note well the low prices at which the house is selling overcoats.

— Mr. Arthur M. Colegate has gone Down East for a fortnight's visit among friends. His objective point when he left was Brunswick, Maine, but he will go to Montreal and other interesting Canadian localities, besides visiting various parts of Maine.

— Chief McIntosh and his aids did a land-office business last Sunday in making liquor raids. Heaps of it were seized at the residences of John Kenney, Peter Young, Nora Lynch, Michael Walsh and Nell Doherty. There is a good show for their going to the H. C.

— Mrs. Paulina and her daughter Miss Clarabel D. Flinn have returned from a protracted visit with relatives in New Hampshire where they have enjoyed their summer vacation very much indeed. Miss Clarabel had her third attack of la grippe while up there and is not now very strong.

— Thomas F. Anderson of the Boston Globe has prepared an illustrated lecture on the "Modern Newspaper" in which he tells all about the "Arhimedean Lever" and in a way to please and interest everybody whether a newspaper man or not. Mr. Anderson may be found at room 90 "Globe" building, Boston.

— Mrs. L. F. Hurd has a card in this paper to which public attention is respectfully called. She has had a long and profitable experience in the business which she advertises and enjoys the confidence of everyone who has ever had dealings with her. Mrs. Hurd has a large patronage, especially in cleansing and renovating clothes, and as her charges are moderate all go to her to have such work done.

— Major J. W. McDonald is quite ill at the residence of his daughter on Academy Hill and suffers a good deal from the long-standing complaints with which he is afflicted. He has the sympathy of everyone who knows him. His disease is the result of bullet wounds received in defending the Union against the Southern Rebellion.

— The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited. —tf.

— Elisha F. Hayward is at present engaged in collecting the manufactaring statistics of this city for the use of the Census Bureau and finds it a rather slow and particular work. It must take a month at least to collect the data asked for by the Bureau's multitude of questions. Mr. Hayward is discharging the duties of his office in a thorough manner.

— The Editor's family were favored with a very pleasant visit from Mrs. Marcia Jewett of Somerville. She is one of the Pine Tree women who came to Massachusetts some years ago to grow up with the country, and was a near neighbor of the Editor's people when they were all a good deal younger than they are now. It was last Thursday week.

— Mr. Walter Cushing of Dorchester, a traveler for Spaulding's hat, cap and glove store in Boston and ten years ago a salesman for Mr. C. M. Munroe, called at the JOURNAL office last Monday afternoon. In 1880 he was one of the principal leaders of the Young Republican party in this city and subsequently one of Cabot Lodge's active workers.

— Mary McEachen, with whom many Woburn people are well acquainted, is now Female Ward Attendent at the Inverness County Asylum located at Mabou, Cape Breton, which is at the extreme east of Nova Scotia. She has many friends here who will be glad to learn that she occupies a position of such responsibility, for of course good pay goes with it.

— On Monday evening, Sept. 29, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Pollard celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding-day by a family gathering at their pleasant home on Montvale Ave. A large party assembled under the Pollard roof where a delightful evening was passed in social intercourse, music, and other agreeable ways. A fine supper was highly enjoyed by the guests.

— An opera entitled "Priscilla, or the Pilgrim's Proxy" will be given at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, Nov. 5 and 6, which will be something worth hearing. Miss Mertena Bancroft will be the pianist, and Miss Mabel Davis is to take a leading part in the chorus—both fine musicians and popular young ladies—which facts alone are a warranty that the entertainment will be a choice one.

— The most prolific grape vines hereabouts are some white Niagaras in Forrest Hooper's garden, and they bear very nice fruit too. Hooper has gathered grapes from these vines (he set them out) for two years and the way they yield is a caution. Bushels of big white clusters were picked from them this season, and Mr. Hooper gives them the preference over any other variety of grape.

— The Woburn Woman's Club will hold its first gathering after the summer recess on Friday, Oct. 17, at 3 p. m., when a home talent meeting will be given. Several attractions will be presented to the Club during the coming term, and many interesting speakers are expected. Well known among them are Julia Ward Howe, and Martha Sewall Curtis. The services of Miss Rowe, of the Boston City Hospital, and of John Baker, the Russian exile, have also been procured.

— Our townsman, Hon. B. F. Whittemore, is Treasurer of a company composed of Boston capitalists which own and are successfully working a gold mine in Nova Scotia. The company have a paid-up capital of $300,000, with some of which they have sunk shafts, put in machinery, erected numerous buildings, and completed all the necessary arrangements for carrying on big mining operations. Mr. Whittemore has been at the mines two or three months this summer overlooking the business.

— The Schumann Quartette of this city, composed of four of the best female voices which we have among us, namely, Madams Strout, Seaver, Fulton and Bond, are in considerable demand for concerts and entertainments considering that it is an organization of not very long standing. The ladies are fine vocalists and their voices blend very harmoniously indeed. We hear that the Schumann have been engaged by the Y. M. C. A. for a large sized affair to be given on Nov. 16. They have two or three other engagements in this city.

— The owners of Church Block expect to begin on them in a few days and when they get through making improvements one will hardly recognize the building except the lower Main street front. In the second story there is to be a big hall with a dozen or so of offices; a store or two is to be built on the Walnut street front running back to Mr. Packard's Main street store; then up in the third story great improvements are contemplated. Dormer windows are to be put into the roof for light, and the entire upper part overhauled, changed, and fitted for business purposes.

— Mr. E. Prior will have (he says) the best store in Woburn. It is the one recently occupied by Cumings only it has undergone such changes and alterations that nobody would recognize it as the same place. The rear half has been raised (same as Munroe's) to which an easy flight of steps leads and from which a complete view of the entire premises may be obtained. The room is admirably lighted from front and rear, and has been finished in the very best of style. It is large and will enable Mr. Prior to arrange and show his goods much better advantage than in the store he left. With whole plate-glass windows in front it would be hard to find a more desirable store in the county.

— Mr. H. L. Flanders sold his drug stock and goodwill to Mr. Lovell last week and proposes in due time to take up his abode in the South. He has done a good business from the start and retired from the old Main street stand with a pretty bunch of money in his coffers and to a man up a tree it looked just as though he ought not to have sold out. But that is his lookout and not ours. When he leaves us for the South or anywhere else it will be the wish of everybody here that his lines may fall in pleasant and profitable places. In the meantime Mr. Lovell steps into a very fine business which he has the appearance of being well fitted for. Mr. Arthur Flanders, brother of H. L., will remain with Mr. Lovell for a month or so to introduce him to the Woburn public.

— At 4.20 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon, Daniel F. McKay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael McKay, No. 21 Chestnut street, this city, and brother of Miss Maggie M. McKay of the JOURNAL composing room, died at his father's residence of an illness of only a few days duration, which however was supplementary to a long and dangerous seige with la grippe last winter and spring. His age was a little more than 17 years. The deceased was a young man of exemplary habits, an obedient and loving son, a favorite in young society, and well thought of by all who knew him. He was of amiable disposition, kind and considerate with his companions, a great help to his father in his business, and his early death will be generally and deeply mourned.

— Last week Mr. F. E. Lovell of Amherst, this State, bought out the drug and medicine stock of H. L. Flanders & Co., 361 Main street, with the fixtures of the store, good will, etc., and has taken possession and gone to work. He graduated from the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in Class '84, has had 12 years practice in the business, and a thoroughly educated, careful and competent druggist if all reports are true. Mr. Lovell brings the best of credentials with him from the people of Amherst which assure this public that he is a gentleman who will make a firstrate member of community, a good citizen, and a valuable acquisition to our business classes. Mr. Lovell is a family man and has come to stay. No doubt Woburn people will give him and his family a cordial social and business welcome.

— The order introduced by Alderman Goddard to establish fire limits in this city was a move in the right direction. The order cannot be passed any too soon. The erecting of another wooden building in the business centre of the place should not be permitted. Our authorities should keep step with the onward movement of the day and generation. If Mr. Goddard's idea is at once adopted it will be but a little while before the trade section of the city will be covered with brick blocks, which will not only add greatly to the good looks and respectability of the city but will reduce the price of fire insurance to a minimum. It will not be long before fire will wipe out all the old wooden buildings on Main street, and with what kind of buildings shall they be replaced? They may all burn down this week and if the Goddard order has not been passed the owners will have the right to erect wooden ones which they could not do if the order were in force. We hope this matter will be attended to and favorably acted on at once.

— Mr. Ernest H. Clarke has been engaged as the trombone soloist with Gilmore's Band at the St. Louis Exposition. Concerning his advent in that city a recent number of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch say: "Mr. Ernest H. Clarke, the popular trombone soloist who made his debut in St. Louis Monday night, was born in Boston in 1865. Although only 25 years of age he is already a famous figure in the world of music, and his reception Monday night showed that the young American soloist was a decided success in St. Louis. The little Bostonian began his musical career at a very early age under the direction of his father, the well-known organist, Wm. H. Clarke, and ever since his debut in the musical world he has made a most brilliant record. He has played in nearly every city of the States, and even at this early age, he ranks as one of the foremost slide-trombonists in the United States. Personally, he has a good looking face, kind, frank and earnest eyes, brimful intelligence and manliness."

— Mr. S. B. Goddard, the leading policy writer in this city, has recently been appointed agent of The Employers Libility Assurance Corporation of London, England, one of the largest insurance companies in existence. As its name indicates the protection which it gives is to employers of working people, in which respect it differs from nearly all other corporations doing business. Under the laws of this State employers are liable to their employees for damages which the latter may suffer from accidents sustained while in the employ of the former and it is to cover cases of this nature that the Company was organized. It has a subscribed capital of $2,500,000, and an American Board of Trustees of which W. A. French and John Lowell of Boston are members. Mr. Goddard is meeting with marked success with this Accident Insurance Co. in this city. The leather manufacturers, carpenters and builders, machinists, etc., say it is just exactly what they have been looking for—it fills the bill—and Mr. Goddard has many good clients among these classes of people, which clientage is rapidly growing.

The old M. E. meetinghouse will be used for religious services for the last time on next Sunday. On that good-bye occasion Rev. Dr. Lindsey will preach the "Farewell Sermon" in the morning, and at 7 o'clock in the evening the Pastor, Rev. Hugh Montgomery, will preach on the theme: "Devoted attachment to the Church," which will have special reference to giving up the old church for the new and better one. Thus Sunday will be a season of deep interest to the Methodist people of Woburn and a solemn one withall, as parting and good-byes commonly are to those who are connected with them. They have worshipped a great many years in the old meetinghouse, during which it has become dear to them, and it will not be without a pang that they give it up. There are a great many pleasant associations connected with the house now about to be abandoned for ever; many fond memories cluster around its pews, pulpit and aisles; it has been the scene of many joys and sorrows; many beloved pastors have come and gone; death has called home many of the members—the edifice is full of recollections of all kinds and it is not to be expected that the people will leave it without regrets. But the ministers in the pulpit will tell all about these things next Sunday much better than the JOURNAL can, and to hear them most likely large congregations will be present.

Ye Soft Soap Days.

Time was when the hard wood ashes were stored away in barrels; when the household fat was saved, and in the spring out came a leach, and then began the making of the year's supply of soft soap. But now all this is changed, and when soap is needed, it is secured at the store, and "ten times out of nine," as Artemus Ward used to say, the order will go in for Brussels soap, for that is the best and most economical.

"Medford Baffled."

The Woburn reporter of the Boston Globe makes very free use of his scissors on the columns of the JOURNAL every Friday afternoon, a fact which he indignantly denies whenever charged with it. There is no smarter newsgatherer in the State than this Globe reporter, consequently he don't like to have it said that he cribs his juiciest tidbits and freshest news items from the live, wideawake and always reliable WOBURN JOURNAL, so when the other reporters accuse him of it he gets red in the face and sometimes indulges in unbecoming language. We threw out a piece of tempting bait to catch him with last Friday. For several months past he has been abnormally stirred up over the Mystic Valley sewerage question and has written for the Globe considerable matter of public interest on the subject. He is a close observer of the progress of the work of the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission; he keeps an eye out on Medford; the effect of the tides on Mystic waters, and other kindred questions engross more or less of his attention. The JOURNAL knew it, and the JOURNAL accordingly threw out bait for gudgeons and landed one.

The public may recollect that last Friday's JOURNAL contained an account of the laying of a large sewer pipe from Main to Walnut street in this city for the benefit of Richardson Brothers laundry, and of the smart trick Mayor Johnson and Road Superintendent Jones played on the town of Medford. The alleged facts were all set forth with apparent candor and much particularity, including cost of work and pipes, a visit from a member of the Medford Town Board, etc., which gave the article all the appearance of being a true description of a genuine transaction.

On the next afternoon the Globe came out, under the head of "Medford Baffled," with a long story of the same matter, embelished, changed, enlarged upon, but containing the essence of the JOURNAL'S piece of fancy work got up to catch the Globe reporter. It was written in the reporter's best style and choicest English, and was admirably calculated to excite the combativeness of the good people of Medford, which appeared to be the writer's main object. Our esteemed gudgeon was "tickled half to death" over his smart piece of work. He had "scooped" the Herald, Journal, Traveller and Record reporters in fine style, and there is nothing that the Globe man enjoys more highly than to "scoop" his neighbors. Left thumb at his nose, spread fingers, gyrations of right flipper around left little finger (when he met one of the other reporters) all told only too plainly of the triumphant beating his heart.

But the best part of it was, the Medford people knew all about the JOURNAL'S bait for gudgeons so when the Globe's "Medford Baffled" came out it created no end of amusement for the good people who live and take their ease on the banks of the noble Mystic whose pellucid waters pass on to the sea unpolluted by the drainage of Woburn tanneries or other mechanical industries. Aye, the piece was nuts for Medford, and many Woburn people who had been let into the secret perused it with glee, but it will not do for the Globe reporter to deny hereafter that he finds rich pickings for his paper every Friday in the columns of the leading family newspaper, literary, local and political, in Middlesex county, the "old and reliable" WOBURN JOURNAL.

City Government.

COMMON COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held last Thursday evening with Councilman Grant in the chair. Appropriations were made for the new water main to the reservoir, the new Highland school, and the sum of $7000 for a public park.

ALDERMEN.

The Board held a meeting last Monday evening at which all the members were present except two.

A petition for the laying out of Stodard street was referred to the Highway Committee. Michael Denahay was recommended for $8 State aid. An order was passed to locate electric lights on Bedford, Burlington, Border and Green streets. The Treasurer was authorized to hire $7,000 for a Public Park at 4 per cent interest, giving 10 notes of $700 each, the first payable in 1891. The Treasurer was authorized to hire $14,000 for the new Highland schoolhouse and land giving 10 notes of $1,400 each, the first to come due in 1891. Adjourned to Wednesday, Oct. 1, at 8 p. m.

"Good-bye Time."

ED. JOURNAL: The Ladies of the Woburn M. E. Church are very desirous of calling attention to their unique and interesting "Good-bye Time" which will take place at the old church on Tuesday evening next. By the generous donations of citizens a large variety of articles will be for sale and all tastes will be gratified. Refreshments will be for sale and an entertainment of great interest and variety including music by the Woburn Orchestra will be provided. It will be an affair long to be remembered. It is hoped that the ladies will receive that encouragement to which their earnest labors are entitled. A committee will be in attendance to receive articles during the day.—INTEREST.

Lectures.

It has been a question in some people's minds whether or no there is intelligence enough in our 13,500 population to support courses of lectures, and the almost unanimous feeling has been that Woburn is a poor market for such literary wares. Now and then a short series has been fairly remunerative. There was Harry French's illustrated foreign travels; Clarence Pullen's illustrated New Mexico; and perhaps some others, although we fail to call them to mind at this moment; but on the whole the experience of adventurous platform orators and the societies and clubs that occasionally employ them to help fill out a course, has not been at all satisfactory. Hence, lecturers as a rule have steared clear of Woburn—and this community has been just so much the loser, or gainer, according as the question is viewed by different individuals from different standpoints.

It has, however, been the conviction of the JOURNAL all along that such timidity on the part of lecturers and societies was ill-founded. It has held, with but little wavering, that the educated circles of this place are sufficiently large to maintain good, properly conducted lecture courses in the season for them, and that they would be glad to do so were the opportunity presented. We have been of the opinion that an annual winter course possessing first-class merit would pay a fair profit to its organizers and managers. And that is still the JOURNAL'S belief.

In support of this position so far as it goes the fact may be stated that Rev. Dr. March of this city has recently delivered two Sunday evening lectures which attracted audiences larger than the seating capacity of the spacious main vestry-room of the First Congregational Church. The Doctor's theme was not what might be denominated a "popular" one and yet the people came out in great crowds to hear him. On Sunday evening, Sept. 14, he gave the first instalment of "Scenes in the Life of Paul," illustrated by stereopticon views found in cities and countries visited by the Apostle on his missionary tours; and on Sunday evening, Sept. 28, the second and last part of the lecture was given. It was a significant fact that, although every seat in the vestry was occupied on the first evening, the crowd was much larger on the second and after benches had been brought in to accommodate them many persons could only secure standing-room.

Admitted that Dr. March is an eminent biblical writer; an uncommonly interesting lecturer; that his knowledge of the subject was full and intimate; that his descriptive powers are extraordinary, and that he employed them in the most entertaining manner; still the very large attendance at these two Sunday evening lectures could not fairly be attributed to these facts alone. To the JOURNAL'S comprehension the unusually large gathering went to show that there is an intellectual element in this city of sufficient magnitude and possessing sufficient literary taste to warrant the opinion that meritorious courses of lectures would be liberally patronized and handsomely sustained by our citizens if given under a live, efficient management.

Letter from Holland.

We were but a speck on the sea: our great steamship 420 feet long, between two oceans of water and air. We felt how insignificant we were! We were not sea sick, and arrived at Rotterdam about midnight, Saturday. Curious things in Holland; level ground, diked from the rivers and sea, canals everywhere, traffic done by boats, sloops and steamers. Rotterdam is cut up by water ways and obstructed by bridges, some of which are purely American. Light teaming is done by horses, donkeys, dogs, boys, men and women, and a man or woman or boy along with a dog or two, may be seen attached to a cart carrying produce, milk, bread or cheese. The society with the long name is needed here for animals. Could not understand a word of Dutch, for Dutch is not German. We went to the Haague, the royal residence, to Delft to see whence our Pilgrim fathers sailed (1620); returned by a steam launch on a canal; saw wind saw-mill with gang saws; and steam pumps without number for inundations. An interesting thing to us were the sloops made after the pattern of the Mayflower; these sail quite fast and carry large loads, and their pointed stems and sterns, their curious sails, narrow landing boards, queer rudders, and hawse holes looking like eyes carried us back in spirit to 1620, when our forefathers walked on these wharves and sailed on these canals. These ancient shaped vessels are characterized with extreme neatness and cleanliness. At a church we attended we heard fine choral singing, the congregation taking the melody and the large organ the harmony, and two collections were taken up one after the other. Behind the collector was the Treasurer carrying a large canvas bag for the money. Sometimes there are three collections at one service.

Haarlem is a clean place, even the horse cars and freight cars are clean. The Dutch have made the most of their opportunities, their land is rescued from the sea, which is kept out by pumping. There are many nice canals twenty feet deep, and fine water gardens, the land is under splendid culture, through mostly nothing but sand. The people get up early and sit up late. They make things last. I saw a public steelyard, ten by twelve feet, in use since 1623, and in good order. The bricks are laid for pavements edgewise and make but little show, but hold on well. Over four hundred mills at Zaardam, which I saw, grind grain, paint, drugs, and are used for making paper and for sawing lumber and for many other purposes. In horticulture the Dutch lead the world, they excel in painting, and the faces of the people are intelligent. Some of the women possess great beauty, and others are stouter for work than any women I have ever seen. They have their rights here—of work! I have seen them peddling milk and pushing their own wagons, managing shipping as sailor captains, working within fields as farmers, hauling carts along with dogs, shaking carpets in the streets, and going bare-headed in the rain, tugging along with and steering canal boats. The women and girls ride on the top of horse-cars and on the platforms. It is unpleasant to see women doing heavy outdoor work commonly performed in this country by men, but they seem healthier than the shop-girls of America, and the Dutch have a strong character. We saw the Spanish racks on which they were tortured in 1573 in their eighty years' war, when many thousands perished, and the iron bar, the knife, the brazier, the stocks, used at that time were shown. Holland has larger music interests than we. The people are in rich community. A city built on a sundry plain leads the world in horticulture. The parks are made of beautiful forests orderly planted, and of fine flower gardens. Herds of tame deer sport under the windows of the houses. Delightful paths wind in pleasant mazes and surprises please and ease the eye, and long rows of avenues arched overhead with foliage run in various directions. E. C.

The Tennis Tournament.

Beginning with the fall of 1886 the annual tournament of the Woburn Lawn Tennis Club has been one of the events to which many of the JOURNAL'S readers look forward with interest and a faithful chronicle of which it has always been the aim of this newspaper to supply. Owing to the absence of our lady tennis reporter at Lenox on Saturday, September 20, to which fashionable resort she was called to report the tennis tournament for The London Pastime, no account of the first day's play on the grounds of the Mount Pleasant Association appeared in these columns. As gleaned from semi-official sources, however, the story of that day's sport reads about as follows:—

O tempora, O mores! In the preliminary round of this tourney J. L. Skinner beat this well known "athlete of a past decade" by the score of 6 0 6 0! There were few mourners at the funeral and the principal one was soon a corpse himself. One of the young ladies who witnessed the event said that the play of the defeated party reminded her of those lines of the In Memoriam

"The chestnut pattering to the ground."

In the event between Wright and Doyle the former won the deciding set after his opponent had him 5-2.

The great surprise of the day, however, was the event between Buss and Clewley. The latter was looked upon as a sure winner, but young Buss by playing the game of his life defeated his opponent quite handily.

In the first round another crack of ye olden time bit the dust of defeat. His slayer was young Buss, who elated with his success over Mr. Clewley, and finding that he had nothing but an empty reputation to play against—the vacuous shadow of former substance—came off victorious by the decisive score of 6-0, 6-2. The corpse at the previous funeral was chief mourner at this one and his lamentations were loud and long.

The defeat which Lounsbury received at the hands of Taylor was not altogether unexpected. Mr. Lounsbury had attended the supper of the Young Men's Association on the Thursday evening preceding and not even a quart bottle of moxie (sic)—he was sick after the event—was able to put him in winning form. As he has repeatedly defeated Johnson in practice games the past summer the result of the tournament was very nusatisfactory to him and by no means such as his friends had a right to expect.

Such in brief are the salient points of the tennis tournament on the opening day. Last Saturday afternoon was mainly taken up with the play in ladies and gentlemen's doubles. The events, which we will not attempt to describe in detail, were most interesting and enjoyable. The four ladies played good tennis, albeit nervousness and excitement sometimes had its influence on their play. Mrs. Clewley scored some exceptionally fine aces and played several rests with great vigor. It seems too bad that the ladies feel obliged to handicap themselves with long skirts and that some less cumbersome outfit cannot be adopted. At Narragansett Pier last summer the lady players who represent the most fashionable society of New York appeared in a semi-bloomer costume and their movements were correspondingly free and graceful. If low necked dresses and short sleeves are not considered immodest for the drawing-room and opera-house why must long skirts etc. be worn on the tennis field?

On Tuesday afternoon Messrs. Johnson and Skinner played for the honor of being the winner of the All-Comers. The match was exceedingly close and well contested. The first set went to Skinner by the score of 6-5, although Johnson at one time had the game 5-4 in his favor. Johnson won the second set very easily by the score of 6-2. The third and deciding set was one of the closest ever played in Woburn. With the games 6-5 in his favor Johnson was twice within one point of winning, and again with the games 7-6 in his favor the same opportunity presented itself, but Skinner proved equal to the emergencies and by some exceptionally fine play finally succeeded in winning the set and match by the score of 9-7. Here follows the complete score:—

PRELIMINARY ROUND.

Skinner beat Blodgett, 6-0, 6 0.
Wright beat Doyle, 0-6, 6-5, 7-5.
Buss beat Clewley, 6-2, 6-2.
Taylor beat Goddard, 6 3, 5-6, 6 2.

FIRST ROUND.

Johnson beat Wright, 6-2, 6-1.
Buss beat DeLorica, 6 0, 6-2.
Taylor beat Lounsbury, 6-4, 6-5.
Skinner beat Buck, 6-3, 6-2.

SECOND ROUND.

Johnson beat Buss, 6-4, 6-2.
Skinner beat Taylor, 6-1, 6-4.

FINAL ROUND.

Skinner beat Johnson, 6-5, 2-6, 9-7.

MIXED DOUBLES.

First Round.

Mr. Lounsbury and Mrs. Clewley beat Mr. Clewley and Miss Lena H. Brown, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Mr. Johnson and Miss Emily H. Brown beat Mr. P. K. Richardson and Miss Edith Ramsdell, 4 6, 6-2, 6-3.

FINAL ROUND.

Mr. Lounsbury and Mrs. Clewley beat Mr. Johnson and Miss Emily H. Brown, 6-4, 3-6—unfinished.

Next Saturday afternoon it is probable that Mr. Skinner will play Mr. P. K. Richardson for the championship, and the consolation and mixed doubles will also be played at that time.

Burlington Cattle Show and Fair.

There was an immense gathering of people at the Burlington Cattle Show and Fair last Wednesday. The most conservative of guessers set the number at 3,000, while others run the figures up to nearly twice that number.

A fairer autumn day—a sweeter, purer, brighter October day—was never made, and in this respect the Burlington Agricultural Society, which owes its birth and subsequent growth to the energy, pluck, industry and good sense of Rev. C. H. Washburn, pastor of the Congregational Churches of Burlington and North Woburn, was blessed by the Powers above.

That a Cattle Show and Fair of such huge proportions could be gotten up and put successfully through in such a small town in point of people, some miles distant from a railroad, farmhouses far apart, and no village to speak of, was a marvel to everybody. Hardly anyone (or any dozen of people) but Rev. Mr. Washburn could have accomplished the feat.

In the exhibition hall was a large layout of ancient things, curious relics of the earlier days of the town, odd pieces of all sorts of domestic wares, and these attracted much attention. (There is a good deal of old history in Burlington—historic spots, houses, furniture and the like).

There were many displays of fancy work by the ladies which held strong attractions for the fair sex and were almost continually hovered over by well dressed dames and maidens fair.

Immense tents were erected on the grounds and filled with people who reached the town in barges, in handsome metropolitan turnouts, in hacks, carryalls, wagons, buggies, and other modes of conveyance. The dinner tent was 60x180 feet in size, and there were two or three others only a little less in size.

Premiums were awarded to William H. Winn, Samuel and William H. Walker, J. I. Reed, G. H. and E. A. Bennett, Walter Skelton, Jonathan Simonds, Samuel Sewall, H. H. Nichols, Edward Reed, David and John O'Brien, Charles E. Merriam, J. Madden, William Graham and many other worthy citizens.

The dinner was prime, and the after-dinner speeches of the best, while the Woburn Brass Band, an old and first-rate musical combine, furnished the best kind of music in genteel sufficiency. The addresses were odoriferous of the farm and orchard; they were brief too and pointed. Among the well known gentlemen who occupied posts of honor at the feast, or more properly, the elevated seats in the synagogue were: President Thomas I. Reed, Vice-President Fernald E. Ham, Secretary Albert S. Wood, Treasurer W. H. Winn, Directors Samuel Sewall, Rev. C. H. Washburn, Edward Reed. There were 40 invited guests present, among whom were Rev. E. G. Porter and Rev. Carlton C. Staples of Lexington, Treasurer Marden of Lowell, Benjamin P. Ware, President of Essex Agricultural Society, Hon. B. T. Batcheller of Lexington, Rev. C. C. Hussey of Billerica.

The Fair was under the best of management and every department was properly superintended. The exhibition of stock, swine, agricultural, horticultural, dairy and other products was large and of high quality, for Burlington, although little, is away up in the pictures for the variety and choice character of the growths from her farms.

At least 1,000 people paid for tickets and sat down to the Society's dinner which had been prepared with much elaboration by the famous Boston caterer Tafts. It was a capital dinner, for, let it be here remarked, Burlington never fails to provide for and set before the stranger within her gates the fattest and sweetest things which her ample larder contains.

The speakers were: Hon. B. Ware, Hon. G. A. Marden, Rev. H. C. Parker, Rev. E. G. Porter, Hon. B. T. Bachelder, J. R. Reed, Esq., and William Winn, Esq.

Mr. Silas Cutler, probably the oldest person in Burlington—86 years—who was postmaster for 50 years, was a conspicuous figure in the fair.

The chief attraction was a vegetable man made of twenty-one different kinds of vegetables. He had his origin in the fertile brain of Mrs. Edna Walker who composed the verses he exhibited to the crowd. The following is a copy:

I am a cabbage and a squash,
A turnip and a beet,
A carrot and a parsnip,
And all are good to eat.

A melon and an onion,
A potato and some corn,
Some pickle and a cauliflower,
And I'm sitting here forlorn.

With radishes for eyes,
And beans for buttons, too.
With a turnip for a watch,
Oh my! what shall I do?

My seat is getting hard
For I've had to dig and delve,
And I'd like to have you all
Come and dine at half past twelve.

Premiums, etc., will be given in the JOURNAL next week.

No. Woburn.

Rev. Mr. Washburn expects to leave his ministerial charge here in season to preach his first sermon at Falmouth on the third Sunday in Oct., although possibly he may not be able to do so. He is to have the same salary at Falmouth that is paid him by the No. Woburn and Burlington churches, that is to say, $1,200. There is a strong opposition in both parishes to his leaving his present charge, but matters between the two churches are getting to be somewhat inharmonious and Mr. Washburn fears that if he should stay he might become drawn into the controversy that is likely soon to arise over the question of a continuance of the union, or the employment of one pastor for both churches, and so he proposes to leave when he stands fair and almost everyone of his parishioners want him to remain. The friction between the Burlington and No. Woburn people does not grow any less as time passes, but on the other hand it seems to increase in intensity and the desire for separation is, apparently, stronger now than ever. Mr. Washburn has the sagacity to see what is coming and although the pressure is very strong to retain him, especially in Burlington, he thinks it will be better for all hands concerned for him to leave, which finally he has concluded to do. The people of both parishes have become very much attached to Mr. Washburn and family during the two years that they have lived here and the regrets at their leaving for another field are many and sincere. Mr. Washburn is not only an able preacher and faithful pastor but he is an energetic, pushing, go-ahead gentleman of practical business ideas, the benefits of which are now being felt by his parishes, especially the town of Burlington whose fine and successful Cattle Show and Fair last year and this, and the Burlington Agricultural Society, owe their origin to the good common sense and persistent efforts of Mr. Washburn. He and his family have made many warm friends in Woburn, Burlington and neighboring towns by whom their leave-taking will be deeply regretted.

WINCHESTER.

Secretary Johnson's annual report of the financial standing of the W. V. I. A. shows everything to be lovely. The receipts for the year amounted to $500.93, and the expenditures, $471.77, leaving nearly $30 in the treasury.

A school for instruction in all the fashionable society dances will be opened in Harmony Hall, Saturday, Oct. 11, from 10 to 12 a. m. All the newest and latest dances will be taught and strict attention given to deportment. The classes will be most select, and the instructor, Mr. Frank L. Bryne, will be pleased to consult parents or guardians on that date.

The Congregational Sunday School adopted the following resolutions on the departure of two of its members who will prepare to enter the ministry:

WHEREAS Frederick H. Page, a teacher in this school, and Charles Edmund Dascomb, a former member of the school, are about to enter theological seminaries the present month, to prepare for the Christian ministry,

Resolved, That the school extends to each of them its glad approval of such purpose and action on their part, and its cordial interest and good cheer in the work and life before them.

A concert and ball complimentary to Mr. John Clark, will be held in the Town Hall on Friday evening, Oct. 10, the proceeds of which are to go towards helping Mr. Clark in a contest for a harness with Mr. Brady of Stoneham, which is to be voted for at the Stoneham fair. Well known talent will assist at the concert, consisting of clog dancing, song and dances, singing, whistling solo, etc., and Mr. Clark himself will give an exhibition of artistic club swinging, which alone would be worth the price of admission to see. As he is very popular in this town he will no doubt receive a large benefit, and thus help him to have the honor of bringing the harness to Winchester.

The Y. M. C. A. of this village are flourishing. The following is from the Star: The talent for the entertainment course was secured through the Y. M. C. A. Bureau, Boston, which is organized solely for the purpose of furnishing New England Associations with good and reliable talent. The most recent development of the Association work is in the missionary movement among the young men of heathen lands. Three Secretaries are now working on the foreign field, one in Tokyo, Japan, one in Madras, India, and another in China. The origin and growth of this special work for young men in heathen lands up to the present time will be discussed at the Association rooms next Sunday afternoon.

Literary Notices.

THE MUSICAL RECORD for October contains several pieces of new music, vocal and instrumental, besides musical news, gossip, correspondence and editorials. It is published monthly by O. Ditson & Co., Boston.

The October number of OUR LITTLE ONES is one that will please the young folks and interest the old. It makes a great display of handsome pictures, every page containing one or more, while the stories, poetry, etc., found in it are of the very best. Published by the Russell Publishing Co., in Boston.

Although restricted to the domain of science, The Popular Science Monthly never fails to lay before its readers a pleasing variety in each issue. In the October number the article that will be most generally attractive is a plentifully illustrated description of Ancient Dwellings of the Rio Verde Valley, in Arizona, by Captain Edgar A. Mearns, M. D., U. S. A. Dr. Andrew D. White, ex-President of Cornell University, finishes his chapter on The Fall of Man and Anthropology in this number. Some of the remaining papers are: The Earthly Tabernacle, Liquor Laws Not Sumptuary, Mothers and Natural Science, Cotton Spinning, South and North, Irrigation in China, Rice and its culture etc. Published by D. Appleton & Co. N. Y.

It is idle curiosity that prompts a boy to look upon the "true inwardness" of a gun, and immediately afterward throw both heels clear out of sight behind the clouds, but it is pure necessity that causes the prudent housewife to use the economical Brussels soap.

The Dining Room

The dinner is the principal meal of the day, and the housekeeper's greatest joy or deepest sorrow.

Which—depends on a perfect combination of three essentials:

1st. The Cook.

2d. The Service.

3d, and possibly most important of all, the China, Glass and Silver with which the table is furnished.

Delicate dishes in harmonious shapes, with refined decorations, add the completing touch to a perfect dinner.

T. & R. Boote, the English Dinner-set makers, have given years of thought to perfecting these goods.

We control this set, and when we say the price is only $11.98, the perfection of surprises is attained.

We have large lines of Table and Kitchen Glassware which we offer at equally low prices; for instance, Jewel Top, Flint Glass Lamp Chimneys, 6c. each, 60c. a dozen.

THE VINEYARD PARABLE

LESSON I, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 5.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xx, 9-19—Commit Verses 13-19—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

9. "Then began He to speak to the people this parable: A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time." He is now about to tell them of their history as a nation and of their treatment of their God and His servants from the days of their coming out of Egypt even unto His death at their hands. We are not left in any doubt as to who or what is signified by the vineyard, for it is written, "The vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant" (Isa. v, 7). That also explains who it was that planted the vineyard—the Lord of Hosts. The husbandmen would mean the kings, prophets and priests who ruled over the people as God's representatives. His going away probably signifies the withdrawal of his manifested presence in the days of Samuel, when they desired a king, like other nations, thus, as He said to Samuel, rejecting Him and not Samuel (I Sam. viii, 7). Or it may refer to earlier days, when they relied on the ark rather than on God, who dwelt between the cherubim; or yet earlier, to the days of the judges when they forsook Him and He allowed their enemies to oppress them. The contrast to all this is the vineyard of which He is the True Vine and His Father the husbandman, and all the faithful are living branches.

10. "And at the season He sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard; but the husbandmen beat him and sent him away empty." We are very plainly told what fruit He expected; "He looked for judgment, but behold, oppression; for righteousness, but behold, a cry."

11. "And again He sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty." As to beating and shameful treatment read Jer. xx, 2: "Then Pashur smote Jeremiah, the prophet, and put him in the stocks." Also xxxviii, 6: "Then took they Jeremiah and cast him into the dungeon, * * * and in the dungeon there was no water but mire; so Jeremiah sunk in the mire." Read also in II Chron. xviii, 23, 26, how Micaiah, the son of Imla, was smitten and imprisoned and fed upon the bread of affliction and the water of affliction just because he spake the truth for God.

12. "And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also and cast him out." These three sendings probably cover all the prophets from Samuel to John the Baptist. They might be divided into those before the captivity, those after the captivity and John, the immediate forerunner of Christ.

13. "Then said the Lord of the vineyard, What shall I do?" Not what shall I do to punish these guilty rebels, how shall I most quickly sweep them from the earth? That would need no planning. A moment's withdrawal of His mercy and they are gone. But He is considering what else He may do that He may win them to Him.

"I will send My beloved Son. It may be they will reverence Him when they see Him." Here is a glimpse of the love of God as seen in the councils of a past eternity.

14. "But when the husbandmen saw him they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours." Like Joseph's brethren, who hated him and said, "Come now and let us slay him, and let us see what will become of his dreams" (Gen. xxxvii, 8, 20). If we did not know it to be a true story that is contained in this parable, we could hardly believe such ingratitude possible. Such unheard of love to be thus rejected and abused. I believe that the greatest fact in the Bible, and in all history, and the one least understood, is the love of God. Who among us begins to appreciate the greatness of that which is contained in John iii, 16? Who can fathom the height and depth or measure the length and breadth of the love of God, which passeth knowledge.

15. "So they cast him out of the vineyard and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?" Again He foretells His death. It is ever before Him. But the glory beyond lightens it up (Heb. xii, 2). He is thinking more of these poor blinded, self destroying people than of Himself. He shall rise again from the dead. He shall live forever. The kingdom shall yet be His. But those who die in rebellion against Him must perish.

16. "He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others, and when they heard it they said God forbid." Matthew says that it was the people who gave the verdict (Matt. xxi, 41); it may have been the disciples who said God forbid; or the disciples may have given the verdict and the people have said "God forbid." These husbandmen are the enemies of chap. xix, 27, who refuse to submit to Him and must perish. The vineyard given to others He explains in Matt. xxi, 43, by saying: "The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

17. "And He beheld them and said, What is this then that is written? The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner." This is from Ps. 118, the latter part of which like Isa. xii refers to the Day of the Lord when He shall have become Israel's salvation. Notwithstanding His rejection and approaching death He constantly points forward to His ultimate triumph.

18. "Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." This is from Isa. viii, 14, 15, and Dan. ii, 45, referring to the present and future result of refusing to receive Him. Jesus crucified and risen from the dead is the foundation and the only foundation on which to build for eternity (Acts iv, 10-12); and He tells us that the way to build is to hear and do His words (Matt. vii, 24, 25).

19. "And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on Him, and they feared the people: for they perceived that He had spoken this parable against them." What blinded fools they were, for in the next verse we see them sending out men who were to feign themselves righteous so as to catch Him in His words. After all His reading their hearts and telling their thoughts they still think to deceive Him, and this parable, which they see is spoken against them, instead of working repentance in them only makes them more bitter. How fully given over to Satan they must be. Let us never be the least offended by anything our dear Lord says or does or permits, but may all things draw us nearer to Him.

SOUR MILK.

In eastern countries sour milk which has undergone a species of fermentation is a regular article of diet. The Arabs are very fond of it, and consume daily a preparation of sour milk called koumiss. The virtues of koumiss have come to be recognized in our own country by the medical faculty, and it is ordered by them in cases of low fever and frequently with very successful results. Koumiss is very easy of digestion, and is exceedingly useful in cases of dyspepsia without acidity; it is also useful where there is a torpor of the functions of the liver, and many patients who can digest hardly any sort of food assimilate it with ease.

Buttermilk is recognized as a remedial adjunct in the relief of stomach and liver troubles, and many physicians attest its virtues in typhoid fevers. A buttermilk diet, it is claimed, will do wonders toward the relief of gastritis, but when undertaken the patient must not add other articles to his dietary, but confine himself strictly to the buttermilk, never eating during its course anything solid, unless it may be a bit of dry bread at least twenty-four hours old. The buttermilk diet must be heroically persisted in for a month to six weeks, according to the urgency or obstinacy of the case. A learned divine in New York, who suffered from gastric trouble, resolutely kept himself on this diet (buttermilk only) for over a month, and cured himself completely; nor did this regimen interfere with his labors at the desk. To avoid temptation he stayed away from the table, and when he felt the need of nourishment sipped buttermilk, taking from two to four quarts per day. Says a writer on the subject: The philosophy is simple. While buttermilk is inferior to skimmed milk in nutritive properties, it is still a valuable article of food. It is already soured and in a partially digested condition, so that the stomach has little to do in taking care of it. Besides this it furnishes its own "juices" in a large measure, so that the digestive apparatus is excused from much of the trouble. In a word, the lactic acid seems to meet a want. As a food and medicine it is simple and within the reach of all.

Koumiss is more agreeable to many persons than buttermilk, but one could hardly imbibe two or three quarts of it daily, as it would be too stimulating. It might, however, be taken to vary the routine of a simple buttermilk diet, and would be found very refreshing if it had previously been kept in a cool place. The writer knows the virtues of koumiss from experience, and can attest its property of being easy of digestion, and its mildly exhilarating influence, which is not at all like that of any other drink, combining with stimulation, as it does, a tonic effect which makes it so desirable. Koumiss may be made at home by adding a little sugar and yeast to milk and corking it up tightly in bottles. The mixture must be shaken up several times daily for three or four days to incorporate the solid and liquid portions thoroughly. The corks should be wired down, as quantities of gas are evolved, and they would otherwise fly out. Keep the bottles on the floor of a cool cellar. Koumiss may be drank by very weak persons, and generally is found very refreshing and strengthening.—Ladies' World.

Another Sauce.

The teacher told her scholars that the chewing of tobacco was a vile and reprehensible habit. One of the boys, with an air of importance, replied that he had seen a fellow chew because his tooth ached; he didn't think it could be called wrong to chew for such a purpose.

This answer pleased the rest of the scholars, and for a moment the teacher was at a loss how to meet it. Then she said:

"Horace, if a girl should have the toothache and wish to chew tobacco, what ought she to do?"

Horace scratched his head, but was equal to the emergency:

"She ought to have the tooth pulled," he answered.—Youth's Companion.

Onyx More Beautiful Than Marble.

Onyx is the same improvement over fine marble that marble is over ordinary stone. It also costs as much more. These are two reasons why people who are putting up fine houses in this town are beginning to use it. It differs from marble in taking on a higher degree of polish, in being harder, with a greater reflection, a firmer grain, more refined and delicate tints and prettier streaks. Streaked marble is not popular because it is usually not streaked in a way to add to its decorative effect. In onyx the delicate green fern, reddish and brown streaks appear beautifully on an ivory background.—New York Sun.

Replanting Peach Trees.

It is not advisable to set young peach trees in the same spots from which old ones have been recently dug out. True, the drain which the old trees have made upon the soil can be supplied by fertilizers, but the dead roots left in the ground are filled with fungus, which is likely to fasten in time upon the roots of young trees—Christian at Work.

OIL ON THE RAILS.

The Remarkable Manner in Which a Wild Engine Was Stopped.

"Talk about fast time," said a railroad man on the Missouri Pacific train the other day to his companion, "but I have never heard of a trip that would beat one I made myself some years ago, nor of any half so exciting. I formerly lived at Garrett, Ind., the terminus of the central division of the Chicago division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. I had little to do, and made the railroad yards my loafing headquarters. At that time the "Billy-O" had an arrangement with the Wabash to transfer all New York freight at Auburn junction, nine miles distant, to the east of us. This was done by the old switch engine, the 642, which made the trip to the junction daily.

"Well, one day I climbed aboard a box car when the engine left with a few cars of merchandise to transfer. There were six of us in the party—four yard men, another fellow and myself. We had a jolly time going down, made the transfer and were to come back 'light' that is, with nothing but the engine. We had all crowded on the tender, the signal was given and Gent Potter, the engineer, threw himself forward, pulled at the throttle valve and the engine jumped forward as if shot from a catapult.

"We did not think much of this at the time, as Gent was a fine engineer, and handled the engine to suit his fancy. We went tearing over the railroad crossings and frogs in a manner that was frightful. The tender rocked as if on hinges. Something must be wrong, we thought, as Gent was placing our lives in jeopardy. Climbing over the coal we found the cab full of steam, and Gent and the fireman hanging on the side of the engine.

"'Jump boys,' said they; 'jump, for God's sake! The throttle valve is pulled clear out, and the engine is running wild.'

"To jump would have been instant death. As one of the boys said afterward, the telegraph poles looked like a fine tooth comb. The mile posts flew by with unseemly rapidity. The yard foreman claimed that a mile was covered in thirty-eight seconds, and not one would doubt his word. St. Joe was in sight. Would the track be clear? Only three miles to Garrett, with its network of tracks, switches and spurs! The steam gauge registered ninety pounds. There was no hopes of the engine dying out in five or six minutes. With presence of mind the foreman dashed off a few words:

"This he dropped as we passed St. Joe, and the operator, clear to comprehend the situation, sent it to the dispatcher on the east end without a 'call,' as we learned afterward. There was Garrett in sight, with its tall chimneys belching forth smoke; there were the yards filled with freight cars and engines. As we got closer we could see the men hurrying hither and thither. The other yard engine was rushing madly to the west end of the yard. The main track was clear. We passed the depot like a pursued victim. Pale faces watched us in our mad flight. We passed the railroad shops, and hundreds came running to see the cause of the commotion. The engine was in a quiver; the bell was ringing wildly with each sway of the engine; the escaping steam whistled as if demented, and fires blazed from the hot boxes. Then we saw something that made us think we were doomed.

"The switch to the coal chute was open, and the long ascent could only end in our destruction. We looked again, saw men working on the track, and then we knew we were saved. What were they doing? Why, bless my soul, friend, those fellows were oiling the track up the chute. We struck the ascent and slid up about 100 feet; and then the old 642 stood still and the wheels flew around; sparks came from beneath them like from an emery wheel. Gradually the engine slid down, the wheels still in the forward motion, and thus the engine died out. We all suffered a severe shock to our nervous systems, but had it not been for the presence of mind of the master mechanic, who ordered the oil poured on the chute track, I might not have been here today."

"And how fast did you go?"

"Well, the first six miles were made in less than five minutes; the last three were made in much slower time, as the steam was exhausting itself rapidly."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

New Trout.

In the last ten years five names have been added to the list of trout known in American lakes and streams. Two new species have been found—the Salvelinus Sunapee of Lake Sunapee, N. H., which was first noticed in 1881, but was not recognized as a new species until 1885, and the "yellow fin trout" (Salmo Mykiss Macdonaldi) of Colorado, which was named as an independent species in 1889. In addition three imported species—the common brown trout of Europe, the German saibling and the Lock Leven trout from Scotland—have found American homes.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Quick Wit.

FREMONT'S CARAVAN PROJECT.

Across the American Desert Before the Iron Track Was Thought Of.

Mrs. M. A. Bingham, widow of the late Gen. Bingham, met Gen. John C. Fremont in Kansas City in the days before the war, and has many incidents to relate of the Pathfinder. One of the most interesting refers to the meeting of Senator Benton and Gen. Fremont in this city forty years ago to discuss the establishment of a caravan route to California.

"I met Gen. Fremont along in the fifties," remarked Mrs. Bingham. "He came here and stopped several days at the famous Gillis house. I remember taking dinner with him. He was regarded as a brave, adventurous, daring spirit. We looked upon him very much as people of today look upon Stanley. At the time Gen. Fremont was in Kansas City planning for a caravan to travel across the great American desert. His right hand man in this project was Lieut. Beale, a civil engineer, educated at West Point. The father-in-law of Gen. Fremont, Senator Benton, was also here, and regarded the caravan scheme with favor. They proposed to import camels from Africa and use them in transporting goods overland along the route known as the Santa Fe trail. The camels were imported at a considerable expense, but the trip was found impracticable. The camels could not stand the climate. It was proposed to winter them in Texas or Southern California, but the project fell through, and the promoters of the scheme lost considerable money.

"I shall never forget," continued Mrs. Bingham, "how one bright sunny morning Gen. Fremont rode away from Kansas City on his way to California, looking every inch a soldier in his handsome uniform and military trappings. Reining his steed to one side, he said laughingly to me; 'When I come back, get your saddle ready and I will give you a ride on one of my camels.' I never had the privilege of taking that ride. Gen. Fremont soon forgot the camel scheme, and went off to new fields. The camel idea seemed perfectly feasible and practicable, but the idea of a Pacific railroad seemed preposterous. While discussing the caravan project Senator Benton said to me: 'You are young, but you will live to see the iron cars start from Kansas City and cross the mountains to the Pacific slope. I am old. I shall never live to see it. But I have confidence in the country, and I believe in the future of the railroad. This little town of 300 inhabitants will yet become one of the great cities of the world.'

"I could not comprehend such a project. I was surprised at its magnitude. Visions of my school days of the great American desert, second only to Sahara in size, the geographies said, came flitting through my brain, and I remarked:

"'But, senator, how about the great American desert? How can they ever cross it?'

"'That is nothing,' he replied. Standing in the moonlight on the portico of the famous old Gillis house, impressive and majestic in manner, the aged senator has seemed to me ever since a prophet. The caravan, which seemed so plausible, a failure—the Pacific road, which seemed so far away, a success. Who can tell what to expect?"—Kansas City Times.

The "Potato Cure."

The removal of foreign bodies from the stomach by the so called potato cure consists in requiring the patient to eat large quantities of potatoes, which have the effect of proportionately dilating the whole intestinal canal, so that the foreign body is enveloped and cannot cling to any part during its passage. Dr. Salzer showed at the clinic of Professor Billroth several foreign bodies which in this way had been removed—one of these being a weight of five and a half drams, which had been swallowed by a child; the second a set of artificial teeth upward of five centimeters long and three centimeters broad, and the third was a needle. Many gastrotomies could be obviated by this method in the case of swallowed foreign bodies.—Exchange.

Diplomacy.

"Papa," said the young mother, "I've decided on a name for baby; we will call her Imogen."

Papa was lost in thought for a few minutes; he did not like the name, but if he opposed it his wife would have her own way.

"That's nice," said he presently. "My first sweetheart was named Imogen, and she will take it as a compliment."

"We will call her Mary, after my mother," was the stern reply.—Harper's Bazar.

The Dog in Humane Literature.

Every now and then we get a letter from one of those unfortunate people who would be glad to have all the dogs exterminated. To such we would say, you might as well attempt to strike out the gospel of St. John from the New Testament as the songs, stories and pictures of the dog from our humane literature. The world has settled that matter long ago, and through the ages the dog will occupy a high place in the regard and affection of millions of human beings.—Our Dumb Animals.

It Made a Slight Difference.

Wm. E. Durgin of the Boston Loan Co., 275 Washington street, says: I recommend Sulphur Bitters as the very best medicine I have ever used. There is nothing like them to give an appetite, tone up the system, and do away with that languid feeling which is so frequent among those confined indoors.

Connecticut Democrats are not in a very harmonious condition, the disposition of the free trade element to take passession of and administer on the effects of the party being strenuously resented by the tobacco raisers and other protectionists.

A Kalamazoo census enumerator not only asked all the fool questions on the blanks, but also inquired the politics of every person he canvassed. He took the political census in a little book and now wants to realize on the information he obtained by selling the book.

The Turquoise.

The following anecdote quoted by Emanuel, a writer on gem lore, from an old treatise on precious stones, illustrates the peculiar value which this class of gems derived from superstition. "One of my relatives," runs the story, "possessed a turquoise set in a gold ring which he used to wear on his finger as a superior ornament. It happened that the owner of the ring was seized with a malady of which he died. During the whole period in which the wearer enjoyed his full health the turquoise was distinguished for unparalleled beauty and clearness; but scarcely was he dead when the stone lost its luster and assumed a faded, withered appearance, as if mourning for its master. This sudden change in the nature of the stone made me lose the desire I originally entertained of purchasing it, which I might have done at a trifling sum, and so the turquoise passed into other hands. However, no sooner did it obtain a new owner when it regained its former exquisite freshness and lost all traces of its temporary defects. I felt greatly vexed that I had lost the chance of procuring such a valuable and sensitive gem."

This is not an infrequent occurrence I think. One of my own little daughters—a child, at the time, of 9—was quite ill with a bilious fever. She wore a turquoise ring which had been presented her at Christmas, and of which she was very fond. One day she called to me in great distress, "Oh, mamma, my pretty ring is spoiled." I went to look at it, and saw that it had indeed lost its luster and its beautiful blue and was dull and queerish in tint. I then told her the story of the turquoise, and asked her to notice as she grew better if the color and liveliness came back to the stone. She did so, and it was with great joy that on her recovery the turquoise in her ring was as blue and pure as ever. Whatever her elders may say to her the child firmly believes that her ring will tell her when she is ill.—Sally Joy White in Ladies' Home Journal.

Tower of Babel.

Three different piles of ruins in Babylonia claim the distinction of being remnants of the original tower, the building of which caused the confusion of tongues. A full account of this remarkable semi-historical event may be found in the eleventh chapter of Gensis. The first of the three ruins above mentioned is the celebrated Nimrud's tower, near Akkurkef; the second on the east bank of the Euphrates river, five miles above the modern city of Hillah; third, the conical mound known as Birs Nimrud, six miles and a half southwest of the city last named above—all in Babylonia. Biblical scholars throw the weight of their opinions in favor of Birs Nimrud as being the site of the proposed heaven penetrating shaft.

The ruins at this point, which consist mainly of kiln bricks, huge stones and vitrified mortar, almost hidden from sight by sands, the accumulations of centuries, are 198 feet in height and nearly 800 yards in circumference. Sir R. K. Porter, who has given much study to the Birs Nimrud ruins, believes its vitrified appearance to be the results of numerous lightning strokes, conclusions which, taken in connection with the tradition that the tower was destroyed by fire from heaven, forms an interesting subject for thought. Porter also says that, with the exception of natural accumulation and decay, the tower is, in his estimation, almost in the exact condition as left at the time of the confusion.—St. Louis Republic.

Shooting by Motor Power.

Electricity is becoming an important factor in all calculations pertaining to warfare. The latest conception in this line is the firing of Gatling guns by electric motor power. The Crocker-Wheeler Motor company now have in their new shop a Colt Gatling gun, to which they propose to attach one of their motors, by the operation of which it will be possible to fire 1,000 per minute. The heating of the barrels will be the only limitation to rapidity of firing. By the hand method it is possible to discharge 500 shots per minute. One thousand shots a minute would soon annihilate an army.—New York Journal.

A Bandit's Wife and Son

Little Jesse James, the son of the dead bandit, is making quite an income out of the sale of pebbles from his father's grave to tourists who frequent the old homestead at Kearney, Mo. Mrs. Jesse James is a pretty, quiet little woman, who fully appreciated the devotion of her husband. She says that her husband was at all times kind and attentive, "yet he was a criminal in the eyes of the law, and finally met an ignominious death by being shot in the back by the paid assassin of Governor Crittenden."—Interview in Denver Republican.

When Lawn Tennis Was Started.

Lawn tennis was introduced in England, and first bore the queer title of sphairistike. Under this title it was patented by Maj. Wingfield, but it was not till 1876 that it really began to take the public fancy. The first championship ever competed for was held at Wimbledon on July 9, 1877, when there were only twenty-two entries.—Chatter.

Self Convicted.

He (savagely)—I am convinced, madam, that you made a fool of me when I married you.

She (calmly)—How inconsistent you are, my dear. Haven't you insisted all along that you are a self made man?—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Big Money in Theatres.

The number of new and pretty theatres which sprang up like mushrooms in the far west has fallen off, many of their projectors—knowing nothing about the theatrical business having failed; but those that have been built within a few years are marvels of beauty and convenience, not alone for the audience, but for the actors, who will not any longer dress in filthy and cold dressing rooms. And why should they when the total receipts from all kinds of theatrical performances throughout the United States during the forty-two weeks of what is called a theatrical season amounts to over thirty millions of good American dollars, worth just one hundred cents each?

The Dow Liquor Taxing law in Ohio, which the Democrats antagonized so vehemently, has brought to the public treasury the past year $2,500,000.

Woman's Column.

Free and Equal.

The following address was given by A. E. Mason at the recent Indianapolis lawn fete in aid of the equal suffrage amendment campaign in South Dakota:

We are met to celebrate the glory of equality. From of old, Englishmen declared that all men ought to be free, but it was a Frenchman who first added the words "and equal."

There is in these days a movement in society, world-wide, which sets toward human equality. Commencing in the last century, gathering power in each generation, it has increased until it forms the most significant fact of the age. It demands the abolition of all conventional and artificial inequalities in the relations of life. The flood is out, and beyond the power of man to stop. It carries on its bosom a thousand reforms.

With us, it has abolished kings and a hereditary nobility. It has equalized taxation. At death, it divides the property equally among the children. In fashion, it has done away with liveries, and dresses master and servant in precisely the same costume. It has changed the relations of parent and child, of husband and wife, of teacher and pupil, of employer and employee; has brought them nearer together, made them more nearly equal. It has placed the pew on a level with the pulpit; has achieved the extension of suffrage; has caused the State to provide equal education for its children, and equal charities for its unfortunate.

Of this movement, Burns is the poet, Dickens the novelist, Millet the artist, and John Stuart Mill the philosopher.

The woman's suffrage movement is, therefore, only a part of this great modern revolution, still unfinished, having for its object human equality. When Rousseau's splendid but diseased genius flamed across Europe, by its light men saw that the "perpetual, natural, unceasing and indefeasible sovereign" was the people. Yet the new forms of government, both in America and in France, were to some extent recast in the old mould of barbarism. The mounting wave could roll no higher. As in the most primitive stages of society, the political unit was made the family, and not the individual.

The subjection of woman comes down to us from the earliest times. It strikes its roots into that ancient law which gave the father despotic power over his children. Trace back these notions far enough, and you will find their source in caves and hollow logs, the homes of our naked forefathers. There, with foreheads an inch high and teeth an inch long, club in hand, they founded the empire of force, the despotism of the family. The fireside was the first place for the spirit of monarchy to enter, and is the last place for the spirit of democracy to penetrate.

The progress of civilization is a warfare, a war of light with darkness, of truth with falsehood, of the illuminated intellect and the rectified heart with the barbarism of ignorance and the animalism of the savage. Let us, as far as in us lies, help to carry forward civilization. Let us welcome new ideas, and every reform which seeks to destroy artificial inequalities among mankind. Let us no longer deprive woman of the ballot. Let us open to her every path in life, so that she may freely choose that for which her nature best fits her.

On the sunburnt plains of the West, this new movement is now carried on by braver pioneers than those who first penetrated its unpeopled solitudes. Let us believe that the pioneers of this reform, no less than they who crossed the plains in covered wagons and built their cabins by the river-side, are engaged in a warfare with savage barbarism. To these new pioneers, let us send to-night this message of hope, "Be of good cheer, you will overcome the world."

Mrs. Willing says, apropos of the discussion on the admission of women to the Methodist General Conference: "Miriam was in the General Conference of God's Church, for it is said: 'He led the people forth by Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.'"

Miss Eleanor McAllister, M. D., of Newburgh, N. Y., has been appointed assistant physician at the Buffalo State Asylum for the Insane. She held a similar position in Willard Asylum last winter and spring, by appointment, to fill a temporary vacancy.

A Danish lady, Froken Neilson, has founded an institution in Paris at 28 Rue Des Acacias, to supply for the sick, nurses speaking all the principal languages. These nurses can be sent to any part of France, or even to foreign countries, if desired. There is also in connection a school for the training of nurses.

The Women's Industrial Union of Vienna has 771 regular members and 94 others, is worth $70,000, and supports 16 schools and courses of study, attended by 1,666 pupils, 248 of them in a high school. Though the tuition is necessarily high to support these schools, they are completely filled. Many of the girls are educated by charity.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

Use of Cold Water.

Fresh cold water is a powerful absorbent of gases. A bowl of water placed under the bed of the sick room and frequently changed is among the valuable aids in purifying the air. The room in which the London aldermen sit is purified by open vessels of water placed in different parts of the room. It can be easily inferred from this that water standing for any length of time in a close room is unfit for drinking. It has frequently been observed that restless and troubled sleep has been corrected easily by placing an open vessel of water near the head of the bed.

Literary Notices.

The numbers of LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for September 20, and 27, contain The Change of Government in Germany, Chairs by the River, Odd Foods, Chapters from Some Unwritten Memoirs, Part II., Kings of Sweden and Holland, Cardinal Newman, The Lost Lakes of New Zealand, A Great Russian Police Officer, Robert Browning, Progress in Japan, The Modern Spirit in Rome, Dryden and Scott, Eight Days, Part IV., Five O'clock Tea, and poetry and miscellany. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each the subscription price (8) is low; Littell & Co., Boston are the publishers.

HARPER'S MONTHLY for October comes laden with good things, literary and pictorial. Its papers are uncommonly interesting, bright and timely, as the following partial enumeration of the table of contents will show: Agricultural Chili which is illustrated with 14 fine pictures of life and scenes in that distant South American country; Antoine's Mooseyard, another profusely illustrated paper of much interest; Nights at Newstead Abbey, the home of Lord Byron with several spirited pictures; New Moneyes of Lincoln's Administration; Reminiscences of N. P. Welles and Lydia Maria Child; stories, poetry, etc.

The October ARENA is a credit to Boss-Boston. The table of contents embraces the names of many leading thinkers, among whom are Dr. George F. Shrady, and Prof. James T. Bixby. The No-Name paper is on the Post-master-General and the Censorship of Moral. W. H. H. Murray pleads manner for an endowed press. [A fine photogravure of Mr. Murray forms the frontispiece of this issue]. Prof. W. S. Scarborough, a scholarly colored man, whose portrait adorns a page in this issue, ably argues the cause of his people. Prof. Sheridan P. Wait writes in a most brilliant and fascinating manner on the Symbolic Characters of the Old Testament. Gen. Marcus J. Wright describes the Prorogation of the British Parliament. Rev. Edward P. Foster writes in defence of Christian Socialism. Abby Morton Diaz contributes Development of Character in Schools. Our Unchurched Millions, while distinctly radical, is provocative of thought. Rev. T. Ernest Allen contributes a short story. A short poem written by the wife of ex Senator Grover closes the leading papers of this brilliant issue. The Notes on Living Problems are as timely as they are able. Cyrus Field Willard calls attention to the evils of Trusts; Edward A. Oldham contributes a timely paper on the Great Political Upheaval in the South; C. A. Seiders criticises Senator Hampton on the Race Problem. The Editorial Notes deal with the death penalty and the alarming symptons too manifest to even casual observers of the growing contempt for law. Taken as a whole, the October ARENA surpasses in excellence any issue of this able review that has yet appeared.

The Lexington Republicans set a good example, not only by turning out in good numbers at their caucus, but by adopting vigorous resolutions commending Speaker Reed and approving the Federal Elections bill.

MARIETTA'S IDEAL.

Marietta Polli stood at the corner of one of the side streets of Naples, past which the great post road from Gaeta to Policrasta ran. She had her small, rough table near by, and she played her guitar, singing the while to her accompaniment. Her entire property consisted of the already mentioned rough and rudely painted table, a colored saucer that stood upon it and in which the passers by now and then dropped a coin, and her guitar—for by profession she was a street singer.

Every morning found Marietta at her stand. She placed the empty saucer upon the table, and taking the guitar sang from 7 until 8 o'clock sacred songs, from 8 o'clock until 12 songs from the best known operas. Then from noon until evening national love songs. During the evening she sang a miscellaneous collection of character songs. As soon as it grew dark a small lamp with a red shade was lighted and placed upon the table near the saucer. As the clock struck the hour of 11 Marietta blew out her light, drew the strap of her guitar over her shoulder, emptied the saucer of its contents into her pocket, and hanging the lamp on a bracket fastened in the wall above her stand raised the table to the top of her head and walked off. Her nights were spent in the hall of a house which was regularly closed at 12 o'clock. In this hall a shoe mender kept his working bench, and it was upon this bench that Marietta made her bed. Marietta was one of a family. Her mother made her living by selling pocket handkerchiefs, opera glasses, cigars, spectacles and any other such things which her light fingered boys picked from the pockets of strangers and residents alike.

Mme. Polli understood the business well, and knew how to keep the boys at work. But some days trade was not good and then they had to go hungry. Once a week they all met at the "grand promenade" ground. Then Marietta gave each boy an orange and some chestnuts, and to the mother some money. Soon she would leave them and disappear among the crowd. The boys passed their nights in boxes, under baskets, or on the ships in the harbor. At noon they always joined their mother in one of the "macaroni kitchen's," where they delivered their wares and fed themselves upon macaroni cooked in oil, stewed apples and fried fish, all of which they procured for fifty centesimi, and, if business had been brisk, they would spend sixty or seventy centesimi. Then they left, parting each for his place of business.

So lived this family of Polli, whether it was right or wrong, making the most of their talents.

Marietta was the most respectable of them all, for she dressed well, spent her nights regularly upon her bench, and also earned quite a sum of money. Her brothers reckoned she must make as much as three lires a day, during some parts of the year, and they often wondered whither it could be that she carried the money, and what became of it. This was a question which puzzled both mother and brothers, but only in times of great needs were calls made upon Marietta's bounty, and then she gave sparingly, but yet enough.

Marietta's beauty was well known From her father, who by birth was a Roman, she inherited her wonderfully fine figure, her clear, broad forehead, and her beautiful eyes. From her Sicilian mother, her handsome nose, the small, firm mouth, and the wealth of black, curly hair, which blew about her when she threw back her head in the act of singing, and the melancholy look which came into her eyes as she sang, but which changed into a smile if by chance some passer-by favored her with a bit of money.

With men in general she had little to say, yet, as she passed along in her singing, her neighbor upon the corner (who sat all day behind a basket of dried pumpkin seeds, across the top of which was arranged a board, upon which were displayed the seeds) would stop a moment now and then to talk. The profession of street singer had, even among her class, a certain social standing, and she was thought to be a good girl and had the respect of all, many a wealthy family helping her by gift of clothes. Even the old "Principal Dorandi," as he passed her stand each morning upon his way to the Palazzo used to speak to her, and he left her at his death ten hundred lires.

Marietta demanded a great deal of respect, and strangers who dared to smile upon her received only cold looks and scornful frowns. Even the most flattering remarks upon her beauty were without avail. A suitor from the "Hotel de Rome," with his gold braided coat, was dismissed with a great deal of contempt. This was occasioned somewhat by Marietta's ideal. Her great wish, and that which possessed both heart and mind of the Neapolitans of her standing, was that of being a proprietor of a one horse coach, which can be driven through the entire city, and which both rich and poor alike might use. Marietta not only dreamed of some one who might own one, but Sunday afternoons, when she did not sing, she, dressed in her light blue holiday dress, with the pale yellow kerchief and red gold hoops in her pink, shell like ears, would pay one lire for a drive from one end of the city to the other and back, being the entire course.

So great was her happiness in this ride that as she rode along she gazed out as proud as a queen, her eyes sparkling, and she as joyous as if it were her very own. Many were the young men who were pleased with Marietta, and many were the offers which she rejected on all sides, for none possessed the one thing necessary. Whether all coachmen came into the world married was a question Marietta often asked herself. She displayed a great deal of tact with these carriage drivers, for no sooner had she taken her seat in the carriage than she ascertained whether they were married, and she was in great despair in not being able to find one unmarried.

So time passed on, but no driver came in Marietta's way who wanted to make her his wife. The much dreaded five-and-twenty years crept nearer. At this age Italian women begin to lose their beauty, and Marietta thought with horror that she could not hope to be an exception. She knew that when another year came she could no longer stand at the street corners without being laughed at. The profession belonged to youth and beauty alone, and she had no other way by which to earn her bread. What should she do? At a school she had never been, and she was not rapid enough with her hands to procure an engagement in a factory. Then, too, in Naples there are not so many such places to be had, and what there were were filled by underpaid girls. To be a water carrier was the only thing left, and yet in every second house could be found many doing the same thing, and the business was almost overrun anyway by boys. To do as her mother did she could not, for she knew what was right and prided herself upon her honesty. There came an idea to her. From a friend who had traveled she learned that in Switzerland there were women doctors and women telegraph operators, and the friend, after telling her of several other positions held by women, ended by saying:

Now Marietta thought in her little head that if all these places were filled by women, and as no coachman came for her, why should not she offer herself as a coachwoman? It would be a perfectly respectable vocation, and no one could say her nay. Then, too, one would have the pleasure of riding all the long day through, and all the while receive pay for doing it. Then, as first coachwoman in Naples, she would be very much more admired than as a street singer, and in a short time she could give up and live upon the interest of the money that she had earned. This was the conclusion to which Marietta came, after hours spent in deep and earnest thought. It was not anything strange to her, a street singer; so, when she had arranged it clearly in her mind, she was very happy. She took her bank book to the wife of the shoe mender, to reckon her interest for her and she found (a fact which Marietta well remembered) that she had 930 lires, that she had saved from the money gathered on the street, and which was held in safe keeping for her at the national bank.

Beside her strong, clear voice, Marietta had a genuine ability to make a bargain; so she betook herself to a cousin of hers who was still young and had saved for herself some money. She offered her the stand with table and guitar if she would like to buy. The cousin entered gladly into the advantageous bargain, and the next morning those who passed that corner of the Strada San Ferdinando, found in the place of the stately beauty Marietta, a very sallow young person, around whose neck was the well worn green ribbon upon which hung the old guitar, and who sung to it as if she were singing out her very life, standing by the weather stained table.

Marietta hastened to the widow of a lately deceased carriage driver. She was close and hard to drive a bargain with, but she succeeded in procuring from her a rather lean horse, a carriage, painted but recently a bright red, a new rug, and two brilliant lanterns under the driver's seat. Happy was she in the possession of these costly things, for which she had been obliged to part with 700 lires. After this bargain, she went to Melito, a short distance from Naples, whence an omnibus went regularly to Naples, seating herself by the driver, who for her ride money, taught her to drive. He looked upon the affair as fun that brought in money, and he was willing to aid her. So Marietta rode eight-and-twenty times the four hours' route, and after that apprenticeship, she thought herself well taught.

One day she presented herself at the place were carriages are usually hired in Naples. It was strange to her, and a trifle awkward, too, when she placed the lacquered hat upon the curly hair and held her whip in her hand. The streets were strange, too, with the many passers by, as she stood or sat waiting for some one to drive. Hardly had she been ten minutes at her place before people began to stop and look. Soon a large crowd collected about her. The police soon followed. There were two sergeants with their large hats, two officers with their gray mantles, but without numbers, two ordinary officers with their black coats and numbers, and several others whose business it was to keep the peace. They laid hands upon horse and carriage at the same time and demanded her license papers. Marietta had none. She had not known the need.

"Your carriage has a number, but your lanterns have been cleaned—as they should be—and you have neglected to replace the numbers upon them. What have you to say? Explain yourself!"

"You have no license?" remarked one of them.

"No," answered Marietta.

"Follow us, then, to the central office, to the chief of police."

He turned and looked at one of the officers. Marietta was very pale and shook so that the horse became uneasy and pricked up his ears.

"Come down and hand over to us the horse and carriage," said the officer.

Poor Marietta began to cry, at which the gathering crowd laughed loud and long. During the conversation so many had gathered that not a few were the remarks made upon a woman being a carriage driver. They had heard of different things being done by women, but never before of a horse and carriage for hiring having a woman as a driver.

Some shouted:

"Marietta, the singer, turned coachwoman!"

For among the crowd were those who knew her, and they were very much interested to see how all this would end.

Marietta moaned and cried, but did not move to come down from the box. She knew not what she did, from fear and anger. The crowd began to take sides, they waved their hats, shouted and pushed each other from side to side. The police showed they had little control. Through the crowd a young man pushed his way, and rather impertinently, yet quickly, stood beside the carriage.

"What is the matter?" he asked, breathlessly.

"She has no license."

"I have one, but no carriage. I will take this one," he continued, in rather a loud voice.

He was a fine looking young man, but poorly clad, and in every way showing that the world had not gone very well with him.

"May I do so?" he called to Marietta, who was still upon the box, at the same time handing to one of the police a rather soiled paper which he took from his pocket. Marietta, from fright, understood nothing.

One of the police then spoke:

"The signor has a license and will be responsible for you."

Marietta did not yet understand.

"He wants to marry me?" she shouted.

At this the crowd became more noisy. The tears stood in her eyes as peal upon peal of laughter rang out upon the air.

"That I don't know," replied the sergeant, but he added, smiling: "Perhaps he will. Now, however, he will, with his license, take charge of your horse and carriage, for even had you a license, as a woman you would not be allowed to drive about Naples. You understand now?" said the sergeant.

The shouts of the crowd rent the air. They cheered him for such gallantry in taking charge of the carriage, and wished all happiness to the signorina.

Marietta left the box. Thankfully she held out her hand to her preserver, who looked pleasantly at the round face, framed in with the wealth of black curls, and her dark, sparkling eyes.

"My good people," said the sergeant, "you must follow me to the office, where the number of this carriage must be entered in your permit, before it will be correct. Do you give this horse and carriage to this license?" he said, turning to Marietta.

"Yes," she answered, and looked her thanks as she lifted her eyes to those of her new friend, who from his sallow complexion and general ways, betrayed his Neapolitan birth.

"Please seat yourself in the carriage," said the sergeant to Marietta. He till now had managed, and he intended to continue to do so. Marietta did not feel so proud as she was wont to do upon the Sunday drives, yet she was quite contented as she entered the carriage.

The young man mounted the box. The sergeant shouted, "Make room," and slowly, guarded by six policemen and followed by a large crowd, the carriage was driven to the police station.

It was but a short time before everything was arranged for all parties satisfactorily. Marietta gave up her horse and carriage to the young man with a license, but who was without a horse or carriage. So it followed that she found her ideal in reality. After a few weeks they concluded to marry, and in a short time the husband was able to keep another horse, and then their prosperity was assured. They were very happy together, although she was some years his senior, and he could never refuse her anything.

On Sunday afternoons she took her usual ride with the married man; but the difference was that the driver belonged solely to her, and was proud to have her for the occupant of his carriage.—Translated from the German by A. M. F. for New York Ledger.

Literary Notices.

Noticeable in this month's ST. NICHOLAS is the article Through a Detective Camera, by Mr Black, the well-known amatuer, and illustrated with bits of child life; the street scenes are as perfect as insects in amber; the hokey-pokey ice-cream man is a genre picture complete, and his Italian baby is a history of a down-trodden vace in miniature. Frederic Villiers tells of his narrow escape from asphyxia. A real juvenile story is Betty's By and By. Another story with a sly moral administered is The Gwynnes' Little Donkey. This tells of the substitution of a pet donkey for the overworked drudge of a tinker's cart. A novelty is An Old English Folk-song. Other features are a short illustrated life of Edward the Sixth; a toothsome poem by James Whitcomb Riley; a bright story by J. O. Davidson; a clever poem designed to teach the hollowness of kings and queens, grandeur, and many other bright pictures, clever hits in verse, well-sustained departmental attractions, and all the serials. The man who can not find interesting reading in this number should consult his physician.

The October CENTURY opens with a frontispiece portrait of Joseph Jefferson. The last instalment of the autobiography accompanies the familiar face, an instalment which the author considers the most important of all, perhaps because it contains, at considerable detail, his own final reflections upon the art of which he is an acknowledged master. It is doubtful whether such subtle and at the same time practical suggestions can be found elsewhere from a source so authoritative. Professor Darwin, of Cambridge, England, a worthy son of a great father, contributes a paper of high and original value on Meteorites and the History of Stellar Systems. A striking photograph of a nebula, in which a system like our own solar system seem to be in actual formation, accompanies this remarkable paper. Among other fresh and able papers may be mentioned: A Hard Road to Travel Out of Dixie, Prehistoric Cave-Dwellings, Letters from Japan, The Women of the French Salons, Women in American Literature, Olivia, Brica-brac, Open Letters, Topics of the Times, etc. It is a prime number.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists. Sample bottle free.

Antidote for a Bee's Sting.

A correspondent of the Leeds (England) Mercury writes: As beekeepers, experienced and inexperienced, are now operating on their stocks stings will frequently be received. One of the most simple and effective antidotes I am acquainted with is to poison a piece of washing soda and rub the stung part with it. If this is done at once it will remove the pain and prevent swelling. Whenever I go to do anything to the bees, I invariably put a piece of soda in my waiscoat pocket.

"Just as Good,"

Say some dealers who try to sell a substitute preparation when a customer calls for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not allow any such false statements as this induce you to buy what you do not want. Remember that the only reason for making it is that a few cents more profit will be made on the substitute. Insist upon having the best medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is Peculiar to Itself.

Ordinary carriage varnish makes a very good cement for china. If the pieces are put together neatly the fracture will hardly be perceptible. The piece of china after being mended can be washed, provided the water used be not too hot.

The baby has its preference as well as anybody, and the taste of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup renders it acceptable to every infant. Price 25 cents.

It is a mean thing to be suffering from catarrh, still many people go on torturing themselves, when they might find almost instant relief by using Old Saul's Catarrh Cure.

Failures in Life.

People fail in many ways. In business, in morality, in religion, in happiness, and in health. A weak heart is often an unsuspected cause of failure in life. If the blood does not circulate properly in the lungs, there is shortness of breath, asthma, etc.; in the brain, dizziness, headache, etc.; in the stomach, wind, pain, indigestion, faint spells, etc.; in the liver, torpidity, congestion, etc. Paine in the left side, shoulder and stomach is caused by heart strain. For all these maladies Dr. Miles' New Cure for the heart and lungs is the best remedy. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

The use of heavy silk feather stitching on house dresses is quite noticeable. For blouses and breakfast jackets it seems specially appropriate, and there can hardly be too much of it.

To My Friends.

As you are well aware that I would not recommend that which I did not believe to be good, I desire to say to all who need a good, reliable, family medicine, that I believe one bottle of Sulphur Bitters will do you more good than any other remedy I ever saw.—REV. CEPHAS SOULE.

Uncut velvet ribbons are much liked, and are very pretty when combined with a satin ribbon of the same color and shade.

TROUBLE IN THE CAMP.

It grieves us to think that candidate Fox is not finding plain sailing into General Bank's old Congressional shoes. We fear he is encountering adverse breezes, squalls, rough seas, with signs of cyclones looming up over Somerville, Arlington, etc., and that there is danger that he may not make port after all.

This bit of an item from the Boston Herald of Wednesday morning looks ominous for Candidate Fox. The gentlemen named in it are influential Republicans and citizens. When such men gig back in the harness it means something: in this case it means that Candidate Fox will have a rough and rugged road to go over before he gets to Congress, even if he should make the riffles at last. This is the item referred to:

"Some of the things that happened at the meeting of the 5th Congressional Republican District Committee on Monday afternoon at the headquarters, No. 2A Beacon street, have just come out. The committee labored for an hour with Hon. Edward Glines of Somerville to induce him to take the chairmanship and have charge of the campaign work of Candidate Fox, but he refused to accept the place. Beside this, Hon. John Haskell Butler of Somerville, who presided at the convention at which Mr. Fox was nominated, Warren Pierce of Arlington and George Close of Cambridge sent letters declining to serve on the committee."

This has a bad look: the JOURNAL deeply laments it.

It cannot be that Candidate Fox's little "celebration" on Mt. Washington and at Fabyan's a week ago last Sunday night had any effect in causing the above named gentlemen to decline to act as his blowers and strikers in this campaign. True, they are moral people and some of them churchmen, but it does not seem possible that they could be so narrow and hide-bound as to seriously object to Candidate Fox's little "time" with a few boon companions away up there in the Mountains out of sight and sound of everybody almost. Perhaps they do not have much of a Sunday up there anyway.

It is claimed that the gentlemen named in the above item represent a very respectable and sizeable element in the Republican party in the 5th District. If so there is trouble ahead for Candidate Fox.

The JOURNAL, as an organ of the Republican party of this District, cannot refrain from expressing its deep regret at the dissatisfaction of prominent party men over Capt. Fox's nomination for General Banks's place.

IT IS UN-AMERICAN.

Congressman Lodge of the Sixth District has an article in the October Century in which he tries, but fails, to show that "Patronage in Office is un-American." The most of his history is probably all right enough, but the same cannot be truthfully said of the arguments which he bases on it. He admits that Presidents Washington, John Adams, Jefferson, Madison and Jackson advocated and practiced the "spoils system," as Mr. Lodge and his brother reformers (!) choose to call the practice that has nearly always prevailed in the distribution of government offices in this country; but then, those old fogies were exceedingly "un-American" in their ideas of how administrations ought to be "run." Their notions respecting the distribution of patronage were very crude indeed, but they ought not to be blamed for that because there were no Mr. Lodges in their days to learn them better. If it had been otherwise they might not have adhered so tenaciously to the good old doctrine that "to the victor belongs the spoils," nor carried it out with so much disregard for the feelings of the other side.

But really, does it not seem funny for a young person like Mr. Lodge to set himself up as a "bigger man" than Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and others of those old worthies whom the American people have been taught from infancy to old age to honor and revere for their wisdom and patriotism?

Everybody admits that Mr. Lodge is a very able man but modesty does not appear to be the most conspicuous of his many shining virtues.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE.

Nobody pretends that anything can justly be said against Mr. Mark C. Felch of this city as a man or member of community; nevertheless in view of their propensity to blunder, it was a wonder that the Democratic Senatorial convention held last Tuesday nominated him to represent the 5th District. Naturally we should have looked for them to put up a man a good deal less able and on personal grounds not nearly so deserving as Mr. Felch, and just how they came to do so well in making their choice is a matter that cannot be explained on the score of precedent.

However, the Democrats of this District made choice of an intelligent and honest man for their Senatorial candidate, and it was done purely against the wishes of Mr. Felch who sent word to the convention in response to a telegram that he could not take the position.

Mr. Felch has however sent in his acceptance of the nomination and will make just as good a run as he can for an election. Of course he can't hope to come anywhere near to beating Capt. Wyer, but the two will make a very pretty fight of it and a brisk tussle always adds zest and interest to a campaign.

FOR STATE AUDITOR.

Hon. Charles R. Ladd, the present incumbent, has been placed in nomination for Auditor by the Republican State Committee in lieu of J. H. Gould who, on account of serious charges brought against his official integrity, retired from the field.

Col. Ladd should have been nominated at the Republican State convention for he was the first choice of the people, having filled the office with marked efficiency and to the entire satisfaction of the public for several years past.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDTES.

The Republicans of the 14th Middlesex Representative District held their convention in this city last Wednesday evening and nominated Elmore A. Pierce of Woburn, and Henry G. Kittredge of Reading, for candidates for the Legislature.

We know that the choice of Mr. Pierce is an excellent one, and the Reading folks say that Mr. Kittredge is equally deserving of support.

That both gentlemen will be elected hardly admits of question.

THEY ARE AFTER HIM.

The Boston Question Club are going for Candidate Fox of this District just now with picked sticks, so to speak. If his skin is anyways thin they will have it stretched across the collar-beam before snow flies.

Those professional Questioners are a tough lot.

OUR NEXT SENATOR.

The cordial reception which Capt. Wyer received at the Senatorial convention last week and the enthusiasm with which he was unanimously nominated are an assurance of a big victory for him at the polls on Nov. 4.

☞ The 17th Exhibition of the Mass. Char. Mech. Ass'n is now in full feather at their great building on Huntington Ave., Boston, and hundreds are visiting it daily. The report reaches the JOURNAL'S ears that it is one of the largest and best Fairs the Association has ever held.

☞ Senator George F. Hoar will please accept the JOURNAL'S thanks for a copy of the "Compendium of the Tenth Census."

— The names of the officers of the new Relief Corps 83 Sewing Society are: Mrs. M. B. Cutler, Mrs. E. J. Wendall, and Abby French.

— Tidies and splashers are the burden of Copeland and Bowser's advertisement. We would advise our readers to drop in and see them.

— The Prohibitionists of this Rep. Dis. last Monday evening, nominated Theodore Boutelle of Woburn, and Mr. Wight of Reading for Representative.

— Certain members of the Municipal Building Junto already begin to tremble in their boots. The ides of December is rapidly approaching.

— Mr. Samuel A. Grammer had 3 of the 8 Woburn delegates at the Representative convention Wednesday evening, which was not at all bad.

— Mr. Joseph P. Shields, druggist, is about to move into the store now occupied by Mr. Walsh in Mechanic Block corner of Main and Walnut street.

— Elmore A. Pierce, one of the Republican candidates for Representative, was born in Reading, and came to Woburn with his parents when 18 months old.

— The Ladies' Fair in the old Methodist meeting-house last Tuesday evening was a very successful one. There was a large attendance and a brisk sale of goods.

— The Woburn Woman's Club will hold its first meeting after the summer recess on Friday, Oct. 17, at 3 p. m. The exercises will be conducted by members of the club.

— Last week Prior said he had the largest and best lighted all round store in Mechanic Block; now the JOURNAL says it. Put the two say-sos together and who will try to gainsay them?

— Martha Sewell Curtis, the accomplished historical and literary writer of Burlington, is assisting Editress McBride in the Woman's Department of the Mechanic's Fair this week.

— Miss Nellie Calnan's benefit ball will be given in Lyceum Hall on the evening of the 15th instant. She is a contestant for the St. Patrick's Fair piano with a fair prospect of securing it.

— Last Sunday was one of the loveliest days of the year. Everything was flooded with sunshine from morning to night and a fine western breeze enhanced the charms of the beautiful autumnal Sabbath.

— Dr. Bartlett thinks he is solid for the Democratic nomination for Representative to-morrow evening. Not if some of the Municipal Building Junto know themselves, and they rather think they do.

— Miss Wilma F. Thompson, who for a number of years was Mr. Horton's telegraphic operater, left Rye Beach, where she passed the summer, two or three weeks ago and has since been visiting friends and family here.

— The M. E. Society expect to occupy the vestry of their new church for religious purposes in the course of a couple of weeks. The old meeting house was formally abandoned last Sunday when special exercises were held.

— Mr. Alex Grant, merchant tailor, will have a change in his card next week. In the mean time the public will please be informed that he has a fine stock of fall and winter cloths, to which he calls particular attention.

— The Burlington Fair Dinner was so good and abundant that we thought to be sure it was the product of some famous caterer, whereas it was the work of the maids and matrons of the old town herself. They had reason to be proud of it.

— A Buffet in the dining-room is better than a Sideboard, more modern, more beautiful, and less cumbersome. A large line of Oak Buffets, all styles and sizes, is offered this week by Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston, at exceedingly low prices.

— Capt. E. F. Wyer, Dr. S. W. Kelley, Col. A. L. Richardson, Mr. H. L. Flanders joined the New England party of excursionists in Boston last Saturday for a visit to Tennessee and Alabama. They are property owners in the mining regions of those States.

— Editor William F. Kenney returned from the West with the baseball companies and promply resumed his position of Day Editor of the Boston Globe on Monday morning. He goes back to the Editorial Tripod with health just about as sound as it ever was.

— Mr. James Skinner positively declined to allow his name to be used in the Democratic Senatorial Convention at Ayer Junction last Tuesday. He prefers to prosecute a successful private business to being a candidate for office. Mr. Skinner would make a good Senator.

— Mr. W. S. York and family returned from Rockport, where they spent the summer, last Monday all well and happy. They think Cape Ann affords about the best seaside resorts that can be found on the New England coast, and that Rockport is the fairest and best of them all.

— The cost of the job of plumbing which Forrest Hooper has done on the Stephen Dow mansion this season foots up to nearly $1,500. Hooper took it from the stump and replumbed it from celler to garret. It is probably the best piece of work that can be found in this section.

— Treasurer Buck, although able to visit his office and be around among folks on the streets, is not real robust yet. His illness was severe and lasted long enough to greatly reduce his strength, but that will return in full measure by and by and then Mr. Buck will be all right again.

— Mr. and Mrs. Chase Cole of Pleasant street arrived home from New Hampshire last Wednesday. They went up in their own team some 10 days before and would have remained a week longer had they not been compelled to return on account of the illness of their cook at home.

— E. E. Thompson and wife are expected to arrive home from the West to-day or to-morrow. Last week they visited Duluth at the invitation of their Western friends with which northern city and the trip to and fro they were well pleased. Both have had a pleasant time of it while away.

— Writing in a private note about Congressional matters in this District a correspondent (once a Woburn citizen) says: "I note with pleasure that Ed. F. Johnson is in the race with substantial backing. In him the young Republicans of the District will find a man whose cause they may be proud to advocate." True's preaching!

— Stoneham shouldn't be in too much of a hurry about putting on airs—the Meigs elevated road hasn't got there yet. Neither has the Middlesex Fells narrow gauge. We hope they will get the first named pretty soon for better transportation is needed between that handsome, wideawake town and Boston.

— Company G, 5th Mass. V. M. (Mechanic Phalanx) 58 strong, Capt. W. C. Parker in command, engaged with the rest of the Regiment in a big sham fight at Attleboro last Wednesday. Many military officers besides those of the 5th Regiment were present and witnessed with much interest the sport. It was a big affair.

— The quarterly meeting of the Middlesex Central Christian Endeavor Union will be held at the Baptist Church next Monday evening at 7.30. All interested in Christian Endeavor work are invited to attend this meeting. Mr. J. W. Barr, General Secretary of the United Society, will be present and deliver an address.

— The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited. —tf.

— Supt. Wentworth of the East Middlesex Street Railway Co. dropped in on the JOURNAL folks the other day and they all had a good chat together. He is a Down Easter of the strictest sect—a regular Maine-ite—and it would take strong arguments and heaps of them to convince him the Pine Tree State isn't a good deal the best of the lot. His head is level.

— Prof. A. M. Smith, a skilled phrenologist, has taken rooms in the Dr. Chase residence close to the Baptist Church on the Winn street side, for the purpose of practicing his profession in this city, and where he will maks phrenological examinations and give charts to all who apply. Prof. Smith evidently understands his business thoroughly, and, know ye, phrenology is a recognized science.

— The pupils of St. Charles parochial school assembled near the Common at noon last Tuesday for a street car ride to the new Park in honor of the 248th anniversary of the incorporation of Woburn, but the rain came pouring down and the ride had to be postponed. The public schools are to have a half holiday for the same purpose, and it is probable that the teachers of St. Charles school will also give their pupils another chance at it.

— Sunday, Sept. 29, was "Old People's Day" in the Congregational church at Stoneham, and as usual it was pleasantly observed. The religious services were of a special character appropriate to the occasion and very interesting. Deacon Silas Dean of the church sent a programme to the JOURNAL office on the 4th page of which were the names of 45 members whose ages ranged from 80 to 92 years, the general average being over 83 years, which is a remarkable record of longevity.

— Good progress is being made on the new M. E. Church and it will be ready for occupation by Jan. 1 in accordance with the contract if nothing happens to prevent. The contractor, Mr. George W. Kimball, is not only rapidly pushing the work to completion but he is making a first-class job of it. The building committee and church people are well pleased with Mr. Kimball's work and the speed with which he is bringing his contract to a close. Our Methodist brethren will have a fine edifice to worship in after the first of January next.

— The introduction of electric lights has not interfered with the profits of the Woburn Gas Company any. The consumption of gas in this city is increasing continually, and the dividends of the Company are as large as they were before electric lights came along. It is so always. In some way or another gas and electricity help each other and where they are run side by side more of each appears to be demanded. The Gas Co. have no reason to complain of their competitor, for their business and profits are growing right along, a fact which if some folks could have foreseen they would not have been in such a rush to sell their stock.

— Rev. John W. Day, son of Mrs. Julia A. Day of this city, and brother of Mr. George A. Day, cashier of the First National Bank of Woburn, was installed Pastor of "The Old Meeting House," or "Old Ship," at Hingham, one of the most ancient of New England churches, last Wednesday. The services were on an elaborate scale and were conducted by several famous Unitarian clergymen besides the new pastor, assisted by a number of distinguished laymen, and it was altogether a notable affair. Mr. Day occupies a high standing in the ministry, being able and eloquent, and is held in great esteem by his brethren of the cloth, as well as by parishioners, and people generally.

— Many Woburn, Winchester, Cambridge and Somerville people know Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Drake, missionaries in South Dakota with headquarters at Iroquois, and have become familiar with their work, severe trials, and many deprivations in that inhospitable climate by the highly interesting lectures of Mrs. Drake in the places named. It must be that their churches and themselves are finding the condition of things there unusually pinching and discouraging this fall and the prospect for "the good time coming" anything but bright and cheering. Looking over the September issue of the Dakota Prairie Pioneer, of which Mr. and Mrs. Drake are the Editors, our eye fell on an item in which the Editor says respecting the efforts of the church people of Oceola, not far from Iriquois, to build sheds for their meetinghouse: "They can do all the work and hope to help some in other ways, but with a crop of only four bushels of wheat to the acre (only three times the seed) and no corn or flax, it is difficult to see how they are even to live and keep warm at home." In another item Editor Drake says: "There are fields (here) where they don't get twelve bushels per acre of wheat and straw altogether." At the best, the Dakotas are a poor country to try to get a living in and the missionaries there have the hardest of conditions to contend with.

— The funeral of E. J. Houghton will take place on Sunday, Oct. 19, from the Headquarters of the Kearsarge Naval Veterans, corner of Union Park and Washington St., Boston. Houghton enlisted from Woburn in Co. K, 39th Mass. Vols., was afterward transferred to the Navy, and was one of the gallant crew that helped to destroy the Rebel Ram Albermarle. Houghton was killed at Portsmouth, Va., in 1864. His brothers will take up his remains and have them laid away in his native State. His brother Andrew was in the Navy also, serving six years, and his other brother Richard was out in the 22d Mass. Vols. He was badly wounded at Gaines's Mills, and was taken prisoner with a lot of Woburn boys, among them were John L. Parker, Capt. John P. Crane, and others.

— The bare announcement in our columns of the presentation of that successful comic opera "Priscilla" will be sufficient to set amusement lovers on an edge of expectation. The fact that many of our leading singers are engaged in the affair, and the competent people who have charge of it, makes it safe to predict a thorough musical and artistic success, and is sure to meet with full houses. W. H. Dodd of Boston, who has been in every presentation of the piece save one, assumes the exceedingly funny character of Hatebad Higgins, and he also has charge of the stage. Mr. Dodd is under engagement to take this same part in the production of "Priscilla" at the Globe theatre in December. The wigs and make-ups are from the celebrated Rothe of Boston, and good judges have proclaimed them to be one of his happiest hits in character work. The rehearsals have been progressing finely, and our singers are enthusiastic in praise of the bright, pretty, catchy music and funny dialogue: the masses are universal in its praise.

— Title deeds for the Woburn Public Park have passed and now this city is the owner of 35 acres of land as well adapted to the purpose as any in Middlesex county. It is a broken piece of real estate divided into wooded hills, bare hills, patches of growth, meadow lands, rocky pastures, and such like, which, taken together in a body, is capable of being converted into a great play ground that our citizens may well feel proud of. It wouldn't require but a small outlay of money either to accomplish this. Nature has done nearly all that would be necessary, and with "a slick and a promise" here and there from the hand of art no city could show a more beautiful Park than Woburn, or one nearly so beautiful. It is the general understanding that not a great deal is to be done to the tract, but that it is to be left in a semi-reclaimed condition—about as it now is, with a little alteration here, a little mellowing of the landscape there, some underbrush removed in another place, paths made where necessary—well, that is about all, and then it will be a Park. That is enough.

— Mrs. C. Packard announces the date of her autumn millinery opening in the columns of the JOURNAL this week and we call especial attention to it. The lady has got fairly settled in her new store, No. 419 Main street (formerly Horton's Bookstore), where she will be pleased to welcome her old customers and such new ones as may favor her with their patronage. She has a fine store and in it her large stock and great variety of handsome millinery goods of the latest styles and best quality is seen at excellent advantage, and by the strong light of the large windows the merits of the fabrics are discovered. It is roomy, well lighted, handy in its arrangements, finely finished, with handsome fixtures and draperies, and as to location it is unsurpassed. Mrs. Packard takes pride in the new store and is happy to have people come in and see it, and it is not to be wondered at, for better quarters for her large and fashionable business could not be found. Mrs. Packard's stock is an elegant one. Her ribbons, velvets, feathers, flowers and other millinery wares are all of the latest styles, and better goods can't be bought outside of Boston. That she knows how to put them together in an artistic manner the ladies of Woburn and vicinity know without our telling them. Mrs. Dixon, a lady of fine taste in trimming, and well known in Woburn, will be Mrs. Packard's assistant this season.

— Mr. Amos Cummings, proprietor of the leading millinery establishment in this city, was so fortunate as to buy his goods before the prices of them were advanced by the passage of the Tariff Bill, because it enables him to sell much cheaper than those who did not do as he did—get stocks in early in the season. In the matter of velvets, plushes, many kinds of ribbons, and other goods of foreign manufacture, prices have advanced very materially in the last 30 days owing to the increase of import duties and the dealers on whom such larger duties fall will find much difficulty in competing with the more fortunate merchants who bought before the bill became a law. Mr. Cummings comes within this latter catagory. Foreseeing the probable changes in the tariff laws, and being in a condition to avail himself of the advantages of such change, he improved the opportunity, bought largely of all staple millinery goods, and now enjoys the consciousness of being able to sell at much lower prices than most of his competitors and at the same time make a reasonable profit. All this is in Mr. Cummings's favor. In due time he and Mrs. Cummings (the latter still at the head of the Millinery Department) will give their customary Autumn opening, but just what form it will assume is something that the JOURNAL has not yet found out. It is safe to say however that it will be an attractive one, and one from which the ladies of this city and vicinity will derive pleasure and profit. Mr. Cummings's millinery stock needs only to be seen to be appreciated.

"Chipman's Liver Pills

the best in the world. Never gripe or make you sick. They are purely vegetable, and will sure cure your bilious trouble. All who use them speak well of them. Sold by all druggists."

Upon vigorous health and a rugged constitution will depend largely the future happiness and success in life of a child; the choice of a food is, therefore, of the highest importance. Mellin's Food is rich in blood forming, brain-forming and bone-forming compounds, and is recommended by the highest medical authorities.

Leviticus Club—Reception Unique.

The third canonical book of the Old Testament has received special study during the past year by a number of ladies, and the duties and rites prescribed in the Mosaic law in regard to the Levites have been gone over with renewed interest and enthusiasm by the members of the Leviticus Club, so-called.

The guiding genius of this elite circle is Mrs. F. E. Wheeler, and those who sit at her feet are largely the members of her class in the Sabbath School: a few others have joined by special invitation.

The regular meetings—suspended during Mrs. Wheeler's absence at the West—were opened again for study last Friday evening, members being summoned by the Joshua of the Club, Miss Kate Morey, and the gathering at her home on Montvale Avenue, October 3d, so admirably planned, was indeed like unto the first fruits of the vintage.

Great was the surprise of the returned teacher! How the tapers glowed among the grapes of Eshcol!

The beautifully spread table was that of the land of Canaan: Egypt was forgotten.

The invited guests were Miss M. Louisa Bacon, Mrs. W. W. Hill, and Jennie S. Skinner.

An original "Song of Welcome" was finely rendered by Miss Clara Morey, and Cardinal Newman's "Lead kindly Light"—Mrs. Wheeler's favorite hymn—was given by the same singer.

Mrs. J. K. Murdock read an acrostic, written by Miss Kate Morey upon the Club name, as follows:

Let us while learning be loving,
Each eager with earnest endeavor,
Vieing in virtue and verity,
In ideal, impassioned inquiry,
Teaching, trust, temperance, and truth,
In impulsive, innocent industry,
Cultivate Christian charity,
Uniting, united and useful,
Searching the Scriptures sagaciously.

Miss Carter read verses of "Welcome Back;" and all, from cards, read an appropriate Scripture selection.

How delightful and interesting were Mrs. Wheeler's reminiscences of her journey Westward!

A treat, among the flowers and fruit, and a happy outlook for the winter's reading, with words of thanks, all too inadaquate to express enough to Miss Morey—their Joshua—upon whom they laid their hands as did Moses upon his successor, the company parted with a happy good night.—S.

How Her Hubby Put It.

"I am willing to work and work hard for my husband and children, but oh! I do so hate needless work which does not show the time and strength put into it. How I have washed and wrung out, and then washed again, all because the soap was one of those cheap resin affairs and did not cleanse. Now I use Brussels soap, and as hubby would put it, I save a hundred per cent. in time and labor." Thus said Mrs. B., a firm friend of Brussels soap.

The changes made are indicated by the *. New trains by a * and †. It will be seen that three important trains have been added, viz: The 6.05 A. M. outward, which will carry the mail, thus enabling Woburn to have an earlier delivery mornings. For the inward service two new trains will give us great satisfaction. The 8.15 A. M.—"Board of Trade Express"—will run to Boston without stop, thereby meeting a long felt want for former patrons of the 7.42 and 8.22 trains. Another train is the "Theatre Train" leaving Woburn at 6.25 P. M. These additions have been brought about by a Special Committee of the Board of Trade, consisting of Lawrence Reade, Postmaster, Frederic A. Flint, and Frederic H. Lewis. This Committee waited upon the new Superintendent several months ago, and were encouraged then to believe that Woburn would receive careful consideration by the new management. We can say, without fear of contradiction, that these additions are the best and most popular since the Extension of the Woburn Branch.

F. H. LEWIS,
Secretary Board of Trade.

Boston Theatres.

Bronson Howard's famous war drama "Shenandoah," has been running at the Globe Theatre this week to audiences that fairly tested the capacity of the house. Since it was last seen in Boston, "Shenandoah" has been carefully pruned, some tedious dialogue has been omitted and one or two things have been toned down so that their objectionable features are not noticeable. Then some very capable people have been put into the cast, and the result is a most enjoyable performance, and it is something more than that, for one can witness "Shenandoah" without learning an impressive lesson in patriotism and devotion to the flag. Since this piece was brought out in Boston it has enjoyed a phenomenal run. Now that we have the play with us it is easy to explain the success it has had. The cast is a remarkably good one and is well balanced throughout. "Shenandoah" will be presented for two weeks.

Would most respectfully announce to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the production at the Lyceum Hall, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, November 5 and 6, of that new and Charming Comic Opera, Priscilla, which has made such an instantaneous hit wherever produced. The costumes and appointments will be the same as will be used at the Boston performance the coming season, special scenery and other accessories. The chorus will be made up of about 30 of the principal singers of Woburn. Mr. W. H. Dodd of Boston will assume the role of Hatebad Higgins and will also have direction of the stage. No pains will be spared to make this event one of the most noteworthy in the amusement annals of Woburn. Notwithstanding the large expense in bringing this opera out in first-class shape, popular prices will prevail, and the sale of seats will open at Horton's Bookstore on Saturday evening previous, at 7.30. Out-of-town parties can secure seats by mail or telegraph.

Republican Representative Convention.

The Fourteenth Middlesex Republican Representative Convention was held in Mechanics Building, this city, Wednesday evening.

F. W. B. Pratt of Reading was chosen temporary Chairman, and Francis A. Partridge of Woburn, temporary Secretary.

Alex. Grant and —— Morse of Woburn, and W. E. Twombly of Reading were chosen a committee on credentials, and they reported the full delegation of 11 present, there being 8 from Woburn and 3 from Reading.

The report was accepted.

The temporary organization was made permanent.

Alexander Grant nominated Elmore A. Pierce as a candidate for Representative, and it was carried by acclamation.

E. B. Drake of Reading nominated Henry G. Kittredge of that town as the other candidate for Representative, and it was carried by acclamation.

A committee consisting of Mr. Grant and Mr. Drake were sent for candidate Pierce, and when the latter was brought in and introduced to the Convention he accepted the trust in a neat, happy speech, telling the convention how grateful he was for the nomination; thanking them cordially for the high honor they had conferred on him; promising to do his best to represent the District with credit to all concerned, etc. His speech was warmly applauded all through.

Messrs. Twombly and Drake spoke highly of candidate Kittredge; that it was better for the District to be represented by a Republican than a Democrat, and promised as big a vote for Pierce as Kittredge in Reading.

The matter of a District Committee was referred back to the city and town.

Meigs's Road Likely to be Built.

It is thought from present indications that the Meigs Elevated Railway is likely to be established in Stoneham, as a conference has been held with the Boston & Maine officials which it is said was very encouraging to the Meigs management. It is not thought that money enough can be raised to build the three-mile steam surface road from Stoneham to Middlesex Fells as so many favor the Meigs project.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Scandinavian Notes.

Rev. A. G. Nilson from Chicago Ill., will preach in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock. He will speak in the Swedish language.

The corner stone of the Scandinavian Church, corner of Montvale and Greenwood Avenues, Woburn, will be laid next Saturday afternoon, Oct. 11, at 4 o'clock. Several American and Scandinavian Clergymen will be present to participate in the ceremonies. All are invited to be present.

The Carpenters are busily at work on the Scandinavian Church of this city and if the good and kind people in and around Woburn will contribute by their means to this worthy cause it is hoped that before long we shall have the pleasure to look at and be invited into a plain, but substantial and roomy house of worship—a home and resort for the Scandinavian people of this city, as well as from surrounding towns. This is the first time that the Scandinavians have asked for any contributions and may be the only one; it is therefore hoped that all will liberally respond, as $5000 more is needed to complete the church. C. R. Rosenquist, 7 Greenwood Ave., or any of the Pastors of the Churches in this city, will thankfully receive what you may kindly give for the Scandinavian church. Don't wait until someone calls upon and urges you to contribute, but act now of your own free heart.

Rev. A. Franson from Sweden is on a mission trip through U. S. preaching the Gospel in the Scandinavian (or any other) language, and picking up recruits to train for missionaries for China. His nearest point to this place was Boston where he was last Sunday and a great many Scandinavians from Woburn went to hear him. Mr. Franson preached several times and meetings at 3 different places in Boston during the day at each of which he preachnd to a large congregation. His sermon was in the Swedish language. He had several young men and a few young ladies who are on the way to New York City where he will open a training school the 14th of this month and where the Chinese language will be taught. A large number of conversions and 3 recruits for China was the result of Mr. Franson's labor in Boston last Sunday.—X.

A Priest from Ireland.

Rev. Father McMahon, a priest from Ireland, on a mission to this country, spoke at St. John's Church, Meadow Brook, yesterday morning. He is a clergyman of most pleasing address, and held the congregation spell-bound for over an hour in giving accounts of the present condition of the Irish isle. He predicted the day was not far distant when Ireland would have home rule It was in the hearts of the peasanty and in the air of the land. America did nobly for her enslaved sister, who yet with out-stretched arms and with a heart full of gratitude, thank the brave sons of the Stars and Stripes.—Scranton Daily Times.

Burlington.

A mistake was made in the report of the Cattle Show dinner last week. It was stated that a Boston caterer officiated while the truth of the case was that the dinner was served under the direction of a committee of Burlington ladies, with Mrs. Samuel Walker as chairwoman.

Rev. C. Washburn preached his farewell sermon at the meetinghouse last Sunday. A large number of our townspeople were present. During his stay of two years in Burlington Mr. Washburn has gained the respect and esteem of all classes and great regret is felt at his departure. All unite in wishing him success and happiness in his new field of labor.

The Fifth District.

The Executive Committee of the 5th District Republican Congressional Committee opened headquarters for the campaign last Monday afternoon at No. 2A Beacon street, Boston, the rooms recently occupied as the headquarters of the national committee of Grand Army encampment.

A meeting was held, at which Hon. L. M. Hannum of Cambridge, the Chairman, presided, and C. F. Rice of Somerville acted as Secretary. It was voted to keep the headquarters open to all friends of Candidate Fox, and to hold meetings of the Executive Committee Monday and Friday afternoons at 4 and 8 o'clock, respectively, the General Committee to meet Fridays at 4 P. M. W. L. Fox and H. W. Bertbrong of Arlington were added to the General Committee.

The subject of rallies was discussed, and assurances were received as coming from the Republican State Central Committee that Speaker Reed, Congressmen Lodge and Greenhalge and other distinguished speakers would speak in the 5th District, the dates not yet determined.

"My feet are so slim I never can get a good fit unless I pay quite a high price." Then try Stetson at his well-known store, corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, and see what he can do for you in the way of a Ladies' fine boot. Goat or Kid for just $2.

Priscilla.

Here is what the Lowell Critic says of Priscilla in speaking of the theme: "Gilbert & Sullivan never had half so good material and it only needed authors who by birth and breeding could appreciate its character to combine the materials into the richest bouquet of stage amusement. These were found in Mr. Henry D. Coolidge, well known as Clerk of the Massachusetts Senate, and Mr. Thomas W. Surrette, conductor of the Concord Choral Society. They produced undoubtedly one of the best American operas. It was first brought out in Concord and it carried the town by storm."

This fine and exceedingly pleasing opera is to be given by eminent Boston soloists, assisted by a large and talented local chorus, in Lyceum Hall, Woburn, on the evenings of Nov. 5 and 6.

No. Woburn.

Rev. Mr. Washburn and family are about to leave here for good and all. Mr. Washburn has accepted a call to go to Falmouth on the Cape. In view of his early departure the family were tendered a reception at the church last Tuesday evening which was a very pleasant affair. The ceremonies were under the direction of Millis S. Carter who discharged the duties of the position handsomely. There was a large gathering at the church where much regret was expressed at the loss of pastor Washburn and family. The Schumann Quartette gave some very fine music which everyone enjoyed, and Professor Elmore A. Pierce and Mrs. Fred J. Ham of the Centre read several selections very effectively. The feature of the occasion was the presentation of a purse of $130 to Mr. Washburn by Mr. D. W. Danforth in behalf of the church and friends. It was a very interesting time.

Middlesex County vs. Essex County.

Players from the Middlesex County and Essex County Tennis Leagues will compete against each other in a tournament to be held on Saturday, Oct. 11, 1890, on the Courts of the Wedgemere Club at Winchester.

The seven best men from each league will be selected to play.

Playing will commence at 10.30 A. M., and all interested in the game are invited to be present. It is expected that this tournament between the two leagues will be of considerable interest and it will probably be made an annual affair. The date of this tournament is unavoidably late and it will no doubt be set much earlier another season.

Events will be best three sets in five and the playing will be governed by the usual rules.

Obituary.

So fades a summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er,
So gently shuts the eye of day,
So dies a wave along the shore.

Aptly, indeed, do the words of the poetess describe the death of one of Woburn's well known and popular young men, Daniel F. McKay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael McKay, who passed from this life after a short period of suffering from an abscess in his head, on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 1, at the age of seventeen years, one month and twenty-three days.

There are few persons of any age or position in this city who enjoyed such a wide acquaintance as he did or who had such a large circle of friends; in fact, it has been said of him that he never had an enemy, and a higher compliment it would be difficult to pay to a person who had passed even seventeen years of an active life in this jealous world. By his death is lost not alone the material from which a good man might be formed but also that which contained the inherent qualities of a good business man and a good citizen. Kind, amiable, generous and frank, he possessed the attributes which would endear persons to him by an innate attractiveness; honest, upright, clear-headed and energetic, he was a master far in advance of his years of the traits which would have made an honorable and successful business man; and high-minded and just, he was endowed with the principles which could not but have contributed to a good citizen, in the truest sense of the word.

His death was fully in keeping with his life, short though it was, and throughout his brief but painful illness, no murmur of the terrible suffering which he was enduring ever passed his lips, preferring to heroically endure in silence the tortures which he suffered rather than inflict upon others by complainings unnecessary pain which it was out of their power to alleviate. "Dannie," as he was familiarly called, has departed, but his memory can never fade from the minds of those who knew him. Notwithstanding that his was a constitution never too rugged, his first serious illness occurred last winter when the trouble which caused his death originated, and although he lay for days at the point of death he eventually recovered, thanks to effective medical and home treatment, and during the spring and summer has been constantly at work, apparently in the best of health.

On the Sunday preceding his death the old trouble returned and despite the most assiduous attention to it he rapidly failed. Monday and Tuesday passed accompanied by a decline which was evident; on Wednesday it was apparent that the end was near. During the afternoon he called for those dearest to him, "Mother" and "Maggie," and as the last rays of the setting sun slanted in through the windows bidding the earth a warm good night, he gazed slowly at the family at his bedside, closed his eyes and dropped asleep as quietly as a drowsy babe in its mother's arms—the spirit had departed. A smile was upon his lips and his appearance was so natural that it at first seemed as if such could not be death. It was a reality however. The body was there but the soul had winged its way to the Master who had given it life. Such a death after such a life is to be envied rather than dreaded and contains more genuine food for reflection than a world of sermons.

On last Friday the funeral took place from his home on Chestnut street. The body was first taken to St. Charles church where a high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. Father Slattery. The music was beautiful and appropriate, Miss Anna L. Murphy, the organist of the church, presiding in her regular place at that instrument and being assisted in the vocal rendition of the Mass by Mr. James McDonald of Woburn. Misses Mary and Teresa McKay of Stoneham, cousins of the deceased, sang very effectively "No Cross, No Crown," and Miss Lizzie Shinkwin of this city touchingly rendered "Nearer My God To Thee." The pall bearers were three of his cousins P. Henry and M. Joseph Mathews and Daniel McKay, and Thomas H. Dolan, John Mahoney and Jeremiah Carey of the St. Charles C. T. A. Society, of which the deceased was a prominent member. The floral emblems were beautiful. A magnificent pillow inscribed "Dannie" was contributed by the family, a beautiful bouquet came from his aunt Mrs. James Mathews, and a bunch of seventeen white rosebuds, (one for each year of his life) was the gift of Mrs. Bennie Mathews. Other friends also contributed several beautiful pieces. The interment was in the family lot at Calvary Cemetery.

His loss is a severe blow to his family and friends but it was God's will, to which we should bow on all occasions. It must be a consolation to them to know that with the departure of the spirit which relieved the pain-racked body from its load of suffering, the soul, in accordance with God's promise to those who follow his injunctions on earth, has left its earthly habitation for a grander home in that bright land, the hope of every Christian:

Nor eyes that have sorrowed be dimmed with a tear."

—COM.

Rev. J. Frank Winkley died at his home in this city on Thursday, Oct. 2, 1890, aged 74 years. He had been ill nearly two years, much of which period he was a great and patient sufferer. He was a Christian man and will be missed by a large circle of relatives and friends. His native place was Portsmouth, N. H., and in early life he was in business there. Subsequently he studied for the ministry and was ordained in 1861. He came to Woburn in 1877 as rector of Trinity Episcopal church, in which office he continued for several years and proved himself a good minister and pastor. He was a scholarly gentleman, benevolent, charitable, and a highly esteemed member of society.

The deceased left a widow, one daughter and two sons, Rev. Henry W., rector of the Episcopal Church of Saco, Me., and Robert L., a tutor in New York. Mr. Winkley was a brother of Rev. S. H. Winkley of Boston. The funeral took place from Trinity Church, Saturday, at 11.30 A. M. Rev. J. W. Suter of Winchester officiated.

Last Tuesday Mr. William B. Harris died suddenly at Haverhill, aged 81 years. About two years ago he was prostrated by a stroke of paralysis and has not been a well man since. The deceased was born in New Ipswich, N. H., and was a cousin of the artist and other Champneys of this place who were natives of that town, and when a boy he and his cousin Edward W. Champney went to live with an uncle at York, Me., but did not remain there long. Mr. Harris came to Woburn to reside about 50 years ago, and during all that time his life was such as to command the confidence and esteem of his fellowtownsman. In the time of the Rebellion he was a great "War Democrat" and by his zeal and activity contributed largely to the stores of Union hospitals and commissions. He was so patriotic and labored so unceasingly for the benefit of the "Boys in Blue" that he was named then and has ever since been called "The Soldier's Friend." The Veterans have always had a warm side for "Uncle William," and, before his illness, whenever the G. A. R. Posts held public gatherings he was very often their honored guest. Mr. Harris was an honest, upright man. He was kind-hearted, cordial and courteous towards all. He had been honored with public office and did his duty well. The deceased left three children, a sister (Mrs. Butters), a brother, other relatives, and many friends to mourn his loss.

The wearing of corsets is one of those mooted subjects about which there will always be two (or more) opinions; but there can only be one opinion as to the announcement in regard to them this week in our local advertising column. SHOCKING ACCIDENT.—On Thursday morning of last week at half past four o'clock, Mr. Burt Kendall looking from his residence on Linden street had his attention attracted to an object lying close to the fence in front of the house. He informed his father who on reaching the spot found the body of Miss Amelia Richardson, daughter of Deacon Stillman Richardson, who lives close by, lying against the fence, shockingly burned. The poor woman's clothing was entirely consumed, and she was groaning, but unconscious, when Mr. Kendall reached her. She lived but a short time, and was burned so bad as to be almost unrecognizable. The family of Mr. Richardson, who had not arisen were entirely ignorant of the terrible catastrophe that had befallen their daughter and sister, was quickly summoned. The cause of her clothing taking fire is enshrouded in mystery. Miss Richardson arose shortly after four o'clock to make the fire and prepare the morning meal. It is supposed that a spark from the burning wood ignited her dress, and having occasion to go out of doors, the draught quickly fanned into flame. Finding that she could not extinguish it, and becuming bewildered and crazed with excruciating pain, she ran down the street and sank exhausted in front of Mr. Kendall's house. She was never known to use kerosene in starting the fire in the stove and the above supposition is undoubtedly correct. Miss Richardson was 35 years of age. Her many kindnesses in time of sickness and trouble made her truly a ministering angel, whose services were much sought after. She was a most accomplished lady, of a modest and retiring disposition, whose qualities were known to many who were fortunate in her acquaintance.—Star.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

LESSON II, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 12.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxii, 7-20. Commit Verses 19, 20—Golden Text, I Cor. xi, 26—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We pass by many most interesting incidents in the last days ere the crucifixion, and all His great discourse on the Mount of Olives concerning His coming again and the end of the age, and are brought in this lesson to His last passover with His disciples the night before He was crucified.

7. "Then came the day of unleavened bread when the passover must be killed." Or, as in the first verse, "The feast of unleavened bread drew nigh which is called the passover." This takes us back to Ex. xii, where we have the record of the last night in Egyptian bondage and their deliverance by the mighty power of God.

8. "And He sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat." These two we have found specially privileged on several other occasions: at the raising of the ruler's daughter and at the transfiguration, and we shall find them again in Gethsemane. They also are the prominent two in Acts iii and iv in connection with the healing of the lame man and the conversion of five thousand.

9. "And they said unto Him, where wilt Thou that we prepare?" This is as it always should be with a disciple of Christ. Where wilt Thou? What wilt thou? Not as I will, but as Thou wilt. Thy way, not Mine.

10. "And He said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in." As when He told them by His omniscience just where and how they would find the ass and the colt; and as when Samuel by the same omniscient spirit told Saul just whom he would meet and what they would say and do (Luke xix, 30; 1 Sam. x, 2-9). So now knowing all things He directs them.

11. "And ye shall say unto the good man of the house, The Master saith unto thee, where is the guest chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?" He not only tells us when and where to go and how to act, but He also tells us what to say. In the gospel by John He very often speaks of Himself as sent by the Father, and not only so, He says the Father gave Him a commandment what He should say and what He should speak (John xii, 49). So when He sends His disciples He tells them just what to say (Matt. x, 7, 19; Luke xix, 31). When the prophets were sent forth they, too, were specially instructed to speak only the Lord's message (Jer. i, 7; Ezek. ii, 7; Hag. i, 13). And well would it be for all preachers and teachers if they were always the Lord's messengers, speaking the Lord's message.

12. "And he shall show you a large upper room furnished; there make ready." Forget not from the last verse that He must enter the house as master; and see again the oneness of Christ and His disciples. "Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me be with me where I am" (John xvii, 24). Here is a willing owner of a house; it looks as if he must be a disciple; he will offer a large furnished room, and do it cheerfully. Are our homes as cheerfully placed at the Master's disposal, and is everything excluded from the home that He would not like?

13 "And they went and found as He had said unto them; and they made ready the passover." Prompt and cheerful obedience is our part as His followers.

14. "And when the hour was come, He sat down, and the twelve apostles with Him." With God there is a time for everything, and He is never too fast nor too slow. "When the fullness of time had come He sent forth His Son." "He has appointed a day in the which He will judge the world" (Gal. iv, 4; Acts xvii, 31). Many a time they tried to take Jesus to put Him to death, but they could not touch Him till the appointed time came, and then He gave Himself into their hands. As to our salvation, the time is now; today, if ye will hear His voice; the hour now is, when they that hear shall live (Isa. i, 18; II Cor. vi, 2; Heb. iii, 15; John v, 25).

15. "And He said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer;" or, as in the margin, "I have heartily desired." We think of Him at the passover, at the age of 12 and at the first passover of His public ministry. We look away back to the first passover in Egypt, and think of the one in the wilderness, and at Gilgal, and the great ones of Hezekiah and Josiah and Ezra; but this one which He desired so greatly to eat with them was the greatest of all, for it was the fulfillment of all, and He who now ate it with them was on the morrow to be Himself slain, the great antetype of all the passovers that were ever kept, the true Lamb of God in whom alone is redemption and deliverance from the great oppressor.

16. "For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God." If He is the true Paschal Lamb, and His death about to be accomplished, the fulfillment of all the types, then what is this that He says about a fulfillment in the Kingdom of God? If the church is the Kingdom, as so many teach, and the Kingdom has already come, then let some one who so believes please explain this verse. But if the Kingdom is postponed till His return, as He taught in chap. xix, 11-15; and if at His return there is to be a great gathering of Israel, from all the corners of the earth, as all the prophets teach; and if it shall be according to the days of their coming out of Egypt (Mic. vii, 15), then it seems to me all plain.

17. "And He took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this and divide it among yourselves."

18. "For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the Kingdom of God shall come." Then shall all Israel's fast days become joy and gladness and cheerful feasts. Then the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

19. "And He took bread and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is My body which is given for you, this do in remembrance of Me." Having kept the passover He now institutes a new feast which we call The Lord's Supper, or The Communion.

20. "Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in My blood which is shed for you." In the same sense that He is the door, the true vine, the living bread, in that sense only is the bread and wine His body and blood, and we partake of each in grateful remembrance of His sufferings for us, whereby we become members of His body, and look forward to His coming when we shall be perfected in His likeness. Let us, when we partake of the wine, think of His blood shed for us, and pray to be such faithful witnesses that we shall be willing to seal our testimony with our blood, not loving our lives unto the death.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial Bottles Free at H. L. Flanders & Co. drugstore.

Save all your old white muslin. It makes good dusters and will also be useful for cleaning windows, as it is free from lint.

Nothing but superlative merit can account for the phenomenal reputation achieved by Salvation Oil. It kills pain.

The Darwinian theory perplexes the multitude. They object to descendants from monkeys. But not even a baby objects to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

LYDIA.

Break forth, break forth, oh, Sudbury town,
And bid your yards be gay
Up all your gusty streets and down,
For Lydia comes today!

I hear it on the wharves below,
And if I buy or sell,
The good folk as they churchward go
Have only this to tell.

My mother, just for love of her,
Unlocks her carved drawers;
And sprigs of withered lavender
Drop down upon the floors.

For Lydia's bed must have the sheet
Spun out of linen sheer,
And Lydia's room be passing sweet
With odors of last year.

The marigolds are out once more
In lanes salt with the sea;
The thorn bush at Saint Martin's door
Grows white for such as she.

So, Sudbury, bid your gardens blow,
For Lydia comes today;
Of all the words that I do know,
I have but this to say.

—New York Independent.

The Benefit of Newspaper Training.

I believe I have done everything which an editor or publisher ever has to do, from directing wrappers up to writing the biography of a president within an hour after his death. This means, if the training be continued through many years of life, and if one be under a good chief, that one gains, of necessity, the ready use at least of his own language. We newspaper men may write English very ill, but we write it easily and quickly. So that to us, who have been in this business, there is something amazing to hear a clergyman say that he occupied a week in composing a sermon, which was, at the outside, 3,500 words in length. One can understand absolute inability to do it at all, but no newspaper man understands how a man who can do it can spend thirty-six hours in doing it.

If you have to send "copy" up stairs, hour after hour, with a boy taking the slips from you, one by one, as they are written, and you know that you are never to see what you write until you read it the next day in the paper, your copy will be punctuated carefully, written carefully, and it will be easily read. That is one thing. Another thing goes with it. You will form the habit of determining what you mean to say before you say it, how far you want to go, and where you want to stop. And this will bring you to a valuable habit of life—to stand by what has been decided. Napoleon gave the same advice when he said, "If you set out to take Vienna, take Vienna."

For these reasons I am apt to recommend young men to write for the press early in life, being well aware that the habit of doing this has been of use to me.—Edward Everett Hale in Forum

Statistics of Tornadoes.

The tornado, with hardly an exception, occurs in the afternoon, just after the hottest part of the day. The time of greatest frequency is from 3:30 to 5 o'clock. The tornado season includes March, April, May, June, July, August and September, but storms of this nature may occur in any part of the year. The months of greatest frequency, as determined from a record of 208 years, are April, May, June and July. The single month of greatest frequency is May, April following next in order. The state in which the greatest number of tornadoes has occurred is Missouri, followed next in order by Kansas and Georgia.

A record of more than 500 tornadoes and "windfalls" (i. e., paths of tornadoes through forests) in Wisconsin considerably exceeds the number from any other state, but little weight can be given this comparison owing to the want of thorough investigation of the subject of windfalls in other states. From a careful investigation of the origin of tornadoes and their geographical distribution there is every reason to believe that these storms were as frequent and violent 200 years ago as now. Moreover, there appears to be no cause for any unusual change in the annual frequency of tornadoes for a like period to come.—Lieut. John P. Finley in Forum.

Cold Years.

A correspondent of The Pall Mall Gazette writes: Are we in the middle of a series of cold years? In 1842 a Mr. Luke Howard started a theory that our English seasons present themselves in cycles of eighteen years, during the first half of which—beginning with 1824—heat predominates, and in the second cold. Working this out I find that the facts do seem to square with Mr. Howard's theory, according to which we should now be in the thick of the "cold" series—1887 to 1896. At any rate there's the snowfall of June, 1888, to back the theory, and to knock a hole in the second clause of Byron's famous line, "Seek roses in December, snow in June."

Toads Drive Out Roaches.

W. R. Jennings has discovered a very effective and simple means of getting rid of roaches. It is simply to put a toad in any room that is infested with them. A large toad got into the post-office and remained there over night. Afterward the office was clear of roaches until a few weeks since, when they reappeared. Another toad was placed in the room, and the roaches again disappeared. Charles Doyle was greatly annoyed by these vermin. He was told about the remedy, and placed a small toad in his saloon, which cleared it of roaches in a very short time.—Marshall (Tex.) Star.

Late investigations have determined that the majority of deep sea depressions come from other than volcanic origin, and that the coldest waters of the ocean stand in the deep troughs instead of running, as was formerly thought to be the case.

Malaria

Literally means bad air. Poisonous germs arising from low, marshy land, or from decaying vegetable matter, and breathed into the lungs, taken up by the blood, and unless the vital fluid is purified by the use of a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the unfortunate victim is soon overpowered. Even in the more advanced cases, where the terrible fever prevails, this successful medicine has effected remarkable cures. Those who are exposed to malarial or other poisons should keep the blood pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

When tablecloths are worn beyond mending cut square pieces from the best parts of them and hem them neatly. They make nice napkins for the little children to use at the table, and also do nicely for them to carry their lunches to school in, for if they are stained or lost it will not matter much, as your sets will not be broken.

Merit wins, as the marvelous success of Hood's Sarsaparilla shows. It possesses true medicinal merit. Sold by all druggists.

BACHELOR MANSFIELD.

There Is a Capital Reason Why the Actor Never Has Been Married.

There are few among the admirers of Richard Mansfield who have not wondered at the persistence with which he holds to bachelorhood.

Mr. Mansfield is the victim of an extraordinary and unfortunate will—extraordinary because he is left as sole heir to a considerable estate, and unfortunate because he cannot touch a penny of all his inheritance until he has found a wife to share his fortune.

Some six years ago, before the present "Beau Brummel" was as well known as he is now, and when the author of that successful play was a freshman at Amherst, the mother of Richard Mansfield died. She had been a famous opera singer in her day, and not being careless of the money her voice had earned for her, had amassed a small fortune. Richard Mansfield was her only child, and to him fell the whole of her property, which consisted principally of valuable real estate. But the will which announced this disposition of the property was a curious document. The late Attorney General Train was one of its executors. It gave all, "personal and real," to the son plainly enough, but the conditions and restrictions which it exacted were hardly what one would expect to find in the will of an opera singer.

The conditions were that the heir should not marry within five years from the date of the filing of the will, and that after that period the property should not come into his hands until he was married.

Here was a state of affairs for an actor—neither property nor wife for five years, and then no property without a wife.

In the summer of 1889 Richard Mansfield went abroad. It was rumored among his friends and even hinted at in the papers that he was to marry an English lady of some distinction, but the winter came and brought Richard Mansfield back to New York still attended only by his valet, and those who were authority for the report wondered how they could have been so mistaken. Such stories were no novelty to Mr. Mansfield. He never mentioned his mother's will.

In one of the acts of "Beau Brummel" Mansfield is asked, in regard to his intended marriage, what surety he will have against the failure of his suit, to which he replies, with an air of supreme self satisfaction, "And am I not surety enough?" It is a line well suited to the Beau, but few who marked it have understood how aptly it suits the actor.—New York World.

Trees 650 Feet Tall.

Professor Fred G. Plummer, the civil engineer of Tacoma, says: "I have been all over this country and have the best collection of the flora to be found anywhere. What do you think of these trees 650 feet high? They are to be found that high in the unsurveyed townships near the foot of Mount Tacoma, and what is more I have seen them and made an instrumental measurement of a number with that result. There are lots of trees near the base of Mount Tacoma whose foliage is so far above the ground that it is impossible to tell to what family they belong except by the bark. Very few people know or dream of the immensity of our forest growth. I wish that some of our large trees could be sent to the World's fair at Chicago. We could send a flag pole, for instance, 300 or 400 feet long."—Olympia Tribune.

Elephants Fine Food.

Dr. Livingstone speaks of elephant's flesh as excellent. "We had the food cooked for breakfast and found it delicious. It is a whitish mass, slightly gelatinous and sweet, like marrow. A long march to prevent biliousness is a wise precaution after a feast on elephant's food. Elephant's tongue and trunk are also good, and after long simmering much resemble the humps of a buffalo and the tongue of an ox; but all the other meat is tough, and from its peculiar flavor only to be eaten by a hungry man." The elephants eaten during the siege of Paris were said to be a great success, and the liver was pronounced finer than that of any goose or duck.—Scottish Review.

Advertising Costs.

No matter how much advertising pays it certainly costs. A single page in an issue of The Century, taken for advertising purposes, costs $500; in Harper's, $400 down to $100. A yearly advertisement of one column in The New York Herald costs $30,304 for the lowest and $130,000 for the highest priced columns. These figures will doubtless be of interest to men who invest $2 or $3 per month and flatter themselves with the idea that they are extensive and liberal advertisers, and that because of their investment they ought to control the columns and dictate the course of the publication.—Chicago Herald.

Chained Books.

As late as the year 1751 notices occur in the librarian's account books of procuring additional chains for the library. But the removal of them appears to have commenced as shortly afterward as 1757, and in 1761 there was a payment for unchaining 1,448 books at one halfpenny each. In 1769 some long chains were sold at twopence each, and short ones at three halfpence, and then en masse nineteen hundredweight of "old iron" at 14s. per hundredweight. Several of the chains are still preserved loose as relics.—Macray's Annals of the Bodleian Library.

An Important Matter.

Druggists everywhere report that the sales of the Restorative Nervine—a nerve food and medicine—are astonishing; exceeding anything they ever had, while it gives universal satisfaction in headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, sexual debility, backache, poor memory, fits, dizziness, etc. L. Burton & Co., Troy, N. Y.; Ambery & Murphy, of Battle Creek, Mich.; C. B. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., and hundreds of others state that they never handled any medicine which sold so rapidly, or gave such satisfaction. Trial bottles of this great medicine and book on Nervous Diseases, free at Charles H. Buss.

A good way to remove ink stains from carpets is to sprinkle salt over the soiled spots and pour on boiling water, do it several times, if necessary.

If You Wish

KNICKKNACKS IN CARPENTRY.

Disappearance of the Odd Ways of Making an Extra Penny.

"You must have noticed many changes in your line of business since you learned the trade?" was asked of a carpenter by a reporter.

"Yes, more than I could begin to recollect. There was a time when a man could make a snug penny working overtime and making bootjacks at a quarter apiece. You hardly hear tell of them now, and what there are are patent affairs. The wood jack was good to settle cat fights, and that helped business.

"Another specialty I used to have was the making of mincemeat chopping blocks. Women folks in those days couldn't buy their mincemeat ready made. They had to make it, and the chopping was a great event in the family. The block was of hard wood, about two inches thick, with a border on three sides, leaving it open in front.

"Another household article that threw many a dollar in my path was the quilting frame. The quilting party was a joyful time, and it meant a great gathering of young and old folks. The quilting frame, when stretched for work, has to be of such size that it occupies most of the room. Then, when the wadding was enclosed between the two layers of muslin, a chalk line would be snapped across the top surface to mark where the stitches should be made. It has been many a long year since I have had an order for a quilting frame.

"Boys' stilts were another little item that used to pay. I would knock a pair together in ten minutes, and I've seen the time when I'd sell a dozen pairs a day. Boys nowadays don't seem to run to stilts. I suppose bicycles have taken their place. When you come to think of it, a bicycle is nothing more than a pair of stilts bent into a circle. The fault I find with the bicycle is that it only develops the legs. Now the perfect bicycle should develop the whole body. How could it be managed? Easily. Let the hands and arms be used for propulsion alternately with the feet. Use the whole body, as in swimming or rowing. You would gain increased speed, too.

"You remember the tally sticks the bakers used to use to keep account of the number of loaves of bread they left you? Just a stick with a notch filed in, like Robinson Crusoe used to mark the days of the week. Many a thousand tallies I've split down. They had to be cheap, of course, but they were of dry cedar, such as shingles were made of, and it was light work."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hints to Anglers.

Fly fishing at night to those who are not used to it is a peculiar and rather uncanny experience. The rushing water looks as black as ink, and even when the sky is bright the shadows cast by the trees and bushes make the stream seem intensely dark. It is better to use only one fly and a short, stout leader. The large trout feed entirely at night during the hot weather, and after one gets used to the strange surroundings it is very charming sport, for the small fish do not trouble the fly then, and the big ones take hold sharp and with a loud splash. Large bright flies should be used as a rule, but, strange to say, in Lake Colden, in the Adirondacks, the black gnat is the most killing fly.

As a rule striped bass are not caught on any bait but the genuine article. They seem too shy and suspicious to be tempted by the various imitations. But we have heard of several instances lately where they have taken the phantom and white bait minnows. Another successful lure lately used is a gang made of one treble hook on gut with a small revolving spoon above. A sandworm is hooked on to this gang, and the bass, attracted by the glistening spoon, rushes for the bait and is captured. It should be trolled slowly in shallow water, with eighty feet of line and no sinker—a good sized swivel is sufficient weight.—Forest and Stream.

Richardson the Fire Eater.

From the following account taken from Evelyn's Diary, where it appears under date of "10 mo. 8th, 1672," it seems that fire eating freaks are not modern innovations: "I took leave of my Lady Sunderland, who was going to Paris to my lord, now ambassador there. She made me stay to dinner at Leicester house, and afterward sent for Richardson, the famous fire eater. Before us he devoured brimstone on glowing coals, chewing and swallowing them. He melted a beere glasse and ate it quite up; then, taking a live coal on his tongue, he put on it a raw oyster; the coal was blown with hand bellows until it flamed and sparkled in his mouthe, and so remained until the oyster was done. Then he melted pitch with sulphur and drank it while it flamed. I saw it flaming in his mouth."

A Queer Firm.

A Kentuckian in Buffalo has discovered there the firm of Irish & English. What is considered especially remarkable about this firm is that Mr. English is an Irishman and Mr. Irish is an Englishman. The gentleman from Kentucky has so far been unable to obtain the views of Mr. Irish and Mr. English as to what should be done with Ireland.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Porcelain manufacture originated in Meissen. At the time the Berlin manufacture was established the Meissen porcelain was already famous for its fine quality and perfection, and even today is surpassed in but very few points.

100 Ladies Wanted

And 100 men to call on any druggist for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine, the great root and herb remedy, discovered by Dr. Silas Lane while in the Rocky Mountains. For diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys it is a positive cure. For constipation and clearing up the complection it does wonders. It is the best spring medicine known. Large size package, 50 cents. At all druggists'.

The scrubbing of floors should be done with bath brick dust or sand and ordinary household soap. The object of the brick dust or sand is to whiten boards. After washing leave all the doors and windows open for it to dry very quickly, which also helps to whiten the boards.

The walls of each room should be brushed, a duster should be tied over a broom and then passed up and down. The duster must, of course, be shaken from time to time.

Fastidious Snakes.

The quickest thing next to electricity is a snake. Well behaved serpents are always interesting. But for the unfortunate information that one gave to Miss Eve before she eloped with Adam when he was head gardener of the Eden ranch, there would be snakes in more respectable families than there are today. A Cleveland snake professor says that "hissing pythons and cobras will eat at any time, except when they are blind and shedding their skin. They won't touch anything then. Another queer thing about them is that they won't eat anything but white animals. Wait; I'll show you," and taking a young rabbit out of its cage he placed it in the box with the snakes.

They did not move for about a minute. Then one of the pythons raised its head and fastened its eyes upon bunny. The rabbit's ears dropped, its eyes closed and it began to tremble. All at once the snake shot forward, and, seizing it by the back of the neck, coiled itself around it and began crushing out its life; then, turning it over, began to swallow it. The python's head under ordinary circumstances was not larger than a thumb joint on a man's hand, yet when it seized the rabbit its jaws became dislocated in such a way that it was able to start the rabbit's head into its mouth.

Then by a peculiar motion it began slowly to swallow its prey. As the snake worked backward and forward its head stretched to many times the natural size, until finally bunny's hind legs disappeared down the python's throat.

"That supper will last him a couple of weeks," said the showman, as he picked the snake up.—San Francisco Examiner.

Not Cured, but Killed.

One popular fallacy prevalent many years ago in Goshen, Mass., was that hernia might be effectually cured by putting the patient through a living ash tree, cleft and parted so widely as to allow the person to pass through without touching the sides.

The trees so devoted were not allowed to be cut down afterward, lest the felling of the tree should be the killing of the patient. This method of treating hernia received a sudden check.

An Irishman named King had taken a negro boy to bring up who was affected with the above mentioned trouble, and the cleft tree remedy was recommended.

An ash tree was cleft, wedges were inserted to keep it open, and the boy started to go through. Unfortunately, at the moment the poor little fellow was fairly within the cleft, the wedges suddenly flew out, and the parts of the tree sprang together. The negro was crushed to death.

King ran for help, and cried out to the first man he met: "Cato is kilt! I've brought death to Cato, but I niver thought to kill Cato no more'n I did yerself, Mr. Dresser!"

The honest simplicity of the Irishman saved him from legal trouble, but the tragedy killed the popularity of the ash tree remedy for hernia.—Youth's Companion.

Our Cut Flowers the Best.

Expert florists say that New York can today make a better display of cut flowers than can any city of Europe. The most skillful growers of flowers in the world are the florists in and about this city. They came from Germany, from France, from England and elsewhere, and their skill coupled with our climate has produced great results in the way of growing fine flowers. Such expert witnesses as John Morris, the veteran Jefferson market flower dealer, say that in the matter of cut flowers New York can beat Paris, and that means that it can beat the world.

At present the ladies of the city who are lovers of flowers—and what woman is not?—cannot see these exhibitions of cut flowers that they are so fond of. In Paris the mistress of the house can go to the market, and herself order the flowers that she wishes to be placed on her tables and about her house when she gives a dinner or a reception. She never delegates this matter to a bonne. She can combine business with pleasure by doing it herself, and her tastes being educated the results are good. Here a man servant is necessarily intrusted with this matter, and as a result it is attended to very badly.—New York Mail and Express.

No More Sleepless Nights.

A new wrinkle for drawing custom is the keeping open of dental establishments all night for the special accommodation of those who have to work all day and cannot afford to lose time by spending it in a dentist's chair. The idea is a practical success. The first week shows a patronage almost if not quite as large as during the day. Operators say they can do just as good work by the aid of the incandescent light as by the light of the sun, and that the quiet of the streets by night has a soothing effect on the nerves, which are not so sensitive to pain as when tensely strung by day and by the excitement of daylight surroundings. All night dental parlors seem to have come in obedience to a popular demand, and it looks as if they might become as common as the all night restaurant or as is the work of building by incandescent light.—New York Cor. Philadelphia Record.

For cleaning windows and mirrors one of the best things is plain soft water and chamois leather, having a dry chamois leather as well to polish with afterward. This process will not answer near the sea, because of the salt in the atmosphere.

For cleaning glasses belonging to mahogany furniture, use either powdered whiting or scraped rottenstone mixed with sweet oil, and rub on with a chamois skin.

Eggs shells crushed into small bits and shaken well in decanters, three parts filled with cold water will not only clean them thoroughly but make the glass look like new.

Woman's Column.

The Material Growth of America.

The passage of the bill for the admission of Wyoming means an era in our national history. The number of our States will henceforth be forty-four instead of the original thirteen. I look with astonishment at the rapid growth of this great sisterhood of republics. Much is said of our material progress, but no one can fully realize its magnitude. To those of us who can look back sixty years (and short seems the retrospect) how amazing is the change within our brief lifetime! Then the United States numbered twelve millions, now sixty-four millions. Then not a railroad nor a telegraph; our frontier, Michigan and Ohio; our backwoods, Kentucky and Indiana; all the vast expanse from the Missouri to the Pacific Ocean an unexplored continent prairies, mountains and deserts. Now we can go from Maine to Alaska and return within a month.

In 1832, as a boy, I remember New York City less than half the present size of Boston, accessable only by sailing vessels, stage coaches and barges; the Erie Canal just opened; steamboats just beginning to ply upon our rivers, but no steamers then, or for many years afterwards, crossing the Atlantic. In 1838 I was eleven days in going from New York to Cincinnati. The Ohio river flowed for a thousand miles through an almost unbroken forest. There I found a bright, aspiring little town, calling itself the "Queen of the West," with firewood at two dollars a cord, eggs four cents a dozen, beef sirloin six cents a pound, oats twelve cents a bushel, and flour two dollars a barrel. Yet our only currency was paper, so scarce and so fluctuating in value, that it was harder to pay those small prices than it is to pay the greater prices of to-day. I think the only man in America then considered a millionnaire was old John Jacob Astor of New York. Our great fortunes were unknown. I have seen Alexander T. Stewart, afterwards a merchant prince, measuring off ladies' dress goods with his own hands behind the counter. As a school-boy I have often bought a cent's worth of broken candy from the parents of the brothers Stewart, afterwards great sugar refiners, at their little store on Greenwich street, before the modern art of sugar refining was introduced. I have in my possession a Boston directory of 1830; it contains only 12,000 names and scarcely a foreign name among them. Boston has been a city only sixty-eight years. The mills and factories of Lowell and Lawrence and Haverhill and Lynn and Fall River and New Beedford and Holyoke, of Lewiston and Saco and Biddeford and Manchester have been created within a single life-time. I was born in 1825 and decline to call myself old (not having yet arrived at years of discretion); but Lowell was incorporated in 1826, and Lawrence in 1853. Is it any wonder that in these sudden aggregations of European emigrants, in our cities and manufacturing towns, there is poverty, ignorance, vice and crime? Ought we not rather to feel surprized at the thrift, intelligence and comfort so suddenly improvised out of such various elements and nationalities? Do not charge our shortcomings to liberty. They are the products of monarchical institutions not yet wholly outgrown.

In 1840 I went from Cincinnati to St. Louis. I was a week in reaching it. In that little frontier town of 20,000, still largely French, the fur-traders fitted out their annual expeditions to the Rocky Mountains. They were absent from twelve to fifteen months. It was the darling aspiration of my boyish heart to accompany those hardy explorers into those unknown wildernesses. That was the year of Harrison campaign; "Tippecanoe and Tyler too," was the burden of our song. To-day the grandson of the Harrison of 1840 sits in the White House. But how changed are all the conditions. Then, as now, we were discussing tariff and free-trade. But there is more free-trade now in a single week between the States of this Union, than was transacted in a year in 1840. Until far into the present century the great body of our people lived upon the products of their own farms; they spun and wove their own clothing out of home-raised flax and wool, they grew their own food, fermented and distilled their own liquors (for until 1828 there was no temperance society) and traffic was incredibly limited by the cost of transportation.

When a century has made such changes as these, who can predict what another century will bring forth? To meet the problems that confront us, we need above all else an intelligent, influential, public-spirited womanhood. All the forces of wisdom and virtue will be wanted at the ballot-box. Well says Lowell:

"New occasions teach new duties; Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward, who would keep abreast of truth.
Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! we ourselves must Pilgrims be;
Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea,
Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key."

—H. B. B. in Woman's Journal.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

Precautions Against Consumption.

In a circular on precautions against consumption, published by the State Board of Health of Pennsylvania, the following advice is given: "The duster, and especially that potent distributor of germs, the feather duster, should never be used in a room habitually occupied by a consumptive. The floor, woodwork and furniture should be wiped with a damp cloth. The patient's clothing should be kept by itself and thoroughly boiled when washed. It need hardly be said that the room should be ventilated as thoroughly as is consistant with the maintenance of a proper temperature."

Nipped in the Bud.

A woman who appeared to be an excursionist was walking up and down Woodward avenue yesterday with a man's hat in one hand and a large calf-skin wallet in the other, and an officer finally approached her and asked:

"Madam, are you looking for any one?"

"Oh, no," she replied, "I know right where he is."

"Are you in any trouble?"

"No, sir. I never allow anything to trouble me."

"But you——you——"

"It's just this way, sir. Me and my husband came in on the excursion. After we got here he began to frisk and cut up, and I proceeded to nip him in the bud. He's over there on the City Hall steps, bareheaded and without a cent, while I hold the key of the position."—Detroit Free Press.

PARTLOW'S LUCK.

The buckboard and steady going ponies of Mr. Jackson Bitts, late of boomless New Chicago, rounded a bend in the timber road a moment after a man, mounted on a racking horse, entered it from a sideway which joined the main road a little beyond the bend.

The racking of the equestrian's steed was kept from becoming monotonous by a tendency upon the part of the racker to stumble at the slightest provocation, and his rider, as he weakly reversed the horse at the sound of the buckboard's approach and came racking toward it, looked as if a persistence in that mode of traveling might speedily result in shaking him to pieces.

He was thin and wan, as if from a recent illness, and his mouth had a discouraged droop at the corners.

He begged to share the buckboard seat with Mr. Bitts, supplementing the excuse that he was in danger of being unable to long keep his joints together if forced to continue the victim of the rack.

"A feller," he said presently, with a mournful tone that was almost a sigh—"a feller must save himself all he kin—'specially when luck's agin him."

He had fastened the racker behind the buckboard and crawled onto the seat with an "Um—ah!" of relief.

The two men exchanged the civilities of "passing the time o' day," and Mr. Bitts, having done all that courtesy demanded of him, was ready to resume the attack upon the chaotic schemes with which he had been wrestling before the appearance of the other.

"When luck's agin him," his passenger repeated sightfully, "as it is agin me!"

"I reckon so," agreed Mr. Bitts, encouraging but little the evident desire of the other to indulge in reminiscencing.

Mr. Jackson Bitts, late of New Chicago, was interested more in Junction City and the financial benefit he expected to derive from the place than in the woes of the man beside him.

He had approached New Chicago six months before with the same wrestling with schemes that now tore him.

The boom at that settlement had waxed and waned, and Mr. Bitts had failed to enrich himself; but with the ever springing hope that animates the true boomer, he was now on his way to Junction City, filled with still greater confidence than he had entertained upon approaching New Chicago.

It was decided and announced that the Dakota and Gulf railway would cross the Transcontinental railway at a certain point where there was not little of nature's handiwork to be seen.

The road bed of the Transcontinental a shanty on the line between two homestead claims, an apology for a fence, another for a stable—that was about all there was to be seen.

This was at noon. A little later the agents of the two railroads and one of the proprietors of the shanty on the line between the claims were actively at work with a gang of men, and before 10 o'clock of the following day the entire section had been staked off in streets and lots.

At noon the sale of lots began, and before night many had been sold. By sunset half a dozen shanties had been "slapped up," and Junction City began to be.

The rapidity with which the news of the new born boom traveled was astonishing. The next day the building of houses and the coming of inhabitants began in good earnest.

Shanties sprang up. Others came on wheeled trucks from deserted claims and more or less excuseless settlements. Tents were plentiful. There appeared what out of courtesy were called stores. There, too, was a "hotel," the accommodations of which were little short of awful, and a saloon where was dispensed liquid comfort mostly of the "Battleax's brand.

A day later the initial number of the Junction City Pioneer was sprung upon the settlement by an enterprising gentleman who had previously founded The Sumner Pioneer and the New Paris Pioneer. There were also many other evidences of the daring and activity that a new born boom develops

Bitts passenger wriggled about on the seat of the buckboard and sighed again.

"Luck's be'n agin me ever since I kin remember," he ventured presently. "Name's Partlow—Oracle Partlow."

He paused to note the effect of this announcement.

Mr. Bitts uttered an "uh-huh" of assent, and withdrew within his shell.

"Yep," continued Mr. Partlow with pathetic pride, "I reckon I'm the unluckiest man 'twixt this an' anywhurs. I've b'en mighty nigh everything but plumb killed."

"That's bad," commented Mr. Bitts, without emotion.

"Um—ah! you bet!" pursued Mr. Partlow, warming up. "I've be'n shot by a deputy sher'f for a hawse thief. I've be'n blowed nearly out uv the county by a cyclone. I've stood on a bar'l with a rope around my neck, waitin' for a vigilantes committee to decide whether I was the feller they wanted or not, an' I was tarred an' feathered once by mistake. I've be'n held up by road agents an' robbed uv my last three dollars. I've be'n chased by a crazy man. My wife ran away with a man who owed me, an' who was reckoned by me to be sure pay. A well caved in on me once, an' kept me buried for forty hours with a half inch crack to breath through. I've had the rheumatiz off an' on for ten years, an' the ager right smart of the time. An', all things considered, I reckon luck's agin me:"

"Looks so!" agreed Mr. Bitts, mildly interested.

"Wal," resumed Partlow, after I had drifted about all over the west, I finally struck this part of the State an' settled down. a few miles south uv yere on a claim jinin' the one that Ike Blue took up next day. I 'lowed that out thar on the flat land, with little to steal an' apparently nobody to pester, I might sort o' live down my luck!"

He went on to tell how Mr. Blue and himself had erected their shanty across the dividing line of the two claims, each sleeping on the part of the cabin on his own homestead, thus making a cheap pretense of complying with the requirements of the homestead law demanding a place of residence on each claim.

Then, before they had got more than fairly settled, the Transcontinental railway put in an appearance, cutting their claims in twain, and remunerating their owners but scantily therefor.

No serious misfortune had overtaken Mr. Partlow, however, but his accustomed ill luck manifested itself often enough to keep him in mind of the fact that man is of few days and full of trouble.

The only cow possessed by the partners choked to death on almost the last of their turnips; the chinch bugs made merry with their discouraged looking wheat, and a train on the Transcontinental so frightened the team of horses that they ran away with a borrowed mowing machine and Mr. Partlow, ruining the former and endangering the life of the latter.

But all this was nothing more than he expected, he said sighfully, and it was therefore met with becoming resignation by Mr. Partlow. But Mr. Blue less familiar with misfortune, began to look with suspicion upon his partner as a sort of modern and degenerate Jonah.

"Shouldn't wonder," commented Mr. Bitts.

It had been but lately that Partlow, though feeling physically out of shape, as he expressed it had ridden to New Chicago on an errand of no interest to us, and while returning had become weak, ill and delirious and as he learned afterward, had been found wandering aimlessly about at a considerable distance from the way he should have pursued, and faithfully followed by his old horse.

Partlow had been taken in and cared for by kind souls, and was now only just recovering from a severe illness.

He was ready to prognosticate more ill luck for the future.

Prompted by what he had believed a premonition, he had, before leaving the double claim given Mr. Blue a laboriously executed document resembling a power of attorney, giving him authority over his claim during his absence.

And now it would not surprise him much, he confessed, to find that Blue, concluding he had feloniously run away with the racking horse, had indulged in some retaliatory measure. He could not see how Blue could avoid entertaining an uncomplimentary opinion of him, at the very least.

"The claims air jest over beyond the timber thar," he continued; "an' I wouldn't be surprised if"—

His further forebodings were interrupted by the appearance of a little squad of horsemen, who came galloping toward them out of the timber, just ahead.

That's Ike in front. The rest air strangers to me," he said gloomily. "Wonder what's up?"

"Ike, what"—he began, as the horsemen reached the buckboard.

"Shut up!" broke in Mr. Blue. "We've got a surprise for you!"

Partlow doubled up a little closer on the seat of the buckboard. They were half way through the timber before he spoke again.

"Wonder what they're up to!" he muttered to Bitts. "Mebby there goin' to hang me, or sump'n'! Say, Ike, I hain't done nuth'n' an' "—

"Shut up!" broke in the gentleman addressed.

"Jest my reg'lar luck," sighed Partlow. "But I hain't done nuth'n'!"

As they emerged from the timber he looked up to see the familiar outlines of the shanty on the line between the two claims.

Instead he, wide eyed and open mouthed, beheld new born, bustling, booming Junction City, with its already respectable showing of houses and tents.

There appeared activity everywhere—men hurrying hither and thither, more shanties and tents springing up, a building just rolling in on trucks, a new depot rising skyward—in short, the springing up of a prairie "city."

"W'y—w'y—I—how—where"—

Mr. Partlow threatened to collapse.

"It's part uv the surprise," grinned Ike Blue. "You an' me own half uv the town. More'n a thousand dollars' worth uv lots sold already, an' more a-goin' all the time. Prices risin' every minute. We'll be rich men yet, Ork, ole feller!"

"I—my luck"—

"Has changed at last. I found out where you was very soon after you was taken sick, but as you wa'n't in any great danger I reckoned on not lettin' you know anything about this till I could spring it on you all at once."

"I can't believe!" faltered Partlow. I"—

"Oh, it's all true!"

"Rich—luck changed—I can't believe my senses!" said Partlow, slowly. "I reckon I'm losin' my mind or sump'n'!"

He rose to step down from the buckboard, and weak from his recent illness and the excitement fell forward to the ground.

"His arm is broken in two places," was the verdict of the doctor who had arrived at the settlement in good time to be called to the cabin whither Partlow had been carried.

"Things air all right yet!" he said, weakly. "I hain't losin' my mind, after all. I'm still Oracle Partlow!"

Antidotes To Poisons.

The following valuable lists of antidotes for poisons taken from the Trained Nurse, should be closely studied by every parent, so that, in the event of accidental swallowing of poison, the proper antidote can be promptly administered without dangerous delay.

When the poison is unknown, this is the treatment: Provoke repeated vomiting; give bland liquids; stimulate if necessary.

For arsenic, Paris green, Scheele's green: Provoke vomiting; give dialysed iron and salt (repeat several times); give dose of castor oil; secure rest; stimulate if necessary.

For sugar of lead: Give epsom salts; provoke vomiting (repeat several times); give bland liquids; give dose of casior oil.

For corrosive sublimate, tartar emetic: Provoke vomiting; give strong tea without milk (repeat several times); give raw eggs and milk; give dose of castor oil; stimulate if necessary.

Opium—morphine, laudanum, paregoric, etc., chloral: Provoke vomiting, repeatedly; give strong coffee, without milk; keep up the breathing.

Strychnine: Provoke vomiting once or twice; give a purgative; secure absolute quiet.

Aconite: Provoke vomiting; stimulate well.

Alcohol: Provoke vomiting; give hartshorn and water.

To provoke vomiting, warm water may be used with or without ground mustard (a tablespoon to a pint of water), or ipecac (a teaspoonful of the powder, or a tablespoonful or so of the syrup, and thrusting a finger down the throat. It is best to give large quantities (that is, a pint at a time) of warm water whenever vomiting is to be excited.

Stimulants are tea, coffee, whiskey, wine, etc., or hartshorn and water. Of this a teaspoonful in a teacupful of water will be enough for a dose.

In making tea or coffee, one must not wait to do it as if for the table, but mix hot water with the leaves or grounds, squeeze them well, stir together, and give the whole—leaves, grounds, and everything. At the same time, some may be made regularly if there are conveniences for it.

Alkaline antidotes are hartshorn and water (a tablespoonful in two teacupfuls of water), soap and water, lime, whiting, soda, chalk, toothpowder, plaster, magnesia, whitewash and even wood-ashes.

Acid antidotes are vinegar and lemon juice.

At a large board school in England 300 boys are given a bath once a week.

The World's Fair.

The excitement caused by this great event is scarcely equaled by that produced by the great discovery of Dr. Miles—the Restorative Nervine. It speedily cures nervous prostration, change of life, pain, dullness and confusion in head, fits sleeplessness, the blues, neuralgia, palpitation, monthly pains, etc. C. W. Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; Talbot & Moss, of Greensburg, Ind., and A. Blackburn of Wooster, O., say that "The Nervine sells better than anything we ever sold, and gives universal satisfaction." Dr. Miles' new illustrated treatise on the Nerves and Heart and trial bottle free at Charles H. Buss's drug store.

In order to obtain dances for the young ladies, the proprietor of a hotel at Alleghany Springs, says the Atlanta Journal, advertised to take dancing young men at a dollar a day. They came in battalions. When they tired of the ball they would go on the veranda to smoke. "Gentlemen," said the proprietor, severely, "you are here to dance; go back to the ball room." On one occasion the weather became very cold. A distribution of blankets was made among the full paying guests, and there were none left for the dancing young men. They protested against the treatment, and were loud in their complaints. "You are here to dance," said the proprietor, "and if you are cold go to the ball room. There you can warm up."

A Safe Investment.

Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure a return of purchase price. On this safe plan you can buy from our advertised Druggist a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It is guaranteed to bring relief in every case, when used for any affection of Throat, Lungs or Chest, such as Consumption, Inflamation of Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Croup, etc., etc. It is pleasant and agreeable to taste, perfectly safe, and can always be depended upon. Trial bottles free at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store.

Two well-known citizens of Petersburg, Va., went gunning on Tuesday. They were exposed all day to a rain storm, and one of them walked home after nightfall, arriving, says the Washington Post, "in an almost frozen condition, and shortly afterward became delirious. His condition is very critical." The other man remained in the marsh during the night, and was found in the morning outside the city limits, "stiff and cold and unconcious." He subsequently died.

Forced To Leave Home.

Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call at their druggists for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicines. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggist-to-day for a free sample of this grand remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large size packages 50 cents.

"Bridget, this is altogether too much; you have a new follower in the kitchen every week." "Well, ma'am, you see, the food in this house is so bad that no one will come here for longer than a week."

To My Friends.

As you are well aware that I would not recommend that which I did not believe to be good, I desire to say to all who need a good, reliable, family medicine, that I believe one bottle of Sulphur Bitters will do you more good than any other remedy I ever saw.—REV. CEPHAS SOULE.

The Coming Girl.

The coming girl will cook her own food, will earn her own living, and will not die an old maid. The coming girl will not wear the Grecian bend, dance the German, ignore all possibilities of knowing how to work, will not endeavor to break the hearts of unsophisticated young men, will spell correctly, understand English before she affects French, will preside at equal grace at the piano or wash-tub, will spin more yarn for the house than for the street, will not despise her plainly clad mother, her poor relations or the hand of an honest worker.

The coming girl will walk five miles a day if need be to keep her cheeks aglow; will mind her health, her physical development, and her mother, will adopt a costume both sensible and conducive to health; will not confound hypocrisy with politeness; will not place lying to please above frankness.

The coming girl will not look to Paris but to reason for her fashions; will not aim to follow a foolish fashion because milliners and dressmakers decree it; will not torture her body, shrivel her soul with puerilities, or ruin it with wine and pleasure. In short, the coming girl will seek to glorify her Maker and to enjoy mentally His works. Duty will be her aim, and life a living reality.—Exchange.

The Purest and Best

Articles known to medical science are used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla. Every ingredient is carefully selected, personally examined, and only the best retained. The medicine is prepared under the supervision of thoroughly competent pharmacists, and every step in the process of manufacture is carefully watched with a view to securing in Hood's Sarsaparilla the best possible result.

TREATMENT FOR BURNS.—Some time since a gentleman severely burned the balls of his fingers by lifting a piece of burning wood which he supposed to be cold. The burn was deep but the skin was not broken. He immediately applied cold water in which a large amount of soda had been dissolved (a very valuable treatment for slight burns,) but owing to the severity of the burn and the many nerves centering in the ends of the fingers, the pain was very intense. A physician present recommended the following treatment, which proved wonderfully effective: Immerse the fingers in a four per cent solution of cocaine until the pain ceases, then immediately paint the entire burned surface with collodion. This was done, and in three or four minutes the pain was relieved. After the fingers were painted as directed no more trouble was experienced from the burn.

When will the average citizen stop spending his hard earnings on cigars and tobacco? Give it up? Well, when he finds he can do without tobacco and cigars but not without Dr. Ball's Cough Syrup.

For County Commissioner, ... J. Henry Reed
For Representative (Woburn) .. Elmore A. Pierce
For Representative (Reading) Henry G. Kittredge

OUR NEXT CONGRESSMAN.

Who shall it be—Fox or Hoar? a Republican or Democrat? It seems to the JOURNAL that there is only one proper course for the Republicans of the 5th Congressional District to pursue and that is to turn to and elect Capt. James A. Fox, the regular Republican nominee. To do anything different from that would be disloyal to the party and detrimental to the interests of the country perhaps.

The Republicans will need all the members it is in their power to elect in the next House of Congress. The Democrats feel so sure of having a majority that they are already casting about for a suitable man for Speaker. While the Republicans do not admit the Democratic claim to be well-founded still they would give considerable to be insured a good working majority in the next House. They cannot afford to lose a man because with the loss of him the control of the body might go out of their hands.

Capt. Fox was regularly nominated at a regularly constituted Congressional convention and is therefore fairly entitled to every Republican vote in the District. On the score of ability, integrity, and clean political principles (being a Republican of the strictest sect) he is equally entitled to receive the full and hearty support of his party.

The Republicans must have the next National House of Representative for more reasons than we have space to enumerate. Speaker Reed must be sustained, and the Tariff measures must be preserved in their integrity, the logic of which is, the Republicans of this Congressional District must pull off their coats, roll up their sleeves, go to work, and triumphantly elect James A. Fox as Gen. Banks's successor.

"UNITED, WE STAND."

In the matter of Representatives to the Legislature from this (14th) District it is of the utmost importance that the Republicans stand shoulder to shoulder and give "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together," if they would elect their candidates Messrs. Elmore A. Pierce and Henry G. Kittredge. There must be harmony in the Republican ranks. United they will be able to beat the Democracy handsomely: divided, they will get whipped out of their boots.

The Republican candidates are worthy gentlemen and deserve a full party vote. They are both sound Republicans and good citizens. Mr. Pierce has as many friends here in Woburn and as good ones as any young man among us, and there is no reason why he should not receive the ballot of every Republican in the District. We have no doubt but that he will. No man stands higher for intelligence and integrity where he is known than Mr. Kittredge. He is not only a popular gentleman at home but deserves to be. They are both good men for the Legislature.

The Republican party in Woburn have not been in such good fighting condition for years as they are now. There are no family quarrels, feuds, bickerings or heart-burnings; and if ever they were in good plight for a brush with the common enemy—the Bourbons—it is to-day.

The right thing for the Republicans to do now is to close up the ranks; make a thorough personal canvass of the District; lay plans and appoint men to get out a full Republican vote: and if these steps are taken victory, as big as life, will be sure to perch on the banners of Pierce and Kittredge on November 4 next.

REPUBLICAN RALLIES.

There will be a Republican mass-meeting in this city on the evening of Oct. 25, where Hon. Joseph H. Walker and Congressional Candidate Fox will be the chief orators.

Another rally will be held on Nov. 3 which will be addressed by Col. A. A. Wheelock, and Secretary Clarke of the Home Market Club.

These meetings will be held more especially for the benefit of Candidate Fox.

Let every Republican in Woburn be on hand and give Capt Fox a rousing welcome when he appears on the stump here.

STATE ELECTION.

The general election in this State will take place on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next which will be the 4th day of that month.

☞ Mr. Thomas D. Hevey, whom the Democracy placed in nomination for the Legislature last Saturday evening, is a very likely young man and would represent the District with credit. He is a member of the Board of Registrars of Voters and as such enjoys the confidence and respect of everybody. He is a clean, intelligent, well-educated and well-behaved person, and were he a good Republican we would like to see him elected. But then, Messrs. Pierce and Kittredge are equally clean, intelligent, well-educated and well-behaved, which takes away all excuse for any Republican to vote for Mr. Hevey in place of them. Republicans, stick by your candidates.

☞ The Evening Traveler, which is one of the best dailies in Boston, is now sold for two cents a copy except the Saturday evening edition, which is sold for three cents per copy. It is a wide awake journal, and at 2 cents is cheaper than dirt.

☞ Hon. B. F. Whittemore of Montvale will address a Fox mass-meeting at Lexington on Oct. 20.

— Bonelli has a change of advertisement this week.

— Yesterday was another of those perfect October days.

— A boathouse was burned yesterday morning at Horn Pond.

— Mark the change in the real estate card of Cooper and Rand.

— Dr. George S. Dodge and Mrs. Dodge were in this city last Tuesday.

— It rained again like fury last Tuesday. It was a cold sort of a rain too.

— It should be Mrs. instead of Miss Minnie W. Seaver in her advertisement.

— They say the committee on building an Armory have decided to buy a lot near Main street.

— Mrs. Ketchum, formerly Miss Taylor, of Lawrence visited friends in this city last Tuesday.

— There was a very small blaze at the corner of Main street and Montvale Avenue yesterday morning.

— The boat-house of the Innitou Canue Club at Horn Pond was not burned as reported yesterday morning.

— The attention of ladies is called to the card of Mrs. Seaver in this paper. It is a matter worth looking into.

— The Herald of Jasper, Tenn., received from Mr. T. H. Hill, tells all about the late great land sale at Sequachee.

— On Oct. 31, a dance will be given at Vidette Hall by the Jolly Rovers. Look out for some lively "shaking of the hoof."

— No new names can go on to the list of registration after Oct. 25. Remember this, gentlemen candidates, and others.

— People are beginning to talk about "Priscilla." Everybody will be there to hear it. It will be a big musical treat.

— Perseverance Div. S. of T. will hold a coffee party and entertainment at Fraternity Hall Wednesday evening, Oct. 15, 1890.

— Prof. A. M. Smith, the phrenologist, still continues his stay in Woburn. During the last week he has met with splendid success.

— Since Prior has got 1-pane plate-glass windows in his new store he seems very contented and happy. He has got moved to 421 Main street.

— Mr. Kittridge, the Republican candidate for Representative to the Legislature, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Curtis Greenwood of this city.

— The "Flowers' Christmas Lesson," written by William C. Hill when he was 16 years old, will be published in the JOURNAL at an early day.

— Mr. Hayward keeps pegging away at the business census of this city. He has sent in about 150 reports already, "and still there's more to follow."

— The funeral of George Perkins, teacher, will take place from the Congregational church at 2 p. m. Sunday. It will be in charge of Post 161.

— The W. H. S. B. held drills yesterday, the first one at 11 a.m., and the second, at 3.15 p.m. The exercises were held on the St. Charles ball field on Salem street.

— Druggist Lovell has got fairly settled in his new quarters (formerly Flanders's) and is doing a good business in drugs, medicines, etc. He is a pleasant gentleman too.

— The funerals of Major J. W. McDonald and Capt. Geo. M. Buchanan took place yesterday afternoon and were largely attended. The Tripps, undertakers, conducted them.

— Hon. Solon Kendall will please accept our thanks for an illustrated copy of the "Excelsior Springs, Mo.," which is a very popular health resort where Mr. Kendall is now stopping.

— Walsh & Haggerty have opened a news depot in the corner store in Mechanics Building on Main and Walnut streets on the counters of which the JOURNAL can always be found.

— Mr. Marshall M. Tidd, C. E., has recently purchased the estate adjoining his residence property on the north and is expending considerable money on it by way of additions and improvements.

— Leon L. Dow of this city was Secretary of the Prohibitory Congressional convention for the 5th District held in Wesleyan Hall, Boston, last week, and was also put on the Campaign Committee.

— It should have been stated in Mrs. Packard's notice by the JOURNAL last week that she employs a first class Boston trimmer in her millinery establishment, whose experience and taste are appreciated by the ladies of Woburn and vicinity.

— Mr. Frank T. Robinson has just returned from a very successful trip to St. Louis and other points in the West in the interests of the Johnston Electric Train Signal Company of this city. He fetched back both pockets full of orders for the signal.

— Mr. Sherman Hoar, the youthful and dudish Democratic candidate for Congress in this District, will orate at Lyceum Hall this evening, providence permitting. If the Democracy are out in full force at the meeting Sherny will wish he hadn't stood the nomination.

— The sale of money by the Co-operative Bank last Thursday evening week was a very satisfactory one, the amount according to Secretary Whitcher's books being $4,050. This institution has done admirably from the start, and its future looks bright and promising.

— Clan McKinnon, No. 45, O. S. C., of this city, will give their 4th annual ball and concert at Lyceum Hall on Friday evening next, Oct. 24. Calnan's Orchestra will furnish the music. A good committee have the arrangements in hand and will do things up shipshape.

— Edward E. Thompson, President of the Common Council, and Mrs. Thompson have returned from a month's visit in the West, their headquarters having been at St. Paul. While away they saw a good deal of Uncle Sam's domain and had altogether a very delightful time.

— Revolving Bookcases with two, three, four, or even five shelves are a great convenience. They take little space and bring over two hundred books within immediate reach. They can be purchased very low at Paine's Furniture Warerooms, 48 Canal street, Boston. Their catalogue is mailed free.

— The Y. M. A. held their monthly meeting and banquet at Concert Hall last evening with a full attendance. Mr. Edward K. Hood, the well known Boston elecutionist, was the guest of the Club. He entertained the meeting in a delightful manner. Other pleasant after-supper exercises were held.

— The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited. —tf.

— By reference to our business columns it will be seen that Mrs. Maxwell, whose popular millinery rooms are in the Frank Dodge block, has decided on the time for holding her fall millinery opening, which date our lady friends should keep in mind. Mrs. Maxwell has a fine stock of fall and winter millinery goods, of the latest styles and best quality. She will sell cheap.

— Owing to the perseverance and good sense of Postmaster Reade Woburn has now 12 mails every day to Boston, and 12 mails every day from Boston, being one each way for every working hour. He has recently perfected arrangements whereby we have two daily mails to and from Lowell and Lawrence, besides some indirect ones, and a good system with the country north of those cities.

— Our reporter applied to the wrong place for information respecting the plumbing of Mrs. Dow's mansion and therefore got things wrong respecting the cost and some other things concerning it. The fact of the case is, the work is not finished yet and nobody knows at this time what the expense of it will be. So much for not going to either the plumber or owner for a "straight" report of the work.

— At a recent meeting of Perseverance Division S. of T. Deputy G. W. P. Edgar of Cambridgeport installed the following officers: Hugh Murray, W. P.; Miss Emma Frazer, W. A.; A. Grant, Chaplain; F. Patterson, R. S.; Miss Dolly Hunt, Asst. R. S.; J. W. Stewart, F. S.; Miss Mary Whittie, Treasurer; Mr. W. S. Fetridge, Conductor; Mrs. D. Stewart, I. S.; Miss Hattie Whittie, O. S.

— Mr. C. M. Munroe has got full plate-glass panes put into his store-front which is the finishing touch to a store that for size, convenience, light and pleasantness can't be beaten by any other in Woburn. Not only has Mr. Munroe at last secured an admirable store but he has filled it with a fall and winter stock of clothing, gentlemen's under and neckwear, hats and caps, fine shirts, gloves, umbrellas, etc., which is second to no one in Middlesex county.

— On Oct. 9 a sum of money ($20) was found in the store of Mr. Henry F. Bulfinch, No. 450 Main street, by his son Wallace M. Bulfinch, and returned to Mrs. Wier, 29 South street, a widow woman who lost the purse while making purchases at the store. She was delighted to get her money back that she generously rewarded the boy for his honesty. Cases of return of money found are so rare that we think it proper to give publicity to them when reported.

— All watches are said to be compasses, and the matter is explained this way: Point the hour hand to the sun and the south is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the watch. For instance, suppose that it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun and 11 on the watch is exactly south. Suppose that it is 8 o'clock, point the hand indicating 8 to the sun, and the figure X on the watch is due south. This is a good thing for woodmen and hunters to remember.

— Last Monday morning Capt. John L. Parker, Editor of the Lynn Item, and formerly proprietor of the WOBURN JOURNAL, made a brief call at our office. He was on a sorrowful erraud here: it was to arrange for the burial of his daughter, a record of whose decease appears in another column of this paper. There are a great many people in this city who will deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Parker in their sore bereavement, for up to a few years ago they were highly respected members of society here.

— A large concourse of people—old friends, neighbors and acquaintances of his—attended the funeral of Mr. William B. Harris at his residence on Lexington street last Friday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. Daniel D. Winn, pastor of the First Baptist Church in this city. There were floral tributes from Posts 33 and 161, G. A. R., and from Relief corps 83 and 84, many members of these organizations also being in attendance. The bearers were Col. William T. Grammar, Capt. John P. Crane, Capt. Charles A. McDonald and Albert P. Barrett. On the way to the cemetery members of Corps 84 joined the procession.

— The lecture on "The National Spirit of Ireland" at Lyceum Hall last Monday evening by Rev. Eugene McMahon was a very interesting one indeed. The Hall was filled to its utmost capacity and profound attention was paid to the lecture from beginning to end. Rev. McMahon is an easy, graceful speaker, while the subject which he so skilfully handled was one in which all Irishmen are deeply interested. The home of the lecturer is at Carrick-macross, county Monaghan, Ireland, which was also the birthplace and early home of Mr. Edward Crosby, of Miss Mary and Kate Agnew, and near where Mr. Thomas Salmon (all of this city) was born and brought up.

— On next Monday a change of time of departure will be made in the 6,25 (Theatre) p.m. train. As at present run it is the meanest train of the whole lot. By it it takes 44 minutes to reach Boston from Woburn, whereas heretofore the very slowest trains have made it in 40 minutes. The idea of being side-tracked at Winchester 9 minutes is a strange one. But it will be remedied next Monday. And the 8.29 (formerly 8.28) p.m. train will stop here every trip, for Station Agent Greene got orders to that effect last Tuesday and has brought "Old Growler" to a stand-still every evening since.

— Mrs. C. Packard's autumn millinery opening for 1890 was inaugurated under the most encouraging auspices yesterday and will close this evening. Last evening her spacious and very pleasant millinery parlors at 419 Main street were alive with the representatives of the fashion of the city and surrounding country, and should the weather be favorable the crowd will doubtless be much larger this evening than last. The ladies are attracted by the great variety of styles which Mrs. Packard displays in bonnets, hats, and trimmings of all kinds, by the fine quality of them, and the reasonable prices at which she sells her goods.

— The "Jennette," the exhibition car of the Harris Palatial Car Co. of Boston, was brought out to this city last Sunday and during the few hours it remained here it was visited, and its beauties and peculiar mechanism seen and admired, by large crowds of people. The car was photographed while here by Hall of New York who was sent for to do it (as there is no lens in Boston large enough) and also the depot. The inventor of the car is Mr. Lewis Harris, a native of Woburn, son of Mr. Luther Harris, and grandson of Mr. William B. Harris whose funeral took place in this city last week. The car cost about $45,000. Mayor Johnson and wife and Dr. Frank W. Graves and wife and two lady friends of theirs rode into Boston and had lunch on the car as guests of the company.

— After the affair was over Mayor Johnson wrote President Amos F. Breed of the No. Woburn Street Railroad Co. a letter thanking him warmly for his kindness in furnishing free transportation to the 2000 or 2500 school children of this city to and from the new City Park on last Friday afternoon. It was a very happy affair, conceived by Park Commissioner Gilman F. Jones, and handsomely carried out without an accident by Supt. Sewell of the N. W. St. R.R. Co. and Mr. Jones. It was a sort of dedicatory pilgrimage which the children made to the Park, where they were met by Mayor Johnson, School Supt. Frank B. Richardson, Gen. Secretary Bailey of the Y. M. C. A., and others interested in the sports of the small folks who acted the part of conductors to the besieging foe. The little ones had a splendid ride in the Co's fine open cars, they had nice sport on the Park grounds, and they were as noisy a lot as could be "found in the seven States."

— The comic opera, Priscilla, to be given at Lyceum Hall, Nov. 5 and 6, is one of the most charming light operas ever written. The subject is enough to interest the general public to say nothing of the bright, fascinating music. Miss Mabel Davis assumes the role of Resignation, the middle aged spinster. This character, with that of Hatebad Higgins, being most amusing and funny. One of the most charming features in the opera is the duett "I may be wrong, I may be right," between these two characters. The part of William Bradford, Governor of New Plymouth, will be taken by Mr. Frank Cummings of No. Woburn. Miss Stella Lincoln and Miss Addie Richards are the "Mayflower buds." The remainder of the caste is from Boston, including Mrs. Bates-Rice, Mr. Chase, Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Dodd and Miss Maud Pratt. Miss Mertena L. Bancroft is the pianist, and Mr. Macomber of Boston will conduct both performances. Certainly Lyceum Hall should be crowded each evening.

— The attempt last week to organize a Democratic Club in Ward 2 was not a monumental success. In fact it was rather a failure judged by the ordinary standards by which success and defeat in such matters are measured. There was a grand flourish of trumpets by way of arousing Democratic enthusiasm in the Ward and a brilliant programme was laid out for the meeting. Not having a fear of the fate of Annanias in their hearts the movers for the Club rented Highland Hall on Fowle street for the season's headquarters and rallying-point notwithstanding it will hold ten times as many people as there are Democrats in the Ward; then they announced an array of oratorical talent perfectly astounding, among them Shermy Hoar who imagines he is running against Capt. Fox for Congress, and a host of others; a brass band was to be one of the permanent attractions at the Hall; and frequent oyster suppers and oceans of free "tangle-leg" were placed on the regular every-day bill of fare. With all the orators, oysters and rum the meeting for the organization was to be "a big thing on ice," and it made the old bummers' mouths water just to think of it. The evening came—last Friday, we believe it was—but the crowd that gathered at the Hall wasn't big enough to constitute one side of a mass meeting, or come anywhere near it. Several good judges of assemblies made estimates on the number present and their figures ranged all the way from 17 to 21, the general average being 19 1 2. There wasn't an orator present of any note unless it might have been Warren Perrigo, Esq., and if he was present he was also silent. Putting the paucity of numbers and the fact that the evening's rent of the hall must be met the presiding officer appointed a committee to go over and invite the Highland Club in and help celebrate. The latter declined to "walk into my parlor" and staid away. It was a trying experience to those present (from 17 to 21) and and if they had not been sufficiently thoughtful to fortify themselves in good shape before coming to the meeting it would have been a gloomy affair indeed. It was bad enough as it was. The men and boys lounged around, smoked, spit on the stove, discussed politics, and lamented the lukewarmness of the brethen, until they got so thirsty they couldn't stand it any longer, when the meeting adjourned sine die and the project of organizing a Democratic Club was abandoned for good and all.

This May Mean You.

Are you up with the times and do you get the best the market affords for the money you pay out? How is it out in the kitchen? Have you the modern improvements there? If you have, then this is not written for you, because you are buying and using Brussels soap. If otherwise, be wise, and when next you order soap, try Brussels and you will gain a point over hard work. It's economical.

Democratic Convention

Last Saturday evening the Democrats of the Fourteenth Representative District held their convention in Room 9, Savings Bank Building in this city for the purpose of nominating two candidates for the Legislature. It was a very full convention.

There were several candidates, among them Dr. George P. Bartlett, Edward E. Parker, Robert J. W. Phinney and Thomas D. Hevey.

William F. Kenney, Chairman of the city committee, called the convention to order and was chosen temporary and then permanent Chairman, and John C. Meehan was chosen Secretary.

A discussion followed regarding the representation in the convention.

The following named were chosen committee on credentials: John Short, Jacob A. Ham, P. Henry Mathews, David F. Moreland, William McDonough, James Wolf, Frank M. Doherty, all of Woburn, and Henry Robinson of Reading.

They reported 25 delegates from Woburn and three from Reading.

Mr. Bancroft of the Reading delegation stated that James Reid of that town was the choice of the Reading Democrats, and he was unanimously indorsed by the convention.

The Woburn delegation then proceeded to select their candidate, with the following named as a committee on voting: John C. Meehan, David F. Moreland, John Short, C. A. Jones.

Some nomination speeches were made, William F. Kenney speaking for Robert J. W. Phinney, and John Short for Thomas D. Hevey.

The informal vote was Phinney, 2; Hevey, 6; Bartlett, 8; Parker, 9. The first and second formal votes were alike, Parker losing 2 and Phinney 1, all going to Hevey, who now had 9. On the third ballot all but Phinney had 8 each.

On the fourth ballot Hevey had crawled up to 10, which was within three of enough to elect him, while the other men lost each one vote.

On the sixth ballot, and after a recess, all of Parker's friends went to Hevey, making 17 votes to 7 for Dr. Bartlett and 1 for Mr. Phinney.

Mr. Hevey's name was then indorsed by the convention, and a committee was sent for Mr. Hevey, and, finding him, and bringing him to the convention, the candidate made a brief speech, accepting the nomination.

Elmore A. Pierce,

One of the nominees of the convention, is an elocutionist by profession. He is also engaged in journalistic and other literary work. He is just entering the prime of life.

Mr. Pierce is a native of Reading, having been born in that part of the town known as "Hill End." He is a young man of good address and has been an active political worker. From our short personal acquaintance with him we should think that he is energetic and progressive, a combination of qualities which should tend to make him decidedly popular. He fills an important position as the agent of the Associated Press in the city of Woburn and vicinity. He will doubtless make a strong fight with good chances for an election.—Reading Chronicle.

Parsons—Bulfinch.

At the residence of the groom's mother in Stoneham at 8 o'clock on Wednesday evening, Oct 8, Mr. Charles H. D. Parsons of Stoneham, and Miss Nellie H. Bulfinch, daughter of Mr. Henry F. Bulfinch of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. W. W. Sleeper of that place.

The wedding was attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the happy couple, who were generously remembered with many valuable and beautiful presents as tokens of love and good will.

Mr. and Mrs. Parsons will reside at Stoneham.

"My feet are so slim I never can get a good fit unless I pay quite a high price." Then try Stetson at his well-known store, corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, and see what he can do for you in the way of a Ladies' fine boot. Goat or Kid for just $2.

"Chipman's Liver Pills

the best in the world. Never gripe or make you sick. They are purely vegetable, and will sure cure your bilious trouble. All who use them speak well of them. Sold by all druggists."

Laying the Corner Stone.

The corner-stone of the Scandinavian Evangelical Free Church, corner of Montvale and Greenwood Avenues, this city, was laid last Saturday afternoon at 4 p. m. in the presence of a goodly number of people. The exercises were opened by singing the Gospel Hymn No. 29 "What a Friend we Have in Jesus," led by William Crosby, Court St., on the Corner, and Mr. J. P. Bailey Singer, followed by Invocation by Rev. A. G. Nilson from Chicago; singing Gospel Hymn No. 73; reading of Scripture, Ps. 122, Rev. Hugh Montgomery; reading of the papers deposited in the box, by Rev. Dr. March, D. D.; placing the box in its place in the vault, Charles R. Rosenquist; putting the stone in its place, C. H. Svenson and N. C. Olsen, when each one of the Building Committee, put in some mason work; prayer of Dedication, Dr. March and Rev. S. K. Didricksen from Boston; singing Gospel Hymn, 122; Address by Rev. Hugh Montgomery and A. G. Nilson; Collection; Singing Gospel Hymn 114, "Blest be the tie that Binds;" Benediction by Rev. Dr. March. The services were conducted in the English, Swedish and Danish—Norwegian Languages, and was of much interest for all present.

The Box contained the history of the first Scandinavians in Woburn—the beginning of the Scandinavian Evangelical work in this city, July 1882; its first meetings, the formation of the Scandinavian Society, June 24, 1884, of 7 members (all active to-day except one); the first preachers, the first Sunday School, the work of the Society, the beginning of raising money among ourselves in July 1888 for the erection of a church, the incorporation of the Scandinavian Evangelical Free Church of Woburn, June 27, 1889; the proposed cost of this church, names of the present members of this church, the officers of the church, the officers of the Sunday School, the buildding committee, name of the builder of the church and the men who worked on it, cost of land, cost of cellar, cost of building, names of clergymen taking part in these ceremonies, names of persons and amount contributed towards this building: American, Swedish, Norwegian and Danish coins; one copy of each of the last edition of the three Woburn Newspapers; News and Sunday school papers, printed in the English, Swedish, Norwegian or Danish languages; one photograph of the proposed Scandinavian Church; one Swedish—English New Testament: 40 Gospel Songs, O. Johnson, one of the members, the author: one copy of "Home Missionary," one of "The Sailors Magazine," one of "The Missionary Herald," and one of "The World."

Who Is Henry G. Kittridge?

He is a Reading gentleman, and one of the Republican candidates for Representative to the Massachusetts House of Representatives for the 14th Middlesex District. Any of his Reading neighbors or Boston business acquaintances whom you may happen to meet will tell you without the least hesitation that he is an intelligent man, an educated man, a man of the strictest integrity, upright and exemplary in his daily walk and conversation, and in every respect worthy of the cordial support of the Republican party at the polls.

Mr. Kittridge is Editor-in-Chief of The Boston Journal of Commerce, a paper that stands high with the manufacturers of textile fabrics in this and foreign countries. Years ago he was engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods in the different positions of superintendent of factories, agent for the sale of their products, and proprietor. He made a success of the business.

He stands high as an authority on textiles, and is corresponding member of several foreign industrial societies. Such was the confidence placed in him that he was appointed a juror to represent the United States of America in the late Paris Exposition.

At his home in Reading Mr. Kittridge is highly esteemed and enjoys the confidence of the town. For several years he was a member of the Reading School Board; it was principally through his instrumentality that Reading secured her Water Works; and in all matters calculated to promote the growth and prosperity of the place he has always been prominent.

This, in the fewest words possible, is Mr. Henry G. Kittridge, one of the Republican candidates for Representative to the General Court from the 14th Middlesex District.

A Pleasant Evening.

By invitation of Mrs. Gilman A. Bean her Sunday School class spent a most enjoyable evening at her pleasant residence on Fairmount street, last Friday. When giving the invitations Mrs. Bean requested each one to come prepared to give an account of any outing she had enjoyed during the summer. In response to this request some very agreeable experiences were related. For so small a number of people, only eight being present, it was surprising how much variety had been experienced, and how large extent of country had been covered. Mountains and seashore, remote villages and large cities, camp-meetings and literary assemblies, were all reported from with a brightness of perception which showed plainly that "having eyes they could see." After the notes of travel had been discussed we were invited to partake of a dainty collation served from delicate china, the table tastefully decorated with fruit and flowers. By each plate was laid a pretty souvenir in form of a leaflet enclosed in an ornamental cover and containing verses from a favorite poetess. Ten o'clock came all too soon and with many assurances of a delightful evening, we bade our kind hostess and teacher goodnight, feeling assured that such social gatherings do much to bind together the members of a class who from the circumstances of life rarely or never meet, except in the hour of study Sunday noon. —H.

Saturday evening the meeting will be led by a young man from Somerville.

Boys meeting at 3 p. m. Sunday, and those who come will be richly paid.

The 4 o'clock Sunday meeting will be addressed by Rev. John H. Hector, the colored orator, who has been asked to relate his experience and sing some of the jubilee songs.

On Tuesday evening the opening of the Boys Branch; entertainment in evening and supper served at 6 p. m. to all members of the Branch and also to those Boys who will join before or at that time.

The annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Massachusetts and Rhode Island will be held at Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 23 26. This will undoubtedly, be the largest Y. M. C. A. convention ever held in New England. Preparations are being made by the Haverhill association to entertain 500 delegates.

Narrow Margin.

In 1888 the vote in Woburn and Reading, which compose the 14th Middlesex Representative District, stood as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.
Woburn,	1077	1346
Reading,	459	198
	1536	1544
Dem. Majority,		8

On the Congressional vote in the two towns the Republican candidate received 1548, and the Democratic candidate, 1549.

So you see, gentlemen candidates, the margin for you to go and come on is exceedingly narrow.

The W. C. T. Unions

of Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Wilmington, and Medford are to join in a neighborhood meeting at the Congregational Church, Reading, on Wednesday, Oct. 29, at 10.30 a. m. The members of the Woburn Union are cordially invited to attend. Basket collation. Per order Committee of Arrangements.

Would most respectfully announce to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the production at the Lyceum Hall, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, November 5 and 6, of that new and Charming Comic Opera, Priscilla, which has made such an instantaneous hit wherever produced. The costumes and appointments will be the same as will be used at the Boston performance the coming season, special scenery and other accessories. The chorus will be made up of about 30 of the principal singers of Woburn. Mr. W. H. Dodd of Boston will assume the role of Hatebad Higgins and will also have direction of the stage. No pains will be spared to make this event one of the most noteworthy in the amusement annals of Woburn. Notwithstanding the large expense in bringing this opera out in first-class shape, popular prices will prevail, and the sale of seats will open at Horton's Bookstore on Saturday evening previous, at 7.30. Out-of-town parties can secure seats by mail or telegraph.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR JAMES W. MCDONALD, a prominent veteran soldier of Woburn, died on Tuesday, Oct. 14, 1890, after a long illness. He was born of Scotch parents in Chatham, New Brunswick, about 70 years ago, came to Boston about 1843, and removed to Woburn in 1845. During the gold excitement in California he went there on the ship Duxbury, and remained there until 1852, when he returned east and worked at the tanning trade in Roxbury, Newark, N. J., Peabody and Portland, Me. In Newark he learned patent leather finishing, and about 1855 he started in the business at North Woburn, but became ill with small-pox before he was fairly under way. His factory there was burned in 1859, but he rebuilt it. When the war broke out he went to Boston and enlisted a portion of a Company of Scotchmen, which was joined with another Company, both recruiting officers being commissioned as Captains though McDonald acted as First Lieutenant. He was wounded in the Seven Days' fight and retreat from the Chickahominy to Harrison's Landing, but remained with the company of which he was Captain until Alexandria was reached, and was sent home as a recruiting officer. During Pope's campaign he was with his regiment, the Eleventh Massachusetts, and was the only man to whom Pope gave honorable mention in his report of that campaign. In 1863 he was commissioned Major. He was in the Gettysburg campaign and was severely wounded at Gettysburg. He was discharged with his regiment at the expiration of their term of service, and in 1864 was commissioned Colonel by Governor Andrews, but was not mustered in, as his regiment, the Eleventh, could not be filled. Since the war he has been at times in the leather business. Some years ago he bought out the Richardson Street Sweeping Machine, and had a contract at one time to sweep the streets of Chicago. Major McDonald invented the unhairing and other machines used in tanning and currying. He had the prominent and sturdy characteristics of the Highland Scotch, was honest, fearless and of great determination. He had a wide circle of warm friends, and wherever known he was highly respected for his integrity and love of justice. He left a widow, a son and daughter, and other relatives here who deeply mourn his death and who have the sympathy of this community in their great bereavement.—X.

CAPTAIN GEORGE MINOT BUCHANAN, son of Mr. George Buchanan, died in this city on the morning of Oct. 14, of consumption, aged about 41 years. He left a wife (daughter of Col. W. T. Grammer) and two children, with a large family circle and many friends to deeply regret his early death.

NEXT CONGRESSMAN.

Hasn't the Turn of Cambridge About Come Round?

James A. Fox the Strongest Man Yet Named.

A Glance at the Man and His Official Career.

It is now eighteen years since Cambridge has had the opportunity to put forth one of its citizens for Congress. The man then selected was undoubtedly the best possible choice, and the present canvass now affords the opportunity of dignifying an eminent citizen of Cambridge with Congressional honors. If this great city has a fit candidate for the office to offer to the Fifth District, then every consideration of justice as well as party policy calls for his nomination. Let every Republican of this District candidly consider the question, is there any abler or more competent man mentioned in connection with this nomination than Hon. James A. Fox of Cambridge? In every relation with his fellow men he has invariably stepped up to leadership. He is a man whose qualities of head and heart invariably and intensely endear him to all who come to know him intimately. There is not one of his opponents who can pretend that James A. Fox is devoid of that mental furnishing which will constitute him a competent and influential Congressman. If he goes to Congress at all, he will go there on the strength of his abilities to adequately represent the Fifth District at Washington. It is beyond all question that his candidacy will strengthen the Republican canvass in this district. It cannot be claimed that any competitor for this nomination can compare with Mr. Fox in versatility, energy, and all the qualities of leadership. As an orator, Cambridge can never be ashamed of Congressman Fox. For an understanding of all the varied wants of his constituents, and for energy to enforce them in national legislation, no rival can claim superiority over this candidate of Cambridge. On the score of fitness for the position, no man can say to a single voter in the district that he should have his vote in preference to Mr. Fox. Cambridge has a right to the Congressman this year, and the friends of Mr. Fox rely upon that spirit of fairness which should dominate the Republicans of the district in making their choice to ensure his nomination. With some candidates the party might run a risk of defeat. With Candidate Fox success is sure. It may be well to again glance at the history of the man who is put forth for such a prominent position.

BIRTH, EDUCATION AND MARRIAGE.

James Augustus Fox was born in Boston, Mass., August 11, 1827, a son of George Howe Fox of Mendon, and Emily (Wyatt) Fox of Westboro, both towns in the old county of Worcester. He traces his ancestry on the paternal side to the ancient family of his name in Lincolnshire, England, which includes the old renowned scholar, and author of the famous "Book of Martyrs;" and on the maternal side to the ancient and eminent Scottish family of Forbes. His academical education was pursued in the public schools of Boston; after his graduation therefrom he prepared himself for his life profession at the law school of Harvard university, and in the office of the Hon. John C. Park. In the year 1854 he was admitted to the Suffolk bar, and commenced practice in the courts of the state. In 1848 he married Julia, daughter of Col. James Valentine of Providence, R. I., and grand-daughter of Mr. William Valentine, who was one of the original projectors of the extensive manufacturing industries of Fall River, Mass. She died in 1872, leaving three daughters Henrietta (Fox) McDonald, Julia (Fox) Webber, and Lilian Valentine (Fox) Wakefield. The eldest married Mr. William McDonald of Cambridge, and has five children, viz., Elfrida Valentine, William Valentine, James Fox, Jessie Valentine, and Malcolm Valentine McDonald. The second daughter married Dr. George A. Webber of Manchester, Mass., and the youngest was united in 1889 to Horace Wakefield, M. D., of London, England.

SOCIETY RECORD.

Mr. Fox was made a Mason in St. John's Lodge, (instituted in 1733, and the oldest in America) and received the third degree, July 6, 1857. His first Masonic office was that of Senior Deacon, Junior and Senior Warden, and finally served as Worshipful Master of that Lodge, for the years 1863 to 1864. Subsequently, and for four consecutive terms he was District Deputy Grand Master of the first Masonic District, which then included Boston and the adjacent towns. He was exalted to the Royal Arch degree in St. Paul's Chapter, Boston, April 17, 1860. After filling the several offices of principal sojourner, captain of the host, scribe, and king, he was elected in 1869 (re-elected in 1870) master excellent high priest. In 1868 he received the degree in Cryptic Masonry in Boston Council of Royal and Select Masters; and was created a knight in Boston Commandery of Knights Templars, Jan. 16, 1861. The 32d grade in the Ineffable, Philosophical and Sublime series was conferred upon him June 12, 1863; and his ability and efficiency in the various offices, and incidents of the Scottish Rite promoted his election as Commander-in-chief of Boston Sovereign Consistory for more than one term, or until the consolidation of the three then existing similar bodies, under the Charter of Massachusetts Consistory, in 1870. The 33d, and last degree was received by Brother Fox November 17, 1871, and he accordingly enrolled as an honorary member of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General for the Nothern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States. As a mark of the fraternal esteem in which he was held by his associates in the Mass. Consistory (with its more than fourteen hundred members), it may be mentioned that there was presented to him a most beautiful 33d degree jewel, studied with precious stones, and bearing the following inscription: "PALMAM QUI MERUIT FERAT." Presented to Ill.·. James A. Fox, by Mass. Consistory S.·. P.·. R.·. S.·., Feb. 22d., 1889, in recognition of his active service in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, for more than a quarter of a century."

In some of the prominent beneficial orders of the country, so far reaching in their benign operation, he occupies a deserved and distinguished position, being a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in an advanced rank in the Improved Order of Red Men, and having been at the head of the Order of Knights of Pythias, serving with much acceptance as grand chancellor of Massachusetts. He is one of the two representatives to the Supreme Lodge of the World, and judge advocate general upon the staff of Major General Carnahan of Indiana, the commander of the Uniform Rank, K. of P.

MILITARY CAREER.

Captain Fox has an honorable military record withal. Commencing at an early age in the preparatory "school of the soldier"—the volunteer militia of the State—he rose from the ranks and became the commander of the Boston City Guard. When the war of the Rebellion commenced in 1861 he promptly offered his services to Gov. Andrew and being accepted, he served through the hazardous compaigns of 1861 and 1862 as the captain of Company A, 13th Regiment Mass. Volunteers, and he discharged his duties in such a manner as to receive the commendation of his superior officers, and the hearty respect and love of the men of his command.

Since the war he has been elected president of the 13th Regiment Association for several terms; and he is also a member of the Military Order Loyal Legion of the United States. He early identified himself with the Grand Army of the Republic and has continued an interested member of the organization as a comrade of John A. Andrew Post No. 15 of Boston since 1868, and was elected its commander in 1890. His addresses given on several Memorial Day occasions, and especially one entitled "The Two Civilizations" (which has been published) and another delivered upon the decisive battlefield of Gettysburg at the dedication of the Color-bearer's Statue of the 13th Mass. Regiment, are scholarly and eloquent productions, which have attracted marked attention. He was commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts in 1864-5, as also one of the appointed delegates of that corps at the 350th anniversary of the Honorable Artillery Company of Londoa—the parent of the American corps—as celebrated during the jubilee season of Queen Victoria in 1887, on which occasion he enjoyed the hospitality of that organization, including the unusual honor of a presentation at the court of St. James.

IN CIVIL LIFE.

In civil life and service, Mr. Fox has had a somewhat extended experience, first commencing as a member of the school committee of Boston and served three years. He was in the legislature of Massachusetts in 1867 and 1868, representing the city of Boston.

In 1870 and 1871 he was a member of the Honorable Senate. He was chairman of the committees on probate and chancery, military affairs and the joint special stabulary. While a member of this branch he established a reputation as a graceful and proficient orator (previously given promise of) by a glorious tribute to Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas, then lately deceased, in which drew forth encomiums from his fellow members and others.

After his removal in 1872 to the University city of Cambridge he was called to serve for two years in the aldermanic board, and subsequently as mayor of that city for four consecutive terms, in all a decided tribute to the ability and fidelity with which he discharged the duties of these positions and of the degree of confidence reposed in him by his fellow citizens.

His knowledge of parliamentary law; his dignity and tact as a presiding officer; his power to grap the salient points of a question under discussion, whether arising in public halls of legislation or the more sacred precincts of the lodge room; his correct knowledge of financial matters; all these attest his clear and comprehensive mind and great executive ability.

In all the varied relations of life, as a legislator, as chief magistrate of an important city, as a soldier, orator, officer of worthy beneficial societies, and as a true and tried man, in every responsible position in which he has performed the multifarious duties incumbent upon him with ability and fidelity.

Two years ago Ex-Mayor Fox made a gallant run for the nomination. His supporters were ardent and enthusiastic, and almost won the victory. Considering that that were several candidates in the field, each with something of a following, and taking into especial consideration the great prestige of the successful aspirant, Mr. Fox's standing in the convention was very flattering. In fact, he almost got the nomination. It must be remembered that on the formal and decisive ballot, General Banks had only one vote to spare in securing the nomination. This time, with a solid Cambridge delegation behind him, Mr. Fox will go into the convention with such an assurance of success as will encourage every one who believes in his fitness for the place, and who desires to see this district worthily represented in the National Congress.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure billiousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

Wilmington.

The first entertainment of the season under direction of the Ladies Benevolent Society took place at the vestry of the Congregational Church on Thursday evening of last week.

The various parts were performed by Miss Nellie Clark of Leavenworth, Kansas, violinist; Miss Cora Clark, of the same place, reader and pianist; Miss S. Louise Bruce of Boston, Vocalist; and Mrs. Clark of Leavenworth, and Fannie Montague of Boston, accompanists.

Miss Bruce had sung before audiences in this place on other occasions and therefore very much was expected of her. No one was disappointed, for her voice seemed richer and sweeter, if possible, than at any former time. The listeners were particularly charmed by her rendition of "Herr Torno" by Mattie. Miss Cora Clark read several selections very creditably; and the rendition of piano solos by her showed a combination of natural gifts not often seen in any person. The violin solos by Miss Nellie Clark were received with prolonged applause and encore. She is a natural musician. It is needless to say that the accompanists were in keeping with high order of the other music.

North Woburn.

Within the last two or three weeks there has been a regular mad-dog panic here and with very good reason. In September Mr. Charles T. Dearborn's coach dog gave evidence of having rabies and in due time was dispatched. But before he was killed he was known to have bitten dogs belonging to J. P. Clarke, Supt. Forcar, Carr, Buck, and also the lip of a small child belonging to Mr. Dearborn. There was no mistake as to what ailed the dog and as soon as possible he was shot. In the mean time a beautiful young full blooded Irish pointer belonging to Mr. J. P. Clarke was seized with the malady and as soon as it was discovered he was confined in an outhouse. Here his ravings were terrible. The animal was so highly prized by the family that Al Watts, the celebrated Boston dog dealer, fancier and physician, came out on a summons and repaired to Mr. Clarke's to examine the pup. As soon as he laid eyes on him Watts pronounced it one of the most distinctly marked cases of hydrophobia that he ever saw, notwithstanding which he went into the building and handled the poor dog almost as familiarly as if he had been perfectly well. Mr. Clarke was informed that nothing could cure his favorite so he asked Watt to end his misery as speedily as possible. Watt let fall a drop of Prussia acid on the brute's tongue and the next instant he was a dead dog. The matter has given rise to much alarm in this village and there is no knowing what will come from it.

When the barn door of character is daubed with the black paint of calumny, rub it out with Brussels soap.

Burlington.

Mr. H. Reed has removed for the winter season from his summer residence in Burlington.

John I. Munroe has sold the Nathan Simonds farm of 200 acres in Burlington to a Mr. Raymond of Boston, who intends running it as an extensive stock farm. This is one of the finest farms around Boston, and no doubt will be brought to a high state of perfection under the new management. Mr. Raymond intends building another large barn and make other improvements in the near future.—X.

On Wednesday evening of last week, a farewell reception was given to Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Washburn. The house was well filled with the members of the church and congregation and other people of the town. During the evening, Miss Mary Foster presented Mr. and Mrs. Washburn in behalf of the citizens of the town with a small box containing $103. Although completely surprised, Mr. Washburn responded with a very happy speech of thanks.

Boston Theatres.

Next Monday evening, Oct. 20, Rudolph Aaronson's Comic Opera Company will inaugurate their annual season of light opera at the Globe Theatre, presenting the latest New York Casino success, "Madame Angot." The opera has just been withdrawn from the Casino in the height of its success, owing to compulsory engagements elsewhere, and its record of sixty performances in that theatre is equal to that of any of the previous productions. The entire New York cast, headed by Camille Darville and Marie Halton, will appear in the production at the Globe. This is one of the finest things ever produced by the Globe management and will doubtless fill the house every night. It can be seen each evening next week at 7.45 with the usual Wednesday and Saturday afternoons at 2.

The rush to see the Shenandoah at the Globe is immense. The last performances are this, Friday, evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Commencing next week, Monday, Oct. 20, Dan McCarthy's picturesque Irish Comedy drama, True Irish Hearts, may be seen at the Grand Opera House. Everything is new. New songs and dances. It has been a great success in New York and doubtless will be also at the Grand Opera House.

WINCHESTER.

Some of our hypercritical people have undertaken to belittle the W. V. I. A. and to rob ex-President Twombley of the credit due him for public improvements in our village. It is only an exhibition of pure cussedness which warps the judgement, blunts the sensibilities of these folks, produces mental obliquity, cross-eyes, or squints, and will hurt nobody.

One of the secrets of life consists in knowing what to do and in doing it at the right time; an opportunity once lost may never come again. This is especially true of the care we give our little. If they are suffering from insufficient nutrition, we cannot expect them to be strong as they grow up. Mellin's Food is perfectly adapted to their wants and they gain at once when fed upon it.

SPIRIT OF TRUE SERVICE.

LESSON III, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 19.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxii, 24-37. Commit Verses 25-27—Golden Text, Phil. ii, 5—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

24. "And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest." He had kept His last passover with them, again typically foreshadowing His sufferings and death; He had instituted the supper which would keep constantly before them His humiliation unto death; He had just said that one of them, one of the twelve, should prove false to Him and betray Him; and yet all these things so little affect them that, even at such a time, instead of being in sympathy with Him, and feeling for Him in view of His approaching sufferings, they are selfishly and apparently unfeelingly talking of their own personal advantage and superiority of position in His kingdom. He had the cross ever before Him, and by plain statement as well as by parable and type was ever referring to it. They could see no cross, but only the restoration of Israel's supremacy as in the days of David and Solomon, and position and honor for themselves with Him. Their thoughts were not His, they understood Him not. He was alone among men, His company with whom He found fellowship was unseen by mortals.

25. "And He said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors." The Jews were chosen from among all nations to show unto all the reality of the only living and true God, one who in supernatural ways would guide, protect and care for His people who put their trust in Him; pitying and providing for them as a father, comforting and nourishing them as a mother. They were to glorify Him by an implicit and constant reliance upon Him and by being meekly subject to Him in all things. They were not to be anxious even about food and raiment, for their Heavenly Father knew that they needed such things and would surely provide them (Matt. vi, 32). Let the Gentiles who knew no Heavenly Father have such anxiety, but let Israel not so dishonor their God. And so with position and honor among men, leave all that to those who knew no better.

26. "But ye shall not be so; but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve." This was a lesson that He was ever teaching them (Matt. xviii, 3, 4; xx, 25, 27; xxiii, 11), but one so hard for poor human nature to learn.

27. "For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat or he that serveth? Is not he that sitteth at meat? But I am among you as He that serveth." Or as He said on another occasion: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many" (Matt. xx, 28). The incident of the feet washing recorded in John xiii, 4-17, occurred at this time, for it is written that "He rose from supper, laid aside His garments, took a towel and girded Himself," etc.; then when He had finished He said: "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done unto you."

28. "Ye are they which have continued with Me in my temptations." How kind of Him it was to say so. Outwardly they were with Him; they had left all for Him; they followed Him wherever He went and ministered unto Him; but as we have seen they did not feel for Him in His trials and would not believe that the cross awaited Him.

29. "And I appoint unto you a Kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me." He will wean them from desire for present pre-eminence by assurances respecting their future glory.

30. "That ye may eat and drink at My table in My Kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Compare Matt. xix, 28, where the same promise is a little more full. There He says it will be in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of His glory.

31. "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, Behold Satan hath desired to have you that he may sift you as wheat." Satan seems to have a special hatred of those whom the Master is about to use; he had already used the lips of Peter to say tempting words (Matt. xvi, 22, 23), and now, as in the case of Job, he has made special request for Peter to give him a sifting.

32. "But I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." If the prayers of a righteous man availeth much, how all prevailing must be the prayer of Jesus; and how quiet and thankful we should be that "He ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Jas. v, 16; Heb. vii, 25).

33. "And he said unto Him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison and to death." Have you never, dear reader, been so conscious of the presence of God and the love of God that you, too, have felt just like that, even if you did not say it? But how long did it last?

34. "And He said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest Me." The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it? I the Lord (Jer. xvii, 9, 10). He needed not that any should testify of man, for He knew what was in man (John ii, 25); and He is reading us just as He read Peter.

35. "And He said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye anything? And they said, Nothing!" No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly (Ps. lxxxiv, 11); much less from those whom He sends forth in His name.

36. "Then said He unto them, But now he that hath a purse let him take it, and likewise his scrip; and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one." This sounds strange in view of His former teaching, that if they should seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness all necessary temporal things would be added; and also when we remember that Peter a little later used a sword and Jesus told him to put it up, saying, "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matt. xxvi, 52). He never contradicts Himself; He never changes. The sense seems to be this: I am now going to be absent from you in person, and if you cannot trust me to take care of you and protect you though unseen then rely upon yourselves. Instead of saying, Lord, here are two swords (which proved to be more than enough), they should have said, Lord, we will rely on Thee still and die with Thee rather than use the sword.

37. "For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in Me, and He was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning Me have an end." Very soon now—in less than twelve hours from that time—would He say on the cross, "It is finished." And just as surely as He finished the work of atonement for sin, making redemption possible, so surely shall He finish the work of redemption in His coming Kingdom.

May Thank Her Stars.

The narrow escape of Mrs. B. M. Searles, of Elkhart, Ind., from a premature death is wonderful. She states that "for twenty years my heart troubled me greatly. I became worse. Had smothering spells, short breath, fluttering; could not sleep on my left side, had much Pain in Breast, shoulder and stomach. Ankles swelled. Had much headache and dizziness. Treatment did me no good, until I tried Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. The first bottle helped me, and I was soon virtually cured. For sale at Charles H. Buss's drug store. "ONLY A YEAR."

One year ago—a ringing voice,
A clear blue eye,
And clustering curls of sunny hair,
Too fair to die.

Only a year—no voice, no smile,
No glance of eye,
No clustering curls of golden hair,
Fair, but to die!

One year ago—what loves, what schemes
Far into life!
What joyous hopes, what high resolves,
What generous strife!

The silent picture on the wall,
The burial stone,
Of all that beauty, life and joy
Remain alone!

One year—one year—one little year—
And so much gone!
And yet the even flow of life
Moves calmly on.

The grave grows green, the flowers bloom fair,
No sorrowing tint of leaf or spray
Says he is dead.

No pause or hush of merry birds
That sing above
Tells us how coldly sleeps below
The form we love.

Where hast thou been this year, beloved?
What hast thou seen?
What visions fair, what glorious life,
Where thou hast been?

The veil! the veil! so thin, so strong!
'Twixt us and thee;
The mystic veil, when shall it fall,
That we may see?

Not dead, not sleeping, not even gone;
But present still,
And waiting for the coming hour
Of God's sweet will.

Lord of the living and the dead,
Our Saviour dear!
We lay in silence at thy feet
This sad, sad year.

—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

A Freak of Plant Life.

A story of one of the most interesting freaks of vegetable life is told by Ellwood Cooper, of Santa Barbara. As coming from him the story cannot be anything but strictly in accordance with the facts. Through Mr. Cooper's garden there ran some years ago a sewer made of red wood timber. This sewer was again incased by an outside sewer. Across the sewer there was built a brick wall many feet high, and in such a way that it was pierced by the inner sewer, which it inclosed tightly, while the outside sewer ended abruptly against the wall.

The outside sewer casing had in course of time decayed, and a eucalyptus tree standing some sixty feet away had taken advantage of this and sent one of its roots to the coveted spot in as direct a line as possible. Here the root entered the outside sewer and followed its course as far as it could. At last it came to the wall which shut off its course, and it could go no further, the inside sewer being perfectly tight.

But on the other side of the wall the sewer and its double casing continued, and this eucalyptus tree evidently knew how to get there. Some three feet high in the brick wall there was a little hole an inch or two in diameter, and this the eucalyptus tree was aware of, as its big root began to climb the dry wall and face the sun and wind until it found the hole, through which it descended on the other side and entered the sewer again and followed it along as formerly.

How did the tree know of the hole in the wall? How did it know that the sewer was on the other side? Did it smell, and if it did how could it direct the root to go and find the place with such precision? The roots of any plant grow always and unerringly in the direction of its food, just as the eucalyptus tree did.—San Diego (Cal.) Sun.

He Was Too Previous.

He is a young and popular business man on Second street. He passed last Sunday evening with a number of young lady friends, and "I felt sure," said he, "that there was one of them who wanted very badly to be kissed, and I made up my mind to accommodate her if I got a chance. It came when I got up to go. The lady went with me to the door. In the semi-darkness of the hall I put my arm about her gently, turned up her flower face to mine, and holding her fast pressed my face to her cheeks, kissing her on the forehead, the eyes—such eyes they are—and the rose red lips. There was a stifled scream, and I saw that she was genuinely indignant.

"'I—I beg your pardon,' I stammered.

"'Mr. Jones,' snapped she, 'if you ever come here again without having been shaved for a week I'll never speak to you. My face is just raw.'"—Seattle Journal.

A Sheep With but Two Feet.

A farmer of Switzerland county, Ind., has on his farm there a lamb which walks on two feet and in an upright position. The forelegs are perfect, but the hind ones are only stubs, and of little use in walking. So his lambship, when he desires to go uphill, just stands up on his forefeet and moves off. He presents a ludicrous appearance while on a jaunt about the farm for his morning constitutional, and is withal a remarkable freak of nature.—Ram's Horn.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. H. L. Flanders & Co., Druggists.

WHY HE WAS LEAVING THE TOWN.

An Undertaker Explains How Ungrateful Some People Can Be.

"I remember," said the colonel, when the party reached the end of a good dinner and the waiters stood behind the chairs with lighted matches, "I remember an incident which stamped upon my mind the fact that when a man has an eye for business he has an eye for nothing else."

"I shall not tell you how long ago it was, for I am getting too old to speak lightly of decades. But when I first set foot—and it was a tender foot, let me say—in Hugo, Colo., I at once conceived a great respect for a man named Higgins. I could not help feeling a reverence for Higgins. Higgins was an undertaker. He was the only undertaker within a hundred miles, and he was getting rich. Never a day passed but my friend Higgins had a funeral on hand. He was the most cheerful undertaker, perhaps, that ever flourished.

"I remember well the day that I bade Higgins good-by. He was as light spirited as a grasshopper, and a thousand times expressed his regret that I was going into the interior, until I felt clammy lest he might be grieved at the thought that some one else might have the profitable job of burying me.

"When I next saw Higgins it was after a two years' experience of chasing wild steers. I was glad to see him, he was such a jolly old undertaker.

"'Hello, Higgins,' I said cheerfully when I walked into his establishment. 'How are you, old man?'

"Higgins shook his head mournfully, and then I stopped short in amazement, for I saw that he was nailing down boxes and packing up his stock.

"'You aren't going to move, are you?' I cried in surprise, but he only jammed a roll of crape into a dry goods box and went on with his work.

"'See here, Higgins,' I cried, 'what's the trouble? Tell me about it.'

"The old man turned on me wrathfully.

"'Ain't I been one o' Hugo's best citizens?' he asked sternly.

"'You have, Higgins.'

"'Ain't I paid my taxes?'

"'You have, my friend.'

"'Didn't I organize a board of education?'

"'You did.'

"'Wasn't I its president?'

"'You certainly were and a good one, although we haven't any school yet.'

"'Didn't I head the citizens' movement for law and order?'

"'You did, Higgins.'

"'Well, that's all. Now, how do you think this pesky town has treated its foremost citizen?'

"'Tell me, Higgins. You have my sympathy.'

"'Well, I was makin' a decent livin'. I let out contracts for the only brick building in the town.'

"'Yes.'

"'I was goin' to call it the Higgins block. I was goin' to let the volunteer fire department have rooms in my block for nothin'. I proposed to have a temperance union in the town. I hoped to have a free library. You know I'm a progressive citizen, don't you?'

"'You are, Higgins.'

"'Well, what do you think this town has done to me?'

"'Surely nothing bad, Higgins.'

"'Nothing bad!' he screamed. 'Do you know what they've done? They've lynched Bill Smith, and if ever there was a cowardly blow aimed at a foremost citizen it was that.'

"'But you can bury him, Higgins.'

"'Bury him!' he screamed. 'Bury him! Bury Bill Smith! Why, man, Bill Smith was makin' a fortune for me. He killed his man as regular as the sun went down, and I buried every one of 'em. He was worth $25 a day to me, he was. So I'm goin' to leave 'em. This town don't offer no inducements to an honest man like me. Think what I've done for 'em. I was goin' to erect a monument to our departed brothers. And now there won't be a death in this town once a month. Poor Bill!' and Higgins seized a winding sheet and tried to stifle his sobs."—New York Tribune.

Dr. Vincent.

Acting Chancellor George E. Vincent, of the "New Chautauqua," is described as a strongly built man, with a bright eye and genial manner. He has wonderful executive ability and manages affairs at Chautauqua with remarkable tact. As a public speaker he has few superiors. He has frequently addressed audiences of from 4,000 to 6,000 persons. Few men are more ready with expedients than Mr. Vincent. It is very seldom, indeed, that he is disconcerted. If a break or hitch in the programme takes place he sees his way out of the difficulty at once. Mr. Vincent is a graduate of Yale college. He is a great traveler, and has visited almost all of the principal enlightened countries on the face of the globe. His residence is at Buffalo.—New York Telegram.

A Rat Hunter.

A pet snake on a farm near Parkersburg, W. Va., is said to be an indefatigable exterminator of rats and mice. "Jim," as the reptile is called, is perfectly tame and docile, and answers to his name as promptly as the family dog or cat. He is fond of being petted by the family, and seems to highly appreciate acts of kindness. He is over eight feet long, and has been an adjunct of the farm for twelve years.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hold It To The Light.

In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.

Some boys who were annoying a Chinaman at Sedalia, Mo., were astonished when he suddenly mounted one of their bicycles and rode away, his queue projecting like a rudder as he went off like the wind.

The sweeping Republican victory in Covington, Ky., is a political straw of no little significance. What makes the matter more aggravating to the Bourbons of the South is the fact that the triumph was achieved under a form of the Australian system.

HANDLING FARM TRUCK.

Constant Changes in the Methods of Successful Farmers.

"In the handling of farm truck," said a dealer, "changes go on with the demands of the times, as in all other branches of business. The packing houses of Maryland employ an army of workers in the busy season—just how many I do not know, but considerably over 10,000. Then the truckers themselves, the pickers or gatherers, the extra hands to convey the truck to the wharves, the extra men employed on steamboats and railroads, the sorters, trimmers and packers, the commission merchants, the sellers, the buyers or 'order men,' the wagoners and their helpers, and the tally keepers will make fully 10,000 or 12,000 more persons who are given employment by the truck business in its season.

"Within a year or so a great change has been made in the manner of shipping fruits and vegetables, particularly that class which does not bear a great deal of handling. Time was when the old flour barrel, with holes cut in its sides by means of a hatchet, and the oblong tomato box, with its two compartments, reigned supreme. Both of these have now abdicated in favor of the splint basket, and though the old style of packages is still frequently seen, its reign is over.

The box, holding about seven-eighths of a bushel, was largely used in shipping peaches, tomatoes, peas, pears and fruits and vegetables of that class. The growers, however, found that the half bushel splint basket presented a much more attractive appearance, besides which the fruit could be examined with such readiness that the basket of fruit brought just as much as the box, though it contained nearly a peck less.

"Like wise men the growers adopted the half bushel basket for shipping their fruit and tomatoes. Half barrel and barrel baskets of the same order have largely replaced barrels and crates for the shipping of peas, beans, kale, spinach, apples, etc. They are cheaper than new barrels, though they cannot well compete with old ones. The splint baskets are also made for shipping bananas, being made in size to hold one, two and three bunches of the fruit. Their great point of superiority is lightness and strength rather than cheapness. A basket that will hold a barrel of apples will weigh just about half as much as an old flour barrel, and in shipping produce long distances they save a good deal in freight charges.

"A strawboard half bushel basket is also used, but this produce, men say, is not very satisfactory, particularly if the weather happens to be damp. The splint baskets are made in Baltimore. A poplar or gum log which has been thoroughly steamed, and which is as long as the basket is high, is put into a machine which clamps it tightly, lathe fashion, at each end. This revolves, and a long knife is pressed against the log, cutting off a shaving or veneer about one-sixteenth of an inch thick. As the shaving comes off it passes into a clipping apparatus, which cuts the shaving into strips. This and the sawing out the round bottoms of the baskets are the principal parts of the work done by machinery. Putting them together is largely done by hand."—Baltimore Sun.

High Priced Cigars in Detroit.

"It's the fourth in the eastern trade."

"No."

"Yes."

"They are referring to Detroit with reference to the cigar trade," remarked a bystander in explanation. "Our friend, the cigar dealer, says that Detroit is next to New York, Boston, Buffalo and Chicago in the matter of sales for high grade cigars."

"That's right," replied the cigar dealer. "I claim that it's my experience that Detroit is one of the best of our markets for high grade goods. We sell more cigars here and better grades than in many eastern and southern cities twice the size of Detroit. The people here have a better educated taste. We sell more two-for-a-dollar, three-for-a-dollar and two-for-a-quarter cigars than we do nickel goods. Yes, sir, I maintain that the general standard of taste in Detroit in the matter of cigars is very high."—Detroit Free Press.

This Is on Astronomy.

Professor Asaph Hall, who has used the big telescope at the United States observatory in Washington for measurements of Saturn during the last fourteen years, finds the time of rotation of the planet to be about 10 hours 14 minutes 24 seconds. This is nearly fifteen minutes less than the period stated in most of the astronomical text books published in the latter half of the present century, but is remarkable as being only one hundred seconds less than the period assigned to it by Sir William Herschel. That astronomer of a century ago obtained his results in this particular by the aid of an instrument far inferior to many of the so called smaller telescopes of today, and the fact is testimony to the wonderful ability of the man whose name was for years given to the planet he discovered, now generally called Uranus.—Chicago Tribune.

Hair Powder.

On Feb. 23, 1795, Mr. Pitt proposed a tax on persons wearing hair powder, which he estimated would bring to the revenue £210,000 annually, but was the death blow to the custom, for its use was immediately discontinued. Those persons who continued to wear it were termed guinea pigs, because one guinea was the amount per head of the tax.—Notes and Queries.

Whose Footprints, Adam's or Buddha's?

The many curious legends concerning Adam which have already been published would lack in completeness were we to omit giving an account of the Mohammedan superstitions regarding an impression, supposed to be a footprint, found in the solid rock on Adam's Peak, or Mount Samanala, a high mountain in Ceylon. According to the Mohammedan legend, Adam, after the fall and expulsion from the garden, was taken by an angel to the top of this mountain, where his mind's eye saw a panorama of all the ills that should afflict mankind. These harrowing sights were such a weight on the man, who, notwithstanding his sin in the garden, was yet a good man, that his foot left its imprint on the solid rock, his tears forming a lake, both the print and the lake being still visible.

The Buddhists have their own legend of the Sripada or Sacred Footprint, according to which Buddha, ascending to heaven, left the impression where last he touched the earth on the rocky sides of Samanala. The Brahmins also and the Chinese have their legends, and for more than 2,000 years all have worshiped in their own way around the gigantic imprint.

The footprint itself is 5 1-4 feet by 2 1-2 feet; the site in a rocky basin, much faith and a lively imagination being necessary to aid one in discovering a very great likeness of the outlines to that of a human foot. To perform a pilgrimage to this shrine, and to lay an offering upon it, is to the Buddhist what a visit to Mecca is to a Mohammedan. Tradition tells us that the iron chains fastened in the rocks to give safety to the pilgrims in crossing rocky canyons near the Sacred Footprint were put there by Alexander the Great.—St. Louis Republic.

A Harlem Boy's Sport.

A mischievous Harlem boy came very near wrecking the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street cable railroad the other day. He started from the Third avenue corner, and slyly walked to the opening or slot where the grips slip through and catch on to the swift moving cable on the uptown track, and taking a big tomato can from beneath the skirts of his well worn coat he slipped a long wire through a hole in the end of the can. Then he dropped the other end of the wire down into the slot. The wire was bent like a hook and caught the cable instantly. Away went the can, bobbing up and down and dancing like a jumping jack. The big, bright red label on the can made the thing look like a new danger signal. A policeman saw the boy just after he sent the can off on its trip to Riverside park and gave chase, but the boy scampered off up the avenue and eluded his would be captor.

A cable car flew after the tomato can, and the gripman wondered what "the durned thing was." On went the can, oscillating from side to side. At the Eighth avenue crossing a police man fell in trying to hit the thing with his club. The men who shift the cable at Amsterdam (Tenth) avenue, where the Washington Heights cars turn to go up the steep hills, made frantic dashes with long sticks to knock the dancing can off the track, but they hit the air. The Fort Lee ferry car sped along after the can, which by this time straightened itself up and bowled smoothly to the end of the line on Manhattan avenue, beating the car a block. Pedestrians on the route enjoyed the fun, but the mischievous Harlem boy lost it all through the interference of a "copper."—New York Telegram.

Back Window Conversation.

Margery is the name of a pert, dressy and rather good looking young girl who from her kitchen window keeps the occupants of a certain block of apartment houses up town fully posted on the petty gossip of the neighborhood. Margery's father is a well to do butcher, and Margery's most intimate friend is the grocer's daughter, who enjoys frequent talks with Margery from a back window opposite the back window of the butcher's domicile. Margery's voice has been silent in the neighborhood for the past fortnight, and the grocer's daughter has had nobody to talk to out of the window except a smart parrot next door. "Where's Margery?" asked the parrot one morning last week. "Gone to Newport," replied the grocer's daughter, proud to impart the information to the neighborhood.

"Yes, Margery has gone to Newport," explained the butcher's energetic wife, addressing herself to all of the back windows opposite her kitchen. "She has got some fine friends there, and I told her that she might play the lady for a while, but she'll be back in time to get out next Monday's washing or I'll know the reason why."

"Ha! ha!" laughed the parrot. "Gone to Newport!"—New York Times.

What the Humble Penny Does.

The humble penny is a potent factor in our modern civilization. We all know the wonders it has achieved in the departments of the post and the newspaper press, and it is now doing as marvelous a work in our means of locomotion. In the last financial year the North Metropolitan Tramways company alone carried as many as 70,000,000 passengers at penny fares, so that the aggregate number who traveled in London by omnibus or car for that coin must be something prodigious. Cheapness has fostered traffic in such an extraordinary way that although conveyances are constantly multiplied they are all better filled than in the days of high fares.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The River Orinoco has recently risen and flooded an enormous extent of country. In the town of Ciudad Bolivar 350 houses have been washed down, and upward of 2000 persons have been rendered homeless and destitute. The loss is estimated at $3,000,000, but the amount will be much larger, as the river subsequently rose higher and many plantations were then damaged and a large number of cattle drowned.

Recent flower shows have indicated a return of the old-fashioned double dahlia to popularity. With all its prim stiffness this flower is gay and varied in color, and admirably adapted to decorative purposes.

It is said that there are scores of Indians on the Puyallup Reservation in Oregon who are worth from $50,000 to $75,000 each. One widow is worth $250,000. She owns the best ranch in the reservation.

A Collector of Handkerchiefs.

To the eccentricities of the confirmed collector there is no end. Collectors collect everything, and the possible limit to the list will only be reached when every collectable article under the sun shall have its band of enthusiastic gatherers. Collectors of postage stamps, book plates, play bills, broadsheets, coins and medals have attained a recognized standing; those of thimbles and walking sticks will soon do so, and there is an indication that they will be followed by victims of the pocket handkerchief mania. The late Mr. Fagin and his compeers were scarcely of sufficiently respectable standing to give vogue to the cult of the pocket handkerchief collector, but now that the pursuit has been shown to be the life passion of a man who was once a wealthy tradesman, the proper impetus will be given.

Caspar Eiles is the gentleman's name, and an absorbing passion for pocket handkerchiefs would seem to be his whole nature. Starting as a wealthy man to set up his museum, he paid whatever price was asked by the ladies of his acquaintance for whatever pocket handkerchiefs they might be carrying. He was delighted, we are told, "at their sight and flavor"—an odd expression which might bear some further explanation. Sometimes he had to pay enormous prices, but this never deterred him. We are not told whether the thing was ever actually done, but it would be almost an insult to female acuteness to suppose that so good an opportunity to acquire a respectable dot by the purchase and sale of a dozen or more pocket handkerchiefs was never observed and taken advantage of.

By this channel all Caspar Eiles' money vanished, and as he could buy no more handkerchiefs for his museum, the obvious course was to steal them, which he did. He has now been caught for the second time, his confidence in his own dexterity leading him to attempt two pockets at once, after a fairly successful career as an amateur artful dodger extended over several years. "Collectors" of purses, watches and chains and diamond pins may henceforward be expected to appear in great force at our police courts.—London Globe.

The Original Form of the Horse.

The wild horse of Dzungaria is an animal the size of the hemione and more robust in its proportions, in which it resembles the pony. Its head is large, with ears smaller than those of the hemione; the shoulders thick, especially in the male; the limbs robust and stubbier than those of the hemiones and the asses. The mane is short and straight, and the moderately long tail is terminated by a tuft of long hairs in much more abundant supply than in the tail of the hemiones. It has warts on the hind legs as well as on the fore legs—a peculiarity of the horse, distinguishing it from the other species of the genus, which have warts only on the fore legs. The hoofs are full like those of the horse, and not compressed as in the other species, and the lower parts of the legs are furnished with long hairs falling to the crown of the hoof, a feature which the hemiones lack.

Likewise characteristic is the color of the pelage, a pale gray, almost white, passing into dun on the head and neck, and blending insensibly on the flanks with the pure white of the belly and limbs. The mane, the brush of the tail and the long hairs of the lower legs and hoofs are black. There is no trace of the dark dorsal stripe running from the mane to the tail which is characteristic of the hemione. The hairy covering is long and undulating, especially in the rigorous winter of that northern region.—Dr. E. L. Trouessart in Popular Science Monthly.

Why Diamonds Sparkle.

Many persons have been puzzled to account for the ceaseless motion of diamonds in the earrings worn by ladies. It makes no difference that the head of the wearer is in perfect repose and that she is speechless, the twinkling goes on, greatly enhancing the flashing beauty of the gem.

The secret of this motion is in the setting of the diamond, and the method is patented. The patentee is reaping a royalty of $50 from every manufacturing jeweler to whom he sells the privilege of using it. The stone is set in the usual manner, except that a band like the handle of a diminutive basket is attached to the framework.

On the other side of the band is a cuplike cavity. On the lower part of the hoop is a pin, pointed with rhodium, a metal which never wears out, something like the iridium with which gold pens are tipped.

When the diamonds are put into position on the hoop the rhodium point projects into the cup. The result is what scientists call a condition of unstable equilibrium. Like the pea blown with a pipe by a schoolboy the diamond is given no rest, with the difference that no effort is required to keep it dancing.—Jeweler's Weekly.

This Will Prevent Many Accidents.

The New York Central railroad has adopted a newly invented fusee signal which will lessen the danger of collisions between trains going in the same direction. In case a train is losing time from any cause one of the signals is lighted and thrown on to the track, where it will give warning to the train following. These signals are so constructed that they will blaze in the most violent storm, and will burn eight, ten or twelve minutes, like the colored lights used in theatres.—New York Journal.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

Last year in Germany there were 13,000 cases of conviction for evasions of the customs laws. Yet our Administrative Customs bill, with its wise precautions against fraud and undervaluations, is hotly denounced by the Democratic press as an insult to the honest and incorruptible merchants of Europe.

Landlady—"Mr. McGinnis, may I ask what you are trying to find in that cream pitcher?" Boarder—"I am trying, Mrs. Irous, to rescue an unfortunate fly from a watery grave."

Woman's Column.

Woman's War Service.

Although it is impossible to discover just how many women gave their services in the fields and hospitals during the Civil War, Captain Ainsworth, who is at the head of the pension division of the War Department, has recently prepared a table giving an idea of the vast number who did what they could for their country by nursing and caring for those who took active part in the struggle.

The records are incomplete, but as far as can be ascertained there were probably 10,000 women, with and without regular authority and pay, who performed the duties, wherever they happened to be. Of these, 778 were hired by contract by the War Department; 371 went by the appointment of Miss Dix; 248 were Sisters of Charity; 31 were provided by the Sanitary Commission, and 96 by the order of the surgeon-general. In addition to those who went as nurses, there were matrons, cooks, laundresses, etc., making, it is thought, no fewer than 40,000 women in all, three-fourths of whom were white and from the North.

There are now on the pension rolls the names of 200 women who acted as nurses, and these were placed there by a special act of Congress; but as yet nothing has been done for most of these noble women, many of whom are old, feeble, and nearly forgotten.

Representative Belknap, of Michigan, an ex-soldier, reported a bill to the U. S. House of Representatives, placing on the pension list at twelve dollars a month "all women employed by the surgical department of the United States service as army nurses, or otherwise officially recognized as such during the late War of the Rebellion, and who rendered service in hospitals, in the camp, or on the battlefield for a period of six months or more and who were honorably relieved therefrom, and who, from the results of such service or the infirmities of advancing age, are unable to earn their own support." But there is no prospect that the bill will pass at this session. It would be different if the Woman's Relief Corps had votes.

The impertinent question is again up whether married women shall be allowed to teach in the public schools. This time it is in Cincinnati. A movement has been a long time on foot there to prohibit married women from occupying positions as teachers.

The campaign is evidentally proceeding. Gen. Collins is out with his annual prediction that the Democracy will sweep Massachusetts this year. There has not been a campaign for 20 years that has not witnessed the gallant General's enthusiastic prophecy of victory. We nominate him for Rainbow-Chaser-in-Chief of the Democracy of New England—the same place which Col. Brice holds with the Democracy of the West.

There has been a marked decline in the salaries paid to female telegraphers, stenographers and typewriters in New York.

SULPHUR BITTERS
THE BEST AND GREATEST MEDICINE
It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier.
SULPHUR BITTERS.
Why suffer with Rheumatism? Why suffer with Headache? Why be troubled with that terrible Backache? Why have Fever and Ague? What makes you feel so tired, dull, and drowsy? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a good soothing tonic. Your excesses have caused a drain upon your system, which nature is trying to repair. The dampness of spring has developed the germs of disease in your blood. Sulphur Bitters is not a drop dram or poor whiskey drink, to be taken by the class like other preparations which stimulate only to DESTROY. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Herbes, combined with the Active Principles of Sulphur, in such proportions as to make it Nature's GREAT REMEDY. TRY IT, AND BE CURED.
SULPHUR Bitters
The Dose is small—only a Teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist.
DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

DON'T!!
Don't take medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh.
Don't neglect a cold in the head.
Don't breathe poison into the air with your bad breath.
Don't suffer with Catarrhal headache.
Don't hawk and spit and disgust your friends.
Don't let any or all of these things run your Catarrh into Consumption.
Attend to it at once. Use Dr. Karl Wesselhoeft's German Catarrh Cure and you will certainly be cured.
Sold by Druggists, $1.00 per bottle.

The Woburn Journal

TRIBUTE TO REV. CHARLES H. WASHBURN.

The last day of his stay arrived,
And I had lost all hope
Of seeing him at the Old Folks Home
And was disposed to mope.

Not so, for at the eleventh hour
'Twas said that he was here,
I hustled out of bed to see
Once more, the Pastor dear.

And gathered all the inmates were
To greet him with a jest
And then, that prayer—Oh! such a prayer,
With inspiration blest.

Oh! treacherous memory of mine,
That I could not retain
The golden words, dropped from his lips,
I ne'er shall hear again.

For, oh! he is going far away
To labor in another field;
Oh, may his work, divinely blest
An abundant harvest yield.

In temporal things too, may he thrive,
And have a good supply
To feed the hungry at his door,
Not feel he must deny.

With peace and plenty thus in store:
Sweet children, lovely wife,
May he enjoy a heaven on earth
While, journeying through this life.

E. A. S.

Oct. 19, 1890.

Y. P. S. C. E.

BY JENNIE E. SKINNER.

[The following paper was read by its author before the Middlesex Central Christian Endeavor Union at the Baptist church in Woburn on Monday evening, Oct. 13, 1890.—EDITOR OF JOURNAL.

The Christian Endeavor movement first saw the light in a beautiful city by the sea, whose grand old oaks, graceful elms, slender poplars and sloping hillsides make it a unique scenic picture, and whose marginal and terminal railroads give it an important and prosperous position among our Atlantic seaboard cities; inviting through its safe and deep harbor—the best from Halifax to New York—the commerce of every clime, the storm tossed ship of every build, here finds a welcome and refuge.

Dear old Maine, with its revered poet who called this city of Portland native, with its leading statesmen, Blaine and Reed: we accept his ruling, and count our quorums of Christian Endeavors, as they count them in the National House. There can be no neutral souls present at meetings of Christian Endeavor whether these gatherings are religious or secular. But Portland, lift thy head, for in thy cultured domain was born of prayer, wrestling with discouragements, this grandest of modern systematic Christian effort, the movement for Christ and his Church. Born of God, a child of the Covenant, art Thou, dear, growing, prayerful Christian Endeavor.

With Portland's native poet we will say, and surely this must be an incentive to greater activity in Committee work:

"We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

"Footprints," activities in the Master's work, organized for advancement all along the line, these must be recognized else there has been a mistake in nominations.

Do members of committees wait for introductions; this should no be. No introductions? are needed in the Home whither we all are hastening. Christ is our all-in-all; our Sun and Centre; we are all one in him; and are we not known by our blessed bond of worship? Sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty. O my dear workers upon committees, let these narrow formalities go, and know each other, for Christ's sake and join hands and go to work.

The greatest evangelist of our time has said that the best Working Committee he has ever known was made up of three persons: one, when organization and work came to hand, was out of town, necessarily; another, ill and in bed; the work, Mr. Moody quaintly adds, was well and promptly performed by the one member. This is individuality in committee work. Dear members of committees, do not be too modest—if it is modesty; if the chairman elect is dillitory do not be a member; suggest, go to work, wake up the chairman kindly. Christ's work must not languish; you are just as responsible to the Society as is the chairman, so called; you are Christ's workman.

Just here friends, remember the new motto of Christian Endeavor: "One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren." Our beloved Society is inter-denominational in its character. Who of us did not feel as though the grandest of all God's grand promises was being fulfilled when at St. Louis, Saturday evening, June 14th, the marriage ceremony of the Flags took place? The Union Jack; the Stars and Stripes; and thus are these nations wedded in Christ and for His work. What God hath joined together let not us by unfaithfulness in special work put asunder. What limitless opportunity comes to us through this movement! A Society in the Wisconsin State Prison numbering 100 members, 53 of them active, has been formed, and if the action of an official faction of that State has long ago caused us pain we can take courage and see through the Christian Endeavor faithfulness of Chaplain W. D. Gibson, and such as he, a light that will brighten even the darkness of that Court decision.

It has been said that in these modern days every church is a cemetery of buried talents. In no department of life are so many precious gifts allowed to go to waste as in religion. There are men gifted with natural eloquence who sit dumb in assembles of Christians week after week. There are strongly atttactive men, men of influence and power, who draw young men to them in politics, business and letters, like strong magnets, and yet in the church they are cold and unresponsive and inactive; unwilling, it would seem, to devote a tithe of their God-given power to the interest of Him whose vows they bear. And, saddest of all, there are women possessed of all the sweetness of womanhood, the graces of loveliness, charms of culture and good breeding, who are professed by Christ and yet spend all their talent in the world. Young girls look up to the briliant, successful men of the community, and in either case, as the example is, so the influence will be.

This problem of the buried or misdevoted talent confronts the devoted Christian in every church. The Christian Endeavor movement has been the means, in more cases than we can here mention, of constraining professing Christians to use their gifts in the service of Christ; still many stand back from the work as a rule. The active forces in our churches are the humbler and less ably equipped, and often the younger members perform most of the Master's service. Many, so far as Christ's service is concerned, bury their talents and fold them away in elegant and aristocratic napkins; they have a great place in the world but a small place in the kingdom. The church sadly needs its scholars, its eminent thinkers, its men of affairs and of wealth and its men of influence and social position.

Here is work for special committees of Christian Endeavor,—"go for" the indifferent in the church. This is your work; it is not easy, not pleasant, but the Master's voice stills your heart-throbs as you go on your mission and says, "Lo I am with you. The work is mine; we are co-workers." No worldly institution could prosper if it harbored such a mass of idle capital as do our churches. The great hope of the people of God today is in the faithfulness of the members of Chrstian Endeavor Societies and Sunday School workers. We know no denominational walls. The Epworth Leagues of the Methodist churches (God bless them) should be renamed: they are Christian Endeavor Societies and we need no break in the ranks. He who from the Epworth parsonage went forth with such mighty power was too grand a soul to belong to one denomination. No walls can keep his influence within them, and let us have the Epworth Christian Endeavor Societies of the Methodist church own allegience to the nonsectarian universal Christian effort, born at Portland, in faith and prayer, keep the honored word Epworth, but let it be a branch of our grand, dear tree of Christian Endeavor in name as it is in effort.

But, dear Christian friends, there is no incentive, no method, for greater activity in committee work conceived or put into practice that is successful, but what is the outcome of prayer and faith. The patient Benedictine Brothers who preached and prayed on the hill-slopes of ancient Breton could not then see the many churches scattered o'er that pleasant land but they preached and prayed and trusted, and today one of the leading Christian nations of the world carries on the work, begun in weakness, but strong in prayer and faith across the English Channel: the message went from Finistere. We can all recall the beautiful story of their faith and toil which the dear Master, our Master, so wonderfully blessed. We do not need method as much as we need an increase of faith and prayer: take it all to Jesus. It may be to repeat the little story in verse, so old, yet so new, will help up to greater earnestness in prayer in the work of Committees. And may we, as did the Benedictine Brothers so long ago, do faithfully every part of the work allotted to us and having done all to watch. Watch therefore and help answer our own prayers, as did they of the olden times.

In a quiet sheltering valley
Underneath a furzy hill,
Where their light from rocky ledges
Silver threads of water spill,

Patient Benedictine Brothers
Thatch their cot with russet fern,
Singing "Ave, Maris Stella!"
To the flowing of the burn.

They have come from southern regions
To the wastes of Finistere,
Without scrip, or purse, or weapon,
Trusting in the might of prayer.

In a pleasant sunward hollow
Of the barren purple fell,
They have built a rustic chapel,
Hung a little tinkling bell.

There alone in Christ believing,
Wait the Brothers God's good time,
When shall spread the gospel tiding,
Like a flood, from clime to clime.

Now the Brothers cut the heather,
Stack the turf for winter fire,
Wall about with lichened moor-stone
The enclosure of their Byre.

Next they drain a needy marish,
Praying in the midst of toil,
And with plough of rude construction
Draw slight furrows through the soil.

Then seek wheat—It was forgotten;
All their labor seems in vain;
The barbarian Kelts about them
Little know of golden grain.

Said the Prior, "God will help us
In this hour of bitter loss."
Then, one spied a Robin Redbreast
Sitting on a wayside cross.

Doubtless came the bird in answer
To the words the Prior did speak,
For a heavy wheat ear dangled
From the Robin's polished beak.

Then the Brothers, as he dropped it,
Picked it up and careful sowed,
And abundantly in autumn
Reaped the harvest where they strewed.

Do you mark the waving glory
O'er the Breton hill slopes flung?
All that wealth from Robin Redbreast's
Little ear of wheat has sprung.

Do you mark the many churches
Scattered o'er that pleasant land?
All results are of the preaching
Of that Benedictine band.

Therefore, Christian, small beginnings
Pass not by with lip of scorn,
God may prosper them, as prospered
Robin Redbreast's ear of corn,

Oh friends! there is no better incentive for increased activity in committee work than Consecrated effort. "Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord to Thee."

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Harmony in Decoration.

The most important point in house furnishing and decorating is harmony. I wish I could instil this into everyone's mind—that it is not so much what you have in your rooms, as that everything should harmonize. Harmony, then, is what you should strive for above every thing; this should be followed by simplicity and suitability. Modern decorations have undoubtedly been terribly overcharged with frivolous so-called "ornament." Not only have different styles and periods been indiscriminately mixed, and colors utterly neglected, but the rooms have been too often filled with common-place articles, incongruous in design and bad in taste, with wall-papers and carpets that jar and clash against each other and with inartistic draperies which hang in festoons around glasses and pictures, and are neither useful nor beautiful, and which are intended to decorate the rooms, but only succeed in disfiguring them. So, when the housewife fails in her attempts to make her rooms pretty, it is probably either because she has not the natural taste, or else lacks the knowledge to apply it.

Thousands Poisoned.

In a recent work on Heart Disease, Dr. Franklin Miles—the noted specialist—gives many new and startling facts. Thousands of people are slowly poisoning themselves, weakening their hearts by the use of tea, coffee, tobacco and alcohol. These are Heart Whips, causing it to beat rapidly, thus gradually wearing it out, producing shortness of breath when exercising, pains in side and shoulder, hungry and faint spells. Finally heart failure and sudden death. For weakened and irritated hearts the press everywhere highly recommend the New Heart Cure discovered by Dr. Franklin Miles, which is for sale by Charles H. Buss.

Valuable Suggestions.

Melted butter is a good substitute for olive oil in salid dressing. Many prefer the butter to oil.

Grease spots may be taken out with weak ammonia in water; lay white paper over and iron with a hot iron.

A sour sponge may be thoroughly cleansed by rubbing a fresh lemon into it, then rinse several times in lukewarm water.

In using yolks of eggs, it must be remembered that a broken egg must be closely covered in the dish in which it is kept until desired for use.

An antique Indian slipper, rich with needlework in golden colors, with its curious eurled-up toe, is a dainty wall pocket to hang at the side of the dressing-table to receive combings.

There is no prettier material for a piano-cover than a piece of antique brocade. In the case of the upright piano, now so universally used, a piano scarf or a wall hanging of embroidery is an ornamental addition.

It is Foolish

To send for the doctor every time you don't feel just right. My doctor's bill for years was over a hundred dollars a year, which made a pretty big hole in my wages. For the past two years, I only spent ten dollars, with which I bought a dozen bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and health has been in my family since using them.—Robert Johnson, Machinist.

GRAND REPUBLICAN RALLY. "COME ONE: COME ALL."

By reference to our business columns it will be seen that the Republicans of Woburn and vicinity will hold a grand campaign rally at Lyceum Hall on to-morrow (Saturday) evening which will be addressed by several distinguished speakers including Senator Hoar and our Congressional candidate Capt. James A. Fox of Cambridge. Other political orators of note will speak.

Hon. Edward D. Hayden, late Congressman for this District, will be President of the evening, and the Woburn Brass Band will furnish a fine musical entertainment.

The ladies, in an especial manner, are invited to lend interest to the occasion by their presence, and for their exclusive use the galleries of the Hall will be reserved.

Republicans of Woburn, this is going to be a great rally. The principal speakers are eminent men. To listen to Senator Hoar on the tariff question will be no small privilege. Everybody will want to see and hear what kind of a man Capt. Fox, our next Congressman, is. Therefore

"Come One: Come All."

A FAMILY QUARREL.

An intestine war is raging in the Democratic party in this city more fiercely than ever before. Absolute disruption of the organization is threatened.

The outbreak was caused by the rejection of Dr. Bartlett as a candidate for the Legislature. He was supported by the "White" Democrats and "Old Liners" and commanded a very respectable following numerically and otherwise. The chances for his nomination at the Representative convention looked for a while bright and cheerful.

The "Young Democracy," captained by City Clerk Moreland, put up for a candidate one Edward Parker, a sort of free-trade Mugwump, and supported him. Thomas D. Hevey too had friends in the convention. The fight was a pretty one, Bartlett and his people standing well up toward the front through it all.

Convinced that there was no chance for Parker, the Captain of the "Young America" columns ordered him to be dropped as a candidate and the delegates to go over to Hevey en masse. They did as commanded and left poor Parker out in the cold (Some of Parker's friends and not a few of Bartlett's claim that it was planned that way on the start, and that Hevey was really to be the candidate).

"Young America" laid out the "Old Liners" colder than a wedge, and the latter at once threw down the glove. Each party to the fight would like to drink the heart's blood of the other and is trying to get the knife at the other's windpipe.

It is war to the knife, and knife to the hilt, and it will be the chief end and aim of Bartlett and the "White" Democracy to defeat Hevey and every candidate who has the support of the "Young Democracy" at the polls on Nov. 4 next.

REPUBLICANS, REGISTER!

The Republican party of this city will do well to bear in mind that the registration of voters closes tomorrow evening, Oct. 25, at 8 o'clock, and act accordingly. This (Friday) and to-morrow evenings is all the opportunity that is left in which to get the names of Republicans on the lists therefore no time should be lost in attending to the duty.

It is of paramount consequence that the name of every Republican voter should be found on the poll lists when the registry closes to-morrow evening. There are important things that ought to be accomplished by them on the 4th of next month but which will not be accomplished if registration is neglected. Brackett and the whole State ticket; Fox for Congress; Capt Wyer for the State Senate; Pierce and Kittredge —all these gentlemen must receive a full Republican vote in Woburn, and certainly will receive it if Republicans attend to the duty of registration in the short time which remains in which to do it, and work with all their might for the accomplishment of the object in view.

We print an appeal to "Republicans of Woburn," issued by Capt E. F. Wyer, Chairman of the Ward and City Committees, in this issue of the JOURNAL and commend it to the special attention of Republican voters.

☞ The JOURNAL predicts that Capt. E. F. Wyer, candidate for the State Senate, will run considerably ahead of the Republican ticket in this city on Nov. 4. He is an up-and-down, square-edged man and there are a great many Democrats who like just that kind. The Captain will poll a very large vote: stick a pin there!

☞ Hullo! Carl Schurz turned up again? And still hammering away at "reform?" It seems so, for the Boston Mugwamps had him in tow last Monday night.

THE SOBER SECOND THOUGHT.

The Republicans who were opposed to the nomination of Capt. James A. Fox for Congress from this District are recovering from their disappointment and becoming reconciled to the situation. Our candidate will receive the entire Republican vote of the District and be elected.

Hoar, the Democratic candidate, don't impress the masses very favorably and he will fail to secure a full party vote. He lacks the elements of popularity, is cold, repels personal advances, and is not the sort of a man the rank and file of the 5th District Democracy swear by.

Candidate Fox's friends are putting in good work all over the lot—indeed the party are alive, wide awake, and, having made up their minds to win the battle, are sure to do so.

TALK OF MAKING IT UNANIMOUS.

Judging by the reports that reach us from the central and western parts of this Senatorial District it is safe to say that the voters there are going to make Capt. Wyer's election unanimous. The farmers of those old towns like him, irrespective of party, and word from them indicates that he will be handsomely supported all along the line.

Capt. Wyer is well known throughout the District and in all places where they know him the best he is the strongest. He will get a much larger vote than was given the Republican candidate last year, and it is probable that his majority will exceed 1,000.

☞ The Andover Townsman, a bright, clean, readable paper published weekly, carrying at its masthead the names of John N. Cole and George A. Higgins as Skippers, was three years old last week and now enters on Vol. IV, with a merry soul and pockets full of "tin." Good luck to the A. T.

☞ The citizens of Reading are unanimous in praise of Henry G. Kittredge, Esq., as a citizen and a man. They will give him a big vote over there.

☞ It is asserted on the best of authority that Capt. Fox will receive a large vote from the Cambridge Democrats.

☞ Somerville is solid for Fox. Let Somerville alone for getting back into the traces in season to vote right.

☞ The friends of Elmore A. Pierce are promised more than a party vote in Reading for him.

— Col. Charles H. Porter of the old 39th Mass. Vol. Regiment has accepted an invitation from Company K to come over here from Quincy on the 5th of Nov. next and give the "boys" an address on "Five Oaks." It is to be an anniversary occasion of no little importance.

— Mr. Wilber D. Brown told Supt Sanborn of the Southern Division of the B. & M. Railroad the other day that he hadn't had the privilege yet of taking a drink from the fountain in the depot at the Centre which reminded Supt Sanborn that he had forgotten all about telling Mr. Brown several weeks ago that he would put in a fountain there right away and hadn't done it. He renewed the promise and Mr. Brown expects to enjoy a draught of pure Horn Pond water from a fine drinking fountain in the depot at an early day. We hope he will not be disappointed.

— The New York Comedy Company played to good houses at Lyceum Hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings last and were well received. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the box-office panned out in good shape, and the Company gave the audiences their money's worth.

— Albert Thompson will not open his Boston studio until quite late in the season. He prefers to finish up some orders for large cattle pieces which he has here at home rather than to take them to Boston, which will delay somewhat his settlement in his old city quarters permanently for the winter.

— The 38th annual meeting of the Middlesex County Teachers Association will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, on Friday, Oct. 31, at 9-30 a.m. A good programme has been laid out for it. Hon. Congressman Greenhelge of Lowell will deliver the Address, and S. N. Cutler of Boston will preside at the organ.

— The Fifth Annual Convention of the Young Peoples' Societies of Christian Endeavor of Massachusetts will be held in the People's M. E. Church corner of Columbus Avenue and Berkeley streets, Boston, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct 29 and 30, being at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and closing Thursday evening.

— The authorities have designated polling places for the next election as follows: Ward 1, National Bank Block at 397 Main street; Ward 2, Fifield Block on Fowle street; Ward 3, Steamer House at No. 1 Winn street; Ward 4, Fox Building at 424 Main street; Wards 5, 6, 7 at their respective hose houses.

— The 5th annual ball and concert of Clan McKinnon, O. S. C., will take place in Lyceum Hall this evening. Calnan's Orchestra will furnish the music with J. R. Thomas prompter, besides which there will be songs, music on the bagpipes, etc. Mr. Hugh Murray, Secretary, will please accept the JOURNAL's thanks for "Comps."

— The annual convention of the American Missionary Association was held at Northampton last Tuesday. Hon. Joseph G. Pollard was the delegate from the First Congregational church of Woburn and attended the convention in that capacity. Mrs. E. V. Bridgham and her sister Miss Lydia J. Valentine of Court street in this city also attended.

— A good table is an indispensable thing in every house. The most convenient and useful Table imaginable is sold for only $5.75 at Paine's Furniture Warerooms, 48 Canal street, Boston. It is of richly grained oak, with hinged top, made to lock down automatically when in use, and capable when folded of stowing away in a few inches of space.

— Mr. Willard Smith has got in a good stock of fall and winter dry, dress, fancy and other goods, carpets, etc., which he is selling on a very small margin. His stock consists of all the staples in great variety of styles and quality. He keeps a good line of carpets and it is a fact that he sells them just as cheap as, and in some cases cheaper than, Boston houses.

— The Republicans of this city are perfect accord on the nominations and everything else this year. Complete harmony and good fellowship reign in their ranks, Capt Wyer will have the hearty support of the entire party and make a little different showing from what the Republican Senatorial candidate did last year. He'll crowd Felch to the wall even in this Democratic stronghold.

— It is a genuine treat to attend the millinery opening of Mr. Amos Cummings now in progress at his great store. It began yesterday and will close this evening and has so far been attended by a great number of ladies of this city and vicinity. They all speak in the highest praise of Mr. Cummings's stock and low prices. If the weather is favorable there will a big rush this afternoon and evening.

— The Woburn Woman's Club held its first meeting after the summer recess on the afternoon of Tuesday, Oct. 17. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather there was a fair attendance. The two excellent papers on "Housekeeping and Home making," and "Co-operative House-keeping," given by members of the Club, were thoroughly enjoyed as they presented subjects which demands one's consideration.

— Mr. John R. Carter in selling his share of the ice business of Carter & Nichols to his partner, Mr. Frank C. Nichols, reserved the Richardson Pond business and will work it for the wholesale trade in the future. Chemical analysis has demonstrated that the Richardson Pond water is of unusual purity and of course the ice cut on it is No. 1 in quality. Mr. Nichols will continue the retail trade in this city.

— Mr. Macomber, the director of the opera of Priscilla, wishes us to announce in our locals the special engagement of Mr. J. C. Bartlett of Boston for the tenor role in the opera of Priscilla and to further say that no better tenor is to be found anywhere for this part. The management have certainly shown great liberality, for in bringing Mrs. Rice and Mr. Bartlett we are to have two stars of the first magnitude.

— The polling lists are posted in the several Wards as follows: Ward 1, in Municipal building, Common street; Ward 2, Highland hose house, Prospect street; Ward 3, Steamer house, Winn street; Ward 4, hook and ladder house, Montvale Avenue; Ward 5, in William McDonough's grocery store, Montvale; Ward 6, inside of Post-office, North Woburn; Ward 7, Post office, John Cummings, 2d's, grocery store, Cummingsville.

— Mayor Johnson has agreed to open the Grand Fair to be run by the Daughters of Rebekah at Lyceum Hall on Oct. 29, 30, 31 instant. Besides that, the Fair is going to be one of the largest, most varied in wares, and the most attractive one ever held here. See their advertisement for full particulars. Mark its numerous drawing features. Don't overlook that Baby Show—that single item in the programme will be worth more than the admission tickets cost. See what a variety of tables there will be to cull from. Read the advertisement all over carefully, and then be sure to go and liberally patronize the Rebekah's grand Fair.

— Mr. Horace L. Cummings, a younger brother of Mr. Amos Cummings of this city, died at his home in Reading last week, to the great sorrow of many good neighbors and warm friends. He was a gentleman of high social and business standing there and had long been a trusted public servant, and he will be greatly missed by the community. Mr. Amos Cummings was with his brother in his last sickness almost continually.

— The North Boston District of the Epworth League will hold its Fall Convention at Gardner, Mass., Nov. 5, '90. with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. Prominent League workers will be present and an enthusiastic gathering is assured. The local Methodist Young People's Society is requested to report to G. R. Hoskins, Gardner, Mass., as soon as possible if it will be represented. Full programme and details will be published within two weeks.

— Burdetts Business College, 592 Washington street, Boston, is the most popular institution in New England for acquiring business knowledge. It is especially a favorite with Woburn young men and young women who seek this kind of an education because the Burdetts are Woburn citizens and highly esteemed as such. The College has always had a great many pupils from this city, scores of whom are now occupying lucrative positions in commercial or mercantile houses through the knowledge they gained at it.

— Mr. George E. Parkhurst, C. E., formerly Superintendent of the Woburn Water Works, subsequently sent to Russia by Blake and Co. of Boston to set up and put in operation some of their famous steam pumps (a job which he successfully accomplished), is now employed by the Portland (Me.) Company to superintend the construction of the "Complete Combustion Boiler," in which Dr. S. W. Kelly of this city is largely interested. The Company made choice of the right man for the responsible position.

— Mr. Charles Trull, an old and highly esteemed resident of Woburn, died after a very short illness at his home, No. 2 Auburn street, yesterday morning. He was in the enjoyment of good health up to last Saturday night when he was taken ill with what was supposed to be indigestion, but he failed to rally from it and died as above. He was about 84 years old, although none would think him over 73, so straight, smart and active was he. He left a widow, other family connections, and many warm friends, to mourn his loss.

— Last Sunday seemed like a late November day. The rain poured in torrents from 9 o'clock to dark, and early in the evening it set in again and rained powerfully all night. The wind was high through it all; leaves were blown from the trees leaving the latter nearly barren of autumn foliage; and everything outdoors was dark, dank and cheerless. The Sabbath ought not to have any gloom about it, but last Sunday could not have been called a pleasant one without great stretch of the imagination. Monday wasn't much better.

— Bishop Foster of Boston will preach at the opening service of the new M. E. Church, next Sunday at 10-30. Preaching at 7 P.M. by pastor. Special services will be held through the week. Preaching on Monday evening by Rev. E. M. Taylor of Charlestown; on Tuesday evening by Rev. G. A. Crawford, of Bromfield Street, Boston; on Wednesday evening by Rev. C. H. Hannaford of East Cambridge; on Thursday evening by Rev. C. E. Davis of Lowell; on Friday evening by the pastor. All are cordially invited to attend these services.

— The present exhibition being held by the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association in their building on Huntington Avenue is one of the finest and most complete ever given by the Association. The entire space of the immense building is filled with handsome and useful exhibits from the basement to the topmost gallery. It is a grand, entertaining and instructive sight, and the public show their appreciation of and interest in it by daily crowding the vast halls. The music is especially fine and is alone worth the price of admission—25 cents.

— A few eyes looked askance, some winked knowingly, and others — well, there was nothing under the sun in the jug which Uncle Levi C. Teel carried into No. 15 Church Ave. the other day except the very newest and sweetest and purest of cider from apples raised on his Cambridge street farm—not a thing intoxicating about it— and only a gallon, at that. So, those sly winks were away off, and those who looked askance didn't know so much as they thought they did. It was simply new cider of 1890 vintage — some that Uncle Teel brought over in a neighborly sort of a way for the— women folks to make mince-pie with. That's all.

— Last Wednesday morning we met Rev. Alfred Newhall who, with his devoted wife, has recently returned from a long term of successful missionary service in India (both broken in health), in the pleasant study of Rev. Dr. March in the Congregational Church and enjoyed a treat. The return of Mr. and Mrs. Newhall to the mission field at some future period will depend on their health, especially that of the latter, who of the twain is the more seriously worn down and ill. If they should fully regain their health and become robust once more their return to India will follow, but not otherwise. They expect to make their home at Rochester N. Y., while waiting the issue, and will go there in a few days. We said we had a treat, and so indeed we had. Dr. March is a missionary enthusiast, and Rev. Mr. Newhall is as deeply interested in the work as his more venerable friend. The Doctor has travelled over almost every important missionary field on the continents of the earth and the isles of the sea; and Mr. Newhall too has had an experience that makes him an interesting missionary narrator. It was edifying to listen to them, and not a little amusing. One would state a fact or relate an anecdote which would, as the lamented Lincoln used to say, "remind" the other "of a little story" which he would tell and thus contribute to the pleasure of the meeting. When Mr. Newhall, at the suggestion of Dr. March, exhibited for the reporter's edification a couple of scorpions from India — the real Bible article of scorpion too — it seemed to loosen and lubricate the organs of speech of the whole company, and the stories and anecdotes which the ministers told about scorpions would fill a 4-page pamphlet, or more, and make interesting reading besides. When the scorpion question became exhausted the JOURNAL man quietly slipped away leaving Dr. March and his good missionary friend Newhall to continue to enjoy the bright sunshine of the Doctor's library, and discuss matters appertaining to foreign missions to their heart's content.

For the Twin's Sake.

"I am sick and tired of this chromo business, and from now out I shall separate my art collection from my bar soap trade." Thus spoke a weary house keeper who had been taking inferior soap at a high price, because with it went a two-cent chromo. And then for the twin sakes of economy and ease, she laid in a stock of that best of all Brussels soap.

City Government.

ALDERMEN.

The Board of Aldermen held a meeting in the Aldermanic chambers of Municipal Building last Tuesday evening at which all the members were present except Aldermen Place, Linscott and Ramsdell.

Johnson Richardson applied for additional State aid: Dr. Seth W. Kelley and 15 others for an electric light at the junction of Garfield and Jefferson Avenues. Referred to committees.

Francis A. Buckman, as Warden of Ward 3, and Elmore A. Pierce, as ballot clerk of Ward 3, resigned. Accepted.

The Mayor appointed and the Board confirmed the following appointments, to fill the vacancies: Eliphaz Prior, as Warden of Ward 3, promoted from deputy inspector; Harry E. Marion, ballot clerk, Ward 3 and Frank H. Clarke, deputy inspector, Ward 3.

A communication was received from the Manager of the Woburn Electric Light Company granting the privilege of placing the fire alarm gong at its station.

A communication was received from Mrs. Golden, presenting a crayon portrait of her late husband, Alderman Golden, to the City Council. Accepted.

An order was passed transferring $4000 from schools to evening schools.

State aid was recommended for John C. Whitten.

The warrant for election and an order establishing voting places was passed.

Burial of George Perkins.

The funeral of George Perkins of Montvale, who died of consumption a few days before at 49 years of age took place last Sunday afternoon and although the rain poured in torrents and the wind blew a gale it was well attended by Woburn and Boston people. There were appropriate religious exercises at the late home of the deceased in Montvale at 2 o'clock, after which the body was then brought to the First Congregational church, at the Centre, where a service was held under the auspices of Post 161, G. A. R., of which deceased was first commander, and a prominent and influential member. The full ritual of the Grand Army was carried out by the officers of the Post. Rev. Dr. March was the officiating clergyman, and the church choir rendered several selections. The post turned out in good numbers, and there was a delegation of masters and teachers of the Phillips school, Boston, and also of the class of '90 of that school. There were elegant floral tributes from the Submasters' Club of Boston, the classes of '90 and '91 of the Phillips school, Post 161, G. A. R., Relief Corps and others. The body was dressed in full Grand Army uniform, and the casket was draped with the American flag with a cap and belt on top.

It's economical—Brussels soap.

The United States Official Investigation of Baking Powders,

Made under authority of Congress by the Chemical Division of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and recently completed,

Shows the Royal Baking Powder to be a cream of tartar baking powder of the highest quality, superior to all others in strength, leavening power and general usefulness.

The Royal Baking Powder is thus distinguished by the highest expert official authority the leading Baking Powder of the world.

Would most respectfully announce to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the production at the Lyceum Hall, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, November 5 and 6, of that new and Charming Comic Opera, Priscilla, which has made such an instantaneous hit wherever produced. The costumes and appointments will be the same as will be used at the Boston performance the coming season, special scenery and other accessories. The chorus will be made up of about 30 of the principal singers of Woburn. Mr. W. H. Dodd of Boston will assume the role of Hatebad Higgins and will also have direction of the stage. No pains will be spared to make this event one of the most noteworthy in the amusement annals of Woburn. Notwithstanding the large expense in bringing this opera out in first-class shape, popular prices will prevail. The sale of seats will open at the Box Office of Lyceum Hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 1, at 7 30. After that date tickets will be on sale at Horton's Bookstore and Leeds's Drug Store. Out-of-town parties can secure seats by mail or telegraph. Price of tickets 35, 50 and 75 cents.

Harvest Concert.

Notwithstanding the severest rain storm and fall gale was raging at 7 o'clock, P. M. last Sunday the Harvest Concert at the First Congregational church at that hour was a complete success. Over 200 people were present and only three of the pupils who had parts assigned them were absent. There was a fine display of vegetables which were given to the needy on Monday morning.

Superintendent John R. Carter and Assistant Superintendent Charles F. Lyford were both on hand in spite of the great commotion of the elements, and under their leadership the followiog programme was well carried out and an excellent concert given. A half yearly report ending Sept. 30, 1890, was read by the Treasurer, and the Superintendents submitted a gratifying showing of the condition of the school during that period.

Scrofula

Is the most ancient and most general of all diseases. Scarcely a family is entirely free from it, while thousands everywhere are its suffering slaves. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had remarkable success in curing every form of scrofula. The most severe and painful running sores, swellings in the neck or goitre, humor in the eyes, causing partial or total blindness, yield to the powerful effects of this medicine. It thoroughly removes every impurity from the blood.

Scrofula

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had 7 running scrofula sores. One physician advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. When we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, a marked improvement was noticed and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy." B. C. JONES, Alna, Lincoln County, Me.

Funeral of Edward J. Houghton.

Two weeks ago the JOURNAL was requested by Mr. Richard Houghton of Boston to inform the public that the funeral of his brother Edward J. Houghton would take place at the Hall of the Kearsarge Naval Veterans in Boston on Oct. 19, which request was cheerfully complied with.

Edward J. Houghton of the U. S. Navy died in 1865 and was buried in the Naval Cemetery at Norfolk, Va., where his remains have rested until his brother, Inspector Andrew Houghton of Boston, succeeded a short time since in getting permission to remove them to Edward's old home in Boston. Last Sunday they were consigned to their last resting place in Holywood cemetery being conveyed there by a large concourse of people comprising the Kearsarge Association of Naval Veterans of Boston; 15 members of Co. K, of Woburn; members of other Companies of the old 39th M. V. R. of which K was one; and many veterans and citizens of Boston and vicinity who knew the history of the destruction of the Rebel Ram Albemarle by a party of 13 naval heroes of whom only Lieut. Cushing and Houghton lived to get back to the Union fleet to which they belonged.

The funeral services were held in the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Boston, and consisted of an eloquent eulogy on the hero Houghton by Rev. Fr. Doonan, S. J., organ voluntaries, solos and choruses by eminent singers, and other exercises. Although a fearful storm raged there was a large attendance and a long procession followed the bier to the grave.

The remains arrived in Boston from Norfolk on Saturday and lay in State at the Naval Veterans Hall until the close of the funeral. The floral tributes were numerous, rich and beautiful. That presented by the Woburn members of Co. K represented the badge of the Army Corps to which the 39th belonged. It was made of white carnations and blue immortelles on a base of dark, rich ivy leaves and was one of Mr. Edward McGregor's finest pieces of floral work, unsurpassed by the numerous pieces contributed.

Edward J. Houghton enlisted in Co. K, 39th M. V. Regt. at Woburn, and was subsequently transferred to the Navy in which arm of the service he was distinguished for bravery and fidelity to duty. The Rebel Ram Albemarle had just been completed and lay at Plymouth on Roanoke river ready to pounce on the Union fleet lying outside, when the brave Lieut. Cushing volunteered to destroy her if he could get men to embark on the hazardous scheme with him. Thirteen fearless marines stepped forward and offered to go with him and among them was Houghton. All know the history of the heroic enterprise. The Rebel Ram was blown up, but at the cost of the life of every man of the expedition except Lieut. Cushing and Houghton, who alone got back to the fleet.

For their gallant conduct in blowing up the Albemarle Congress awarded medals to Lieut. Cushing and Marine Houghton. It was the most brilliant, daring and important exploit of the whole war.

The members of Co. K, 39th who attended the funeral of Houghton last Sunday were Capt. Luke R. Tidd, who commanded the Company; John Gilcreast, Abijah Thompson, Geo. E. Fowle, Loren Searles, Albert P. Barrett, Chas. K. Conn, A. D. Carpenter, C. H. Johnson, W. H. LeBarron, T. Morton Parker. The members of the Co. from other places were Oscar Persons of Hudson; W. P. Brown of Cambridge; G. W. Linscott of Boston; William McDevitt of Boston. Col. Chas. H. Porter, Mayor of Quincy, represented the 39th Regt.

Republicans of Woburn.

On Nov. 4 you will be called upon to assert your faith in Republican principles by your votes. If you believe in the principles of your party and desire to make them successful in the future, do not fail to do your whole duty. See that your name is on the voting list. If there are any possible Republican Voters in your neighborhood or among your acquaintances that have not as yet registered, urge them to do so at once. If there are any who are unable or unwilling to register on account of the tax, assist them personally, or make their cases known to your Ward Committee, who will assist all deserving and needy ones.

You have but three day more, viz: Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 23, 24, 25, when registration will close. When this duty is attended to, the next will be to come out on election day and sustain the Republican nominees by your vote, also to see that every other Republican does the same. Do not wait to be sent for by the Rallying Committee but come promptly, cheerfully, and manfully to the discharge of this great privilege and duty.

WILL YOU DO IT?

Per order Ward and City Committee,
E. F. WYER, Chairman.
Fred. J. Brown, Secretary.

On Oct. 28, the Auxiliary will meet at 3 P. M.

Saturday evening: Subject, "Saved to Serve."

Boys' Meeting at 3 P. M. Sunday. Subject, "Lesson in the Battle Life of Waterloo."

Last Sunday Rev. J. H. Hecter gave one of the best talks and in spite of the driving rain a good number were out.

Men's Meeting at 4 P. M. Sunday. To be led by Mr. E. H. Cotton: all young men, middle aged men, and old men are invited to be present.

Yesterday the State Convention met at Haverhill. The Woburn delegates were: J. R. Carter, W. W. Hill, J. K. Murdock, C. E. Tripp, Leon Dorr, L. Staples, W. C. Murdock, A. B. Dimick, C. H. Lyford, and General Secretary.

The opening of the Junior work was last Tuesday, when 33 boys out of 38 (the membership of the Branch at present) took supper in the rooms at 6.15 P. M. They invited the Board of Directors to eat with them, and 10 of the 14 were present. After supper the Directors spoke words of cheer to the boys. At 8 o'clock all adjourned to the Hall, where an entertainment was provided by Prof. George E. Emerson's Marrionettes and Mr. B. H. Tripp in Magic. At 9.30 all went home well satisfied with the evening thus spent.

One of our exchanges says: "The prospects of a watermelon plantation in this section would be very slim owing to the large colored population." This is a base slander, as the colored people are honest and readily recognize the value of and economy in using Brussels soap.

The Woburn Conference

Will meet with the Church in North Reading on Tuesday, October 28, 1890. The following programme will be carried out:

9.30. Devotional Service.
10.00. Business.
10.30. Topic for Discussion.
Loyalty to the Church as the body of Christ.
1. In its material interest, Rev. Edwin Smith.
2. In its Doctrines and Beliefs, Rev. Frank S. Adams.
3. In its Spiritual Life and Power, Rev. James L. Hill.
12.00. Collation
1.30. Business.
2.00. Topic of the day, continued.
3.00. Communion.
4.00. Adjournment.

Boston Theatres.

The Soudan is still playing to crowded houses at the Boston Theatre. The situations are startling and the music of an unusually fine order. This romantic play is given with magnitude of effects beyond anything yet seen on the Boston stage. The battle scene is at 9.45 and Trafalgar Square at 10 o'clock thus giving plenty of time to suburban visitors to reach their late trains. An Elegant Soudan Souvenir will be presented on the occasion of the 50th performance, Wednesday, Oct. 29. Doors open 1.30 and 7.15. Begins at 2 and 7.45.

Rodolph Aronson's Comic Opera Company will remain one week longer at the Globe. This magnificent success played for sixty nights at the New York Casino and brings to the Globe the same disguished artists who appeared during the run in New York. Evenings at 7.45 and the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons at 2.

At the Grand Opera House next week J. C. Stewart and his musical comedy, The Fat Men's Club, will appear and guarantee any amount of fun. A warm welcome is assured this ever pleasing comedian and his company.

Only three more performances of True Irish Hearts at the Grand Opera House this week. Don't miss the chance.

"I have prescribed your Mellin's Food for years, and know of nothing to take its place; I often use it for grown patients also," writes a physician.

"Priscilla."

The story of Myles Standish's courtship is one that always has interested the lovers of poetry and tradition. And the fact that it is to be repeated here for the benefit of the Woburn public will be certain to draw a good house. The story which has been arranged in the form of an operetta by Mr. Surrette of Concord, will be told by some of our best singers assisted by the finest Boston talent. They have had several rehearsals here and each succeeding one proves more and more satisfactory. The original version has been revised and the result is a comic opera that deserves the name. When it was played last winter in the neighboring towns the houses which greeted the production were crowded every night. Its fame has preceded it and we predict that there will be few in the city who will miss the treat.

Special scenery by the celebrated scenic painter, Story, showing accurately Leyden street, Plymouth, Priscilla's cottage, etc., will be used at the production of "Priscilla." The costumes, wigs and make up are said to be by good judges well worth the price of admission. Mr. Macomber, the manager, is evidently sparing no pains or expense to give us a first-class rendering of the popular piece.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free.

Resolutions.

At a regular meeting of the St. Charles C. T. A. Society held in their hall Oct. 9, 1890, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our beloved companion and fellow member, Daniel F. McKay, be it

Resolved, That while we bow with humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well we sincerely mourn the loss of our brother who has been called from our midst to rest.

Resolved, That we tender to the family of the deceased our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of affliction, recognizing the loss sustained in the death of a son and brother ever true and kind.

Resolved, That these resolutions be inserted in the records of the Society; published in the WOBURN JOURNAL, Woburn City Press and Woburn News; a copy framed and presented to the family of the deceased and also hung up in the rooms of this Society.

Givadam Jones of the Lime Kiln Club says: "If I had my choice, I belieb I'd radder hab a box ob de economical Brussels soap dan a gross of de finest rayzers."

Burlington.

Mr. Augustus Prouty failed to secure the District nomination for Representative at Bedford last week solely because the choice of candidate was not accorded to this town, as tacitly agreed on last year. He had a solid Burlington delegation, several Lexington and other delegates, and would certainly have got a majority of the convention if Concord had not stepped in and paralyzed everybody by the monumental cheek they showed in demanding the candidate against the wishes of almost every other town and the right of Burlington. Mr. Walker advocated the cause of Burlington and Mr. Prouty ably, but Concord's brass was too many for him and Barrett of that town won the prize. But, if he lives, Mr. Prouty will be the candidate next year.—X.

Substantiates the Above.

Elmore A. Pierce of Woburn, and Henry G. Kittredge of Reading, for candidates for the Legislature have been nominated by the Republicans of the 14th Middlesex District. Of Mr. Pierce, the WOBURN JOURNAL says: "that the choice is an excellent one." A personal acquaintance with this gentleman substantiates the above in every respect, and we wish him success.—Winchester Star.

Pierce is cocksure of getting there, and so is Kittredge.

"Chipman's Liver Pills

$10,000 IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

WHICH ARE WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL CLASSES IN THIS TOWN.

The Grand Christmas Voting Carnival in The Boston Daily Globe offers Christmas gifts to be given by vote to the most popular policeman, fire company, letter-carrier, militia company, mechanic, school teacher, saleswoman, newsman, wage-earner and railroad employe in New England. The list comprises $10,000 in gifts, including a $3500 house, and offers one of the most popular programmes ever devised. If we are alive some one in this town may secure one or more of the gifts. Get The Daily Globe at once and see what is offered.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

WINCHESTER.

A Lodge of Pilgrim Fathers has been instituted here.

Alexis Cutting has sold out his lumber business to H. A. Emerson and others.

Dr. Church is shooting wild duck, brant and geese at Biddeford Pool, Maine.

The Congregational S. S. gave their annual Harvest Concert last Sunday evening.

The annual ball of the W. C. T. A. S. will be given in the Town House on Nov. 14.

Esquire Ayer thinks there is nothing equal to White Mountain air to build a fellow up. Mrs. Ayer is of the same opinion.

Mrs. Sarah E. and Miss Alfreda Andrew are guests at the Russell House in Lexington where they will remain until winter.

Lester F. Smith is at present located in the thriving town of Westford engaged in the laudable pursuit of teaching the young idea how to shoot.

Tickets for the Y. M. C. A. series of lectures and concerts are selling rapidly. It is going to be a course of entertainments worthy of a liberal patronage.

Between all the grumblers and fault-finders Col. Nat Richardson, our accomplished Street Commissioner, and the W. V. I. A. are having a tough time of it.

The Star argues that Winchester ought to follow the example of Woburn and have a Park, on which point, as almost always on every other, the Star's head is perfectly level.

The regular meeting of the Winchester Woman's Suffrage Club will be held on the 3d Tuesday of each month, in the parlor of the Grand Army Hall, (old Library room), Brown-Stanton Block.

If Henry Johnson expects to see a rod of good road in Winchester during the present regime, I advise him to hitch up one of these fine mornings and take our Street Selectman over to Arlington where by an hour's observation and a few hints from Supt. Kimball he can, if an apt scholar learn more about building then he ever knew before in all his life.

Mr. S. W. Twombly sold a lot on Wildwood street recently on which is to be erected a fine residence. He lately sold one of his new houses on that street and the prospect is that a wealthy syndicate will purchase all the real estate that Mr. Twombly has for sale. The West Side is a very popular part of the town.

The Y. M. C. A. are doing a good work here. They are destined to grow into a very strong and highly useful organization. Good, earnest, Christian men are at the helm. The newly elected Directors of our Association are: Preston Pond, E. H. Rice and Harrison Parker, 2d., Congregational Church; W. P. Palmer, J. W. Rice and F. V. Wooster, Baptist Church; H. S. Underwood, T. A. Appolonio and G. L. Dunham Episcopal Church; Wm. F. Fitch, F. L. Ripley and W. L. Knox, Methodist Church. The officers of the Association were chosen from the above list as follows:—President, F. V. Wooster; Vice-President, Preston Pond; Treasurer, Warren L. Knox; Recording Secretary, J. W. Rice.

OBITUARY. The death of MR. HARRISON PARKER, which occurred at his home here on Oct. 3, 1890, not only removes a venerable landmark from this community but creates a vacancy in social circles that never will be filled again. Mr. Parker was closely verging on four score years of age (although none would have taken him for a man who had lived three score years and ten—the allotted space of man's existance here below—with almost another ten added) and for 15 years had been engaged in no active business, having retired in 1875. Still, his was a familiar face and form in Winchester where he had lived in peace and plenty nearly sixty years and where he was known only to enjoy the confidence and respect of everybody and to be deeply mourned when taken away to return no more. The following from the Star gives a brief outline of Mr. Parker's life, and it is therefore appropriated in lieu of an original sketch from this pen.

By his death the community has lot one more of the rapidly disappearing business landmarks of half a century ago. Born in Reading and left an orphan at two years of age, he spent the early part of his life in the family of an uncle, and learned the trade of cabinet maker.

In 1832, before he had reached his majority and against the advice of his more conservative friends, he leased a waterpower in Woburn and commenced the manufacture of vinegars. His courage and energy were rewarded with success, and few years later he purchased mill property in the centre of Winchester where he continued in the above business for twenty-four years.

In 1864 he leased a store in Boston for the sale of the mill product, and started the firm of Parker & Sleeper, which with various changes in the partnership still continues under the name of Palmer & Parker.

In 1860, B. F. Sturtevant of Boston advanced the idea of shaving veneers instead of sawing them. Perceiving at once the value of the invention, Mr. Parker bought the necessary rights and built the first machine of the kind which revolutionized the veneer-cutting industry.

In 1875 he retired from active business and resided quietly in Winchester until his death. He was an upright citizen and a good neighbor. Pre-eminently a quiet man, his voice was rarely heard in public controversy, but his influence was always for right and justice, and none were ever in doubt as to which side of any moral question he would espouse. In his family life the finer traits and tender sympathies of the man unfolded themselves and endeared him to all the household. Hospitality was a part of his creed, and in the most simple and unaffected way he made all come within hiss walls feel most literally "at home."

Many of the older citizens of Woburn who remember him will learn with regret of his departure. He leaves a wife, the eldest daughter of the late Josiah Richardson of Woburn, and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Irving S. Palmer.

Mr. Harrison Parker, one of the pioneers in the mahogany business in Boston, died at his home in this town on Friday, Oct. 3, at the age of 78. He was formerly a cabinet maker, and while engaged in his trade invented the first veneer cutting machine. He then established the house of H. Parker & Co., now Palmer, Parker & Co., mahogany manufacturers. A widow and an adopted daughter survive him. Mr. Parker was counted one of the most estimable citizens of Winchester, and was a gentleman universally respected for his many virtues of head and heart. He had hosts of friends and many relatives who are among the best of our citizens, and by all of these the death of Mr. Parker will be deeply lamented. —Boston Journal.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

LESSON IV, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 26.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxii, 39-53. Commit Verses 40-43—Golden Text. Isa. liii, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

39. "And He came out and went as He was wont to the Mount of Olives; and His disciples also followed Him." After the last lesson we must listen to His most gracious words as recorded in John xiv, xv, xvi, then we hear them sing a hymn, and then bow our heads and hearts in deepest adoration as we hear Him pray as never man prayed before (John xvii). He prayed so earnestly for them, and for us who believe on Him through their word, and again as He thinks of His finished work the glory fills His vision, and He asks that for us, too. Then they follow Him, no doubt silent and wondering, having heard such strange things about another to take His place as their comforter, teacher, friend. He had often gone to this mount before in the evening (chap. xxi, 37; John viii, 1), but perhaps never so late as this; and now it was the last time, and He was more alone than ever as far as human sympathy went. His disciples follow, but they do not understand.

40. "And when He was at the place He said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation." They had all joined Peter in saying that they would never deny Him (Mark xiv, 31), and now they are about to have a little test of how far they can go with Him and how much they can bear for Him. According to Mark, He left the eleven (perhaps just inside the garden), and took Peter, James and John, and began to be sore amazed and very heavy, saying, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death." As He enters into the deepening shadows of the cross only these three are privileged to come near.

41. "And He was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast and kneeled down and prayed." The shadows still deepen, and these, too, must be left.

42. "Saying, Father, if thou be willing remove this cup from Me; nevertheless, not My will but Thine be done." He cannot mean the cross and His being made a curse thereon, for to that He steadily and unflinchingly journeyed; but this is another cup, a sore conflict with the enemy of which we can understand but little. Let me state it as I see it and then prove it. In His great atonement which He came to accomplish He was to be made a curse by being hung upon a tree (Gal. iii, 13). His hands and feet were to be pierced (Ps. xxii, 16); yet not a bone was to be broken (Ex. xii, 46). Thus His death by crucifixion was plainly foretold and must be fulfilled. Now if Satan could manage to kill Him in this Gethsemane conflict, then the work that He came to do would be undone. This seems to have been the aim of the adversary. And if the Father should so will it, Jesus would submit.

43. "And there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven strengthening Him." One of those blessed ones so ready to wait upon Him and upon all who are His; who announced and heralded His birth, and who waited upon Him at His resurrection, and spoke to Mary and the other women so kindly.

44. "And being in an agony He prayed more earnestly; and His sweat was, as it were, great drops of blood falling down to the ground." Being strengthened He continues the conflict and is victor; but who can tell the agony which caused this sweat like drops of blood?

45. "And when He rose up from prayer and was come to His disciples He found them sleeping for sorrow."

46. "And said unto them, Why sleep ye? Rise and pray lest ye enter into temptation." It was a poor fulfillment of their readiness to die with Him; but as He said, "while their spirit was willing their flesh was weak," and He pitied them.

47. "And while He yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss Him." He has been contending with the adversary in person, and now He is about to meet him in one of His professed disciples, who while professing friendship has murder in his heart. From the supper Judas went out, Satan having entered into him (John xiii, 27). And having received from the chief priests a band of officers and men, they came with lanterns and torches and weapons to arrest Jesus (John xviii, 3). From being treasurer of the twelve, and outwardly a disciple of Christ, he has now come out in his true colors as an adversary, a devil. While of the number of the twelve he had never been a truly chosen one (John xiii, 18).

48. "But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?" Mark says that Judas said, "Master, master," and kissed him.

49. "When they which were about Him saw what would follow, they said unto Him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?" Had He not spoken of sword and advised their obtaining them? This, then, was surely the time to use them. But ah! they knew Him not, they understood Him not, they had not much of His spirit; while we may lawfully defend, we must not attack.

50. "And one of them smote the servant of the high priest and cut off his right ear." The servant's name was Malchus, and it was Simon Peter who blundered (John xviii, 10). Had Peter been watching and praying instead of sleeping he had not acted thus rashly and unbidden.

51. "And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far, and He touched his ear and healed him." Suffer ye thus far is not as if He said to Peter, You have gone far enough, be content, for Peter had gone too far and Jesus gently rebukes him, and also adds, "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to My Father, and He shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" (Matt. xxvi, 51-53). But He says to those who would apprehend Him, who were probably making noise enough about Peter's act, and ready to kill Peter, "Bear with this, suffer this much, for I will remedy it," and at the same time He restores the man's ear. His last act of healing is upon an enemy who has suffered at the hands of one of His disciples.

52. "And Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to Him, Be ye come out as against a thief, with swords and staves?" Had He been some robber chief they could hardly have made greater preparation to take Him. But when we consider that He was the Prince of Peace, the meek and lowly Jesus, harmless as a dove, how strange it all seemed!

53. "When I was daily with you in the temple ye stretched forth no hands against Me; but this is your hour and the power of darkness." The triumphing of the wicked is short (Job xx, 5), yet he often has his triumph over the righteous here in this world for a little season.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at H. L. AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from the unsunned spaces blown
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O love divine, O helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, O father! Let thy spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier in Churchman.

Man's Small Toe.

The small toe in man has recently been made a subject of study by Herr Pfitzner. It is well known that thumbs and great toes are two jointed, and the other fingers and toes generally three jointed. In many human skeletons, however, the small toe is found to be two jointed, the middle and end phalanges being fused into one piece, though still distinguishable. This variety occurs in about 36 per cent. of cases, and as a rule in both toes simultaneously; and there are more instances among women (41.5 per cent.) than among men (31.0 per cent.). One naturally thinks here of shoe pressure causing union of two bones originally separate.

But it appears that in children, from birth to the seventh year, the fusion occurs about as often as in adults. Further, the material of examination was not from a class of people who wear tight shoes. Herr Pfitzner concludes that the small toe in man is in course of degeneration (Ruckbildung), and that without apparent adaptation to external mechanical influences. Processes of reduction are also observed in the connected muscular system. The question arises, has the tendency reached its limit, or have we merely the first act of a total degeneration of the fifth toe?

The author inclines to the latter view, but desires an extension of these researches among peoples who do not wear shoes or sandals, or have only of late begun to wear them. In living persons it is not difficult to determine, by stretching and bending, whether the small toe is two or three jointed; and in this way adequate data might be had for determining any percentage differences in occurrence of the old and the new form in different races; also, for investigating the inheritance of acquired characters, members of several successive generations being examined.—Humboldt.

Mamma's Doings.

Daisy was lost. From garret to cellar they searched for her, and then went out to rouse the neighbors and scour the town. At last, near nightfall, the little girl was found sound asleep by the side of a haycock in a neighbor's field.

Disturbed by the joyful outery about her she began to cry, and was only comforted when mamma rushed through the groups and cuddled her to her heart. Then the happy procession went home, and in half an hour Daisy was asleep in her little bed.

Papa, however, had gone in another direction, and came home tired and anxious to hear the good news.

Now that there was no longer cause for worry he grew a little cross at having suffered such needless fright, and in the morning when Daisy appeared at the breakfast table tried to greet her with judicial severity.

"Well, little runaway," he said in a vain attempt at gruffness, "how do you find yourself?"

Daisy looked up at him with eyes shining in limpid innocence.

Tobacco in American Civilization.

The development of the American colonies, their rapid growth in the century preceding the American revolution, depended in a large measure on a botanical accident, viz., on the introduction of tobacco into the commerce of the world. No contribution from newly discovered lands has ever been so welcomed as this so called noxious weed. No new faith has ever traveled so fast or far among men as the habit of smoking. In scarce a century from the first introduction of the plant in Europe its use has spread to nearly half the peoples of the Old World.

The eastern coast of America from the Hudson southward to South Carolina is peculiarly well suited for the growth of the tobacco plant, and the rapid extension of the British colonies in America, which brought their population at the time of the revolution to a point where they numbered about one-sixth part of the English people, was largely due to the commerce which rested upon the use of this plant.—Professor N. S. Shaler in Scribner's.

The Wonderful Tower.

The highest structure in the world is Eiffel Tower, at Paris, 1,000 feet high. But the great discovery of Dr. Franklin Miles is certain to tower far above it in promoting human happiness and health. This wonderful nerve medicine builds up worn out systems, cures fits, sparms, headache, nervous prostration, dizziness, sleeplessness, monthly pains, sexual troubles etc. Mrs. John R. Miller, of Valparaiso, Ind., and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., gained 20 pounds a month while taking it. Finely illustrated treatise on "Nervous Diseases," and a sample bottle of the Restorative Nervine, free at Charles H. Buss's.

THE PREMATURE BURIAL HUMBUG.

Medical Men Do Not Know of a Single Authenticated Case.

The subject of premature burial has been of late revived in this country by the appearance of sensational paragraphs in the daily press. Not long ago the public were horrified by a story from Leeds of a gravedigger having heard sounds proceeding from a coffin recently buried. It required a coroner's inquest and the evidence of Mr. Scattergood, the lecturer on forensic medicine, to reassure the public that the rumor was false, the deceased woman having died a perfectly natural death, while, although its cause was typhoid fever, the burial had been by no means hastened, and it was clear that death had occurred at the time stated by those around her.

More recently there was a sensational story from Southampton of a clergyman who stopped the interment of a friend, whose funeral he had come from a distance to attend, on the grounds that he saw some sign of life, which proved to be simply his own imagination. So far as this country is concerned there has not been a single authenticated case recorded of premature burial, though there have undoubtedly been cases where persons have revived after apparent death, and many alleged cases of premature burial in addition to those previously alluded to. But all these have the appearance of sensational stories manufactured for the "penny dreadfuls" and those newspapers which thrive on sensation.

Even on the Continent, in America and in other countries, where in consequence of the intense heat burial must take place within twenty-four hours after death, the authenticity of the stories of alleged premature burial has never been proved, and it may be safely asserted that one genuine case would have led to an alteration in the law and the postponement of burial until after a longer period.

In England, on the contrary, there is less reason to complain of too speedy burial as of too prolonged an interval between death and burial. Mr. Seymour Haden's suggestion of burial within thirty-six hours was not favorably received, and is, indeed, for this country too short an interval. A universally exact interval cannot be laid down; it must vary according to the time of year, the weather and other circumstances. In these days of cheap disinfectants a body can be kept without prejudice to the living for four or five days after death, which interval is long enough to satisfy the wishes of the most timid. There is a circumstance well known to the profession which, if it were better known to the public, would go far to reassure those whose minds may have been disturbed by these sensational paragraphs.

Every day bodies apparently lifeless are received at metropolitan and provincial hospitals, having been found in every variety of posture, clothed, half clothed or naked, and under varying circumstances. At the hospital the resident surgeon must give a prompt and decisive answer to the question, "Is he (or she) alive or dead?" To send a corpse to the ward or to keep it unduly long in the reception room would be a very stupid blunder; to send a living person to the dead house would be a crime. These cases amount in the aggregate to thousands annually, and yet we have never heard of a mistake being made. It is probably this circumstance which makes members of the profession skeptical of these stories of so called premature burial, and causes them to reject with an incredulous smile the suggestion that so horrible a fate might occur to any of us.—London Lancet.

When Traveling.

I cannot imagine why people are so suspicious of one another in this world. Start a car full of people out of a depot, and for the first hundred miles of the way they look askance at each other, as though doubtful whether to keep their pocketbook under watch or not. This world has lots more nice people in it than bad, just as a summer meadow has more flowers and birds than snakes. Only cowards and idiots go through the land ignoring all the wealth of blossom, all the shadow and shine of summer weather, to keep a perpetual outlook for snakes. Snakes are occasional, but flowers and sunshine, thank God, are perpetual. Do you know, I rather fancy suspicious people are very mean themselves, and knowing their own capabilities for evil they suspect and seek in others the similitude of themselves, as magnetized iron searches out steel.—Chicago Herald.

A Man Who Was a Mascot.

"If you won't use my name I'll tell you a story on myself," said a man in the crowd on Madison street.

"Not long ago a man hired me to edit a weekly paper for him. I began in the morning. In the afternoon he came to me and said: 'C——, I think you are a mighty poor editor, but you are a mascot. You've been here only one day and we've sold the paper. We've been trying to get rid of this property for a long time, but have never succeeded until the present time. We credit our good luck to your employment, and shall take pleasure in recommending you to our successors—as a mascot.'"—Chicago Tribune.

The death of Mrs. General Booth was announced by the organ of the Salvation Army as follows: "Mrs. General Booth, the beloved mother of the Salvation Army, promoted to glory from Clacton-on-the-Sea, October 4, 1890."

AMERICANS WHO VISIT THE QUEEN.

Our Secretary of Legation Says They Are Democratic and Dignified.

Mr. Henry White, secretary to the American legation in England, is visiting his relatives and friends. Mr. White has been secretary to foreign legations since 1883, having been first appointed to the court of Vienna. He remained there but a short time, as the climate did not agree with the health of his wife, and at his request he was transferred to the court of St. James in 1884, and has been there continuously since that time.

Mr. White is a pleasant and interesting talker. As the charge d'affaires of the legation it is his duty to present to the court all Americans who desire the privilege. No discrimination, he says, is made in ceremony. All Americans who wish to attend a presentation can have their wish gratified, provided they are au fait morally. They make their desire known at the legation and their names are sent to the lord chamberlain by the charge d'affaires, and the names are placed among those who are to be received at the next presentation. The queen is more generous to men than to women. The former have eight opportunities during the season of attending a "levee," as the reception for gentlemen is called, while for the girls and yearning mammas but two "drawing rooms" are held, one in March and one in May. Unmarried gentlemen and ladies are never admitted together except under rare circumstances. A man may accompany his wife, or vice versa.

The court officers are punctilious on these occasions in the matter of dress, and many a woman's heart has fluttered in direful anticipations when preparing her toilet for these occasions for fear she could not pass muster. The trains must be of a prescribed length, and dresses are invariably cut decollete. The rule is strictly observed, the only exception being in case of sickness. To be admitted otherwise even in such cases permission must be secured beforehand from the lord chamberlain. The men adorn themselves for these occasions in the dress of their respective countries, and it is bad taste to appear otherwise. The Americans, of course, appear in the conventional evening suit of black. No sword is required, and, altogether, from the democratic nature of the United States government, Americans are given more license than other nationalities.

American travelers have been very much calumniated, Mr. White says, by writers who depict them as resorting to all sorts of petty schemes to obtain audience with the queen. While occasionally a shoddy person might be encountered whose impudence is greater than his good taste or judgment, and who gives occasion for the ridicule that Americans are frequently made to hear, it is nevertheless the rule that citizens of the United States are not pushing, and that they show more indifference to distinction by notice from royalty than do travelers from other countries. He has seen affluent merchants who have come from the humblest walks in life deport themselves with more grace, dignity and self possession at a levee than many whose intercourse with royalty had been more extended.

European travel by Americans, he says, has wonderfully increased of late years. Four or five of the largest hotels in London are nearly always filled with them during the season. Many, of course, come to the legation, but the great majority do not. They go quietly and systematically about their travels, as they do about their business at home. In alluding to democracy Mr. White says it may astonish one to hear it, but he thinks it is a fact that there is as much if not more democracy in England than here. Many a peer, he says, would willingly exchange his title for a seat in the house of commons. A man may inherit a title, but if his merits do not command respect and admiration his empty title will not secure them to him.—Baltimore Sun.

How to Measure Wheat.

About the time that Daniel Drew began his Wall street career he was up in the country one time to visit some friends, and two farmers called upon him to decide a case. One had sold the other five bushels of wheat, and proposed to measure it in a half bushel and sweep the top of the measure with a stick. The other objected, and Uncle Daniel was asked to decide.

"Well, legally speaking, a bushel is only a bushel," he answered.

"And can the measure be swept off?"

"I think it can."

"What with?"

"Well, if I was selling wheat I should probably use half the head for a flour barrel."

"Which edge of it?"

"Gentlemen, that is a point I cannot now decide on," sighed the old man. "If I was selling to a widow or a preacher I am certain that I should sweep the measure with the straight edge, but if I was selling to a man who pastures his cows in the road and his pigs in his neighbor's corn I'm afraid I should use the circular side and scoop a little to boot."—Wall Street News.

Old Church Floors.

Church floors present many interesting details. In York cathedral, on the pavement, there used to be certain stones that marked the places where the leading personages were to stand in ceremonials. In Westminster Abbey there used to be a straight line of small stones in the middle of the paved floors to enable processions to keep in the center of the ambulatories, portions of which may still be traced.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Democratic hopes of carrying Ohio are growing beautifully less and less. Events in the Buckeye State are affording new proof of the profound truth of the adage, that give the Democratic party rope enough and it is sure to hang itself.

Congressman Vaux has practically accepted the independent nomination in his Philadelphia district, and the souls of Mr. Mills and Mr. Kilgore and the other Southern Democratic leaders will be vexed by the fear that Mr. Vaux may be re-elected.

Homes of Sea Urchins.

The sea urchin gets its name from the spines which cover its shell. The true name, echinus, meaning a hedgehog, has been corrupted into urchin, with plain injustice to small lads. These curious shellfish have acquired strange habits on the coast of France. They are found at home in cavities of the rock on the shore. The diameter of the cavity is often greater than that of the entrance, and the creature is so large that he could not leave his cell even if he very much wanted to do so. It is said that thousands of these may be seen thus domiciled in the granite rock.

It is not doubted that the creatures make these holes for themselves, but how they do this is a question not yet satisfactorily answered. It has been suggested that the rock has been somehow acted upon chemically, but this theory has to be given up when the nature of the rock is considered, and the fact that no acid has been proved to exist in the animal.

The matter has been studied lately by a French naturalist, who refers the excavation to mechanical means. His explanation is that the creature "probably bites the rock, the sucker feet are also attached and a rotary motion is imparted to the body, the prickly points gradually wearing down the surface." This work would certainly occupy the animal a good part of his lifetime, and the wonder is that no observer has yet seen the excavation going on.

An attempt is made to conceal these holes by means of mussel and other shells. The rocks in which the cavities occur are in general thickly covered with sea weed. A number of other animals are known to penetrate rocks, and it is supposed that they do it by mechanical means. In the hard limestones of Algiers spotted snails were found in holes four or five inches deep.—Youth's Companion.

Famous Art Treasures.

Though the late Sir Richard Wallace left rich and valuable collections in his two Paris residences the most precious of his possessions were those which for nearly twenty years he stored in his house in Manchester square. Startled by the events of the Commune, Sir Richard reconstructed his London mansion and stripped his Paris galleries to furnish and enrich those of London. In Manchester square there are no fewer than seventeen Meissoniers, ten paintings by Paul Delaroche, thirty by Horace Vernet, twelve by Eugene Delacroix, and numerous examples of the old masters.

There are five grand galleries—one devoted to modern and another to ancient paintings, one to Oriental arms, one to arms of all epochs, and a renaissance gallery. There are four spacious saloons, three of them named after the painters whose works adorn them—Valasquez, Guardi, Greuze. The fourth is fitted with paintings of the English school. The staircase is enriched by what is believed to be the finest Boucher in existence. Sir Richard was also a great collector of rare furniture, sculpture, bronzes and carvings. In his galleries are to be found a hundred clocks of marvelous workmanship and bronzes of every age, thousands of wood carvings and of rare enamels, Sevres vases, cameos, intaglios and precious stones. At the time of his death Sir Richard was engaged in compiling a catalogue of his priceless treasures.—London Chronicle.

She Traveled on Her Muscle.

She stood at the Union depot gate, largely clad in a white dress that did not fit her. There were lovely big bunches of green on her bonnet. Her feet were large, and seemed to be continually getting in the way and hampering her movements. Her hands were clasped, and drooped down before her with a suggestion of pensiveness. Not more than nineteen soft, summery summers and as many hard winters had passed over her head.

As she stood thinking huge thoughts a brassy cheeked hackman approached with a howl of "Cab, miss?" Still she was held in the toils of thought. With a repetition of his yell the hackman just placed his hand on the soft loveliness of that shoulder. With lightning like rapidity the hands unfolded, and the unshaven hackdriver received a rebuff alongside the jaw. He looked hurt. In an awful falsetto voice the rural beauty shouted: "No, you varmint. I don't want no kerridge, and you slopsided city dude, with a sign on yer hat, don't you put your dirty hands on me agin. Hear? And if you don't want me to pull yer hair and knock yer down don't call me miss. Hear? I married Silas Prett last year, you ignoramus. Git before I hit you agin." The hackman got.—Albany Argus.

Save Your Sea Robins.

Did you ever hear an old salt reel curses out by the yard when he catches a sea robin? Fishermen dislike catching the sea robin, although their meat is as sweet as that of any fish that swims, but very few fishermen are aware of this fact. The fish is gamey, but very peculiar looking.

Its head is large and flat, with small almond eyes, a large mouth, slender body and a rough skin without scales, and when landed it makes queer noises. When the sea robin is skinned and its head taken off its flesh is as white as snow. When fried with butter it makes very palatable eating. It also makes fine chowder.

An old boathouse keeper at the Rockaway trestle told me that he is in the habit of gathering them up every evening after his boats come in with the fishing parties, who have no idea of their good qualities.—New York Herald.

A Lesson in Politeness.

The late Professor Morren related once in our hearing a rebuke which he gave to a high strung Beacon Hill damsel, which is worth repeating for the moral it carries. The young lady was one of his pupils and made herself particularly obnoxious by her haughty and even insolent bearing, displaying her contempt for all about her so markedly that it became at last unbearable.

"I knew her mother in France," said the professor, whose broken English there is no need of producing here, "and she was a most exquisitely modest and unassuming woman. But the daughter was so insolent that she had to have a lesson, so I said to her:

"'Will you be so good as to remain after the lesson? I have something to tell you.'

"She stayed, and in her haughtiest manner she said: 'You wish to speak to me?'

"'Yes. You are Miss So-and-So?'

"'Yes.'

"'And you live at No.—Beacon street?'

"'Yes.'

"'And your father is Mr. So-and-So?'

"'Yes.'

"'And your mother is the lovely and sweet Mrs. So-and-So I have met in France?'

"'Well?'

"'Oh,' I said, 'you are sure there is no mistake?'

"'No mistake! What do you mean?'

"'I am exceedingly surprised that you come of such a family and so well born.'

"'Sir!'

"'I am much surprised. I have been sure you came of a new rich family—some parvenue'——

"'Sir!'

"'You think, mademoiselle,' I said, softening my manner, 'that haughtiness is aristocratic. Now, you will pardon an old man if I remind you that the contrary is true. I have known your mother so long that I dare to be frank with you. You have been very insolent in the class.'

"'Insolent, monsieur?'

"'Yes, mademoiselle. You have mistaken this for a mark of aristocracy. You would much better copy your mother—your gentle, lady mother.'

"And I made her my best bow and left her to think about it. And she was a good girl afterward—a very good girl."—Boston Courier.

He Wasn't Extravagant.

Cautious people are sometimes too cautious. The story of a man who considered seriously for a week whether it would be wise for him to pay $500 for a lot, and after deciding in the affirmative learned from the real estate man in a more careful conversation that it was $500 per front foot, is a case in point.

A few days ago a stranger, while passing a haberdasher's store, was attracted by a display of shirts, which were further distinguished by a placard on which was printed the legend, "These are 75 cents." It happened that in the same case were a few silk umbrellas, which command about $6 each on a pleasant day, with a slight tendency to rise if clouds gather. The pedestrian gazed long and earnestly into the window; then he wandered away, only to return soon and gaze again. This was repeated several times.

Finally he entered the store and asked to look at the umbrellas. One was brought out and he opened and examined it with the utmost care. It seemed to suit him exactly, and he turned to the proprietor and remarked, "I'll give you an even sixty cents for it." The proprietor evidently didn't think he understood aright, for he leaned forward and said, "What?" The stranger again informed him, "I'll give you an even sixty cents for the umbrella." The proprietor was dazed. Then he began to recover.

"How much do you think it costs?" he inquired.

"Seventy-five cents."

"And have you been debating all this time whether you would give that amount for a silk umbrella?"

The stranger said he had.

The proprietor led him gently but firmly to the door. "My friend," he said tenderly, "you are too far from home, and you'd better scoot before some hungry car horse gets a chance to nibble at you and makes a funeral of you before the mistake is discovered."—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

That very shrewd Americanized Chinaman, Mr. Wong Chin Foo, is a smooth specimen of the Mongolian race. He is a rapid young man, "allee samee 'Melican man," but will only meekly admit that he manages to buy enough rice to keep him alive. His occasional dips into journalism only produce a meager income, and he accounts for his undeniably prosperous appearance by mysterious allusions to some governmental service he performs. He encourages outside barbarians to believe that his own race in this city are frightfully incensed against him, but there is a well founded impression that Mr. Wong's real avocation is to keep his countrymen well posted as to the doings of those who might interfere with the peculiar amusements and customs which they have brought from the effete east.—New York Telegram.

The Reciprocity Idea in Congress.

The strength of the reciprocity idea among the Representatives, as developed by the canvass of the Philadelphia Press (Rep.) will surprise the country. Of 161 Republican Congressmen interviewed as to their attitude toward reciprocity with Latin America, only 12 doubted the practicability of the measure and only three expressed themselves as decisively opposed to it. It was not thought that the idea enjoyed this large degree of popularity. A great many of the Representatives spoke very cautiously in committing themselves in favor of the plan, and signified a desire to have more time for the consideration of the subject, which is perfectly natural. For the question is a very large and important one, and attractive and dazzling as the idea of Pan-American reciprocity is upon first appearances, Congress cannot afford to be precipitate in giving it even a qualified indorsement. It is interesting to note that almost as many Democrats as Republicans approve of the idea. But the friends of reciprocity, if they give heed to the lessons of the past, will not count too implicitly upon Democratic assistance. The Democratic politicians are just now loudly pretending that reciprocity with our Southern neighbors would be the first step toward the realization of the Democratic policy of free trade. It is a matter of record, however, that of recent years when a reciprocity proposal has really assumed tangible shape, the free traders have opposed it on the ground that its ultimate effect would only be to extend the wall of protection. A reciprocity which does not involve the opening of the American market to the free entry of the products of Sheffield, Manchester and Birmingham apparently finds no great favor with the politicians of the Democracy.—Boston Journal.

DON'T!!

Don't take medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh.

Don't neglect a cold in the head.

Don't suffer with Catarrhal headache.

Don't hawk and spit and disgust your friends.

Don't let any or all of these things run your Catarrh into Consumption.

Attend to it at once. Use Dr. Karl Wesselhoeft's German Catarrh Cure and you will certainly be cured.

The Woburn Journal

WOBURN'S FIRST LAWYER.

The preparation by Mr. William R. Cutter, Librarian of the Public Library in this city, of matter to fill the space allotted to Woburn in the new History of Middlesex County (Mass.) now nearly ready for publication, has lately given something of an impulse to local historical research which has resulted in bringing many things to light which before were wholly or partially hidden away from public view. Diligence in delving for them has been rewarded by obtaining many facts in the history of Woburn not before generally known, and they will be presented by Mr. Cutter in the important work above mentioned.

While engaged in collecting such material the legal profession came under review and naturally an effort was made to find out, if possible, the name of the first person who practiced law in this venerable town. Research among old records, histories, biographies, etc., etc., established the fact beyond controversy that JOSEPH BARTLETT was Woburn's First Lawyer, and to him must be accorded the honor of being the pioneer in the profession and the first "Counsellor and Attorney at Law" to hang out his "shingle" in this town.

JOSEPH BARTLETT was a cosmopolitan of the first water, with a strong leaning towards Boston for a permanent home. He lived a good deal in London, England, where his career in society and at the clubs was characterized by a Bohemianism, and not unfrequently a recklessness, which had a very depleting effect on his revenues and sometimes deprived him of his personal liberties. Tradition, the memories of clubs, and the Court records, of London are not at all times flattering to the purity of BARTLETT'S daily life in the world's metropolis.

BARTLETT'S was a unique character, but he was a loyal American, which in those days covered a multitude of sins.

We believe the people of Woburn, especially the legal fraternity of the city, will appreciate the following outline of the career of Woburn's First Lawyer which the kindness of Librarian Cutter enables us to give in the columns of the JOURNAL this week. The pen-sketch is interesting and, in our judgment, worthy of being preserved for future use. The first contribution is by Librarian Cutter, which is supplemented by a chapter from the History of York County, Maine, to which is appended a short account by the Editor of the JOURNAL of the book above referred to by Mr. Cutter.

The precise date of BARTLETT'S settlement in Woburn is not definitely known, but he was called Captain in the records of this town from 1789 to 1796, which will give some idea concerning it. His residence and office were at Central Square, at that period the business centre of the town, where the latter still stands, and the former disappeared only a few years ago.

[From Cutter's Bibliography of Woburn (MS.)].

Joseph Bartlett, the first lawyer by profession to settle in Woburn, published one or more specimens of his literary skill. One entitled "Aphorisms on man, manners, principles and things" (Portsmouth, 1810) is found in the Woburn Public Library. The author styles himself "counsellor at law," and the book was printed at the "Oracle office" in Portsmouth, where he then apparently resided. It was printed "for the author" who dedicated it to his "enemies." These persons are assumed to be the rich, who had "persecuted him" from city to city, he says. He asks to be distinguished by their "hatred;" hoping that his book will be brought to "more general notice," from measures that "will injure and vilify" the author. How much the sale was affected by such aid we do not know. The author claimed originality for the aphorisms presented in his work: they contained his "observations and reflections for years." He was "too proud to copy," and his confidence in himself was too great "to ask aid from others." It was, too, his "first essay" in publication. He had also a desire, it would appear, to advance American literature; for he says "that in a country so young as ours," no measure should be used "that will paralyze exertion, or deaden a laudable ambition for literary fame." He also published a volume of "poems." Allibone mentions an edition of the latter, published at Boston in 1823, and dedicated to John Quincy Adams. Appended to this collection were the "Aphorisms on men, manners," etc., already mentioned. Allibone also says that the author delivered in 1799, a poem on Pysiognomy before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Harvard University. His name is not found in the volume entitled "Poets of Portsmouth" (Boston 1865); but we imagine his writings were not pecuniarily helpful to their author.

George A. Hobbs, of Woburn, has a copy of the "Aphorisms" (Bost. 1823), with dedication to J. Q. Adams, which copy contains also "Physiognomy: a poem" (16 pp.); also an essay, entitled, "The Blessings of Poverty" (16 pp.)—C.

Mr. Cutter adds the following:—

Joseph Bartlett probably settled in Woburn about August, 1788. By the first of January, 1789, he had fairly established himself as a resident. On August 25, 1790, his house was "raised;" but by June 20, 1797, he had removed from Woburn to Cambridge. His house in Woburn was known by the name of the "Black House," from its color, and was called by that name as long as it stood, which was after the year 1850. It stood on the estate now numbered 732 Main street, near present Central Square—the estate on which the present writer now lives, opposite the new Woburn Park.

The low, one-story building, now occupied as a dwelling at Central Square, near the junction of Main and Vine streets, but located on Main street, and sometimes called the Pooie house by the older citizens, is said to have been erected for his law office. This point in his day was an important business centre in Woburn, being on the line of two important stage routes, and conveniently reached. His practice was probably as fair as the circumstances of the town warranted. He possessed a singular taste for his time in house-decoration. In Woburn his house was painted black, with white window-sashes and green doors; at Saco he built a house of round form, and painted it a fiery red. The places of his residence after he had left Woburn, were Cambridge, Portsmouth, Saco, and Boston. When he died (in 1827) his "sun," it is said, descended "in a cloud." He was married, but had no children. The notice in Loring's "Boston Orators" gives the date and place of his birth, the name of his wife, and other interesting particulars. He composed the following epitaph on a friend:

"God takes the good,
Too good by far to stay,
And leaves the bad,
Too bad to take away."

The name of the military company he commanded was the Boston Republican Volunteers (infantry), of which he was captain in 1788. He died in Boston, Oct. 27, 1827, aged 66 years.

[From "Bench and Bar" in History of York County, Maine. Philadelphia: Everts & Peck, 1880.]

In 1803 came to Saco, [Maine] Joseph Bartlett, an eccentric man, and one of the wits of the bar. He was born June 10, 1762, in Plymouth, Mass., and graduated, with honorable standing, at Harvard in 1782; his scholarship being such as to entitle him to membership in the highest literary society of the college,—the Phi Beta Kappa. He pursued the study of law for a while at Salem, but at the close of the Revolution went to England, where he led a wild, irregular life with boon companions, in whose society his wit and reckless manners made him acceptable. He passed his time in London in gambling and dissipation and, getting into debt, was thrown into prison, from which he procured his release by writing a play, in which he appeared as one of the actors. He then procured upon credit, a cargo of goods, with which he set sail for America, but his vessel was wrecked on Cape Cod. We next hear of him among the forces of Massachusetts raised to put down the Shays Rebellion, where he appears as Captain of Volunteers, but returning to the law again after the war. He commenced practice in Woburn, whence he removed to Cambridge in 1796, and became zealous in the affairs of the town and college. He seems to have been still honored by the Phi Beta Kappa, for in 1799 he delivered a poem before that society, which was considered a talented performance in his peculiar vein of wit and satire. In a trial at Plymouth between a mother and son, during the time of his residence in Cambridge, he delivered a speech, or rather a serio-comic argument, some passages of which will illustrate his manner of mingling the pathetic and the ridiculous. He commented upon the sadness of such a quarrel between a parent and child, and, said he, "It is a shame that such a thing should occur here in the old town of Plymouth, under the shadow of the hill on which were the graves of the forefathers, and on which I have myself often picked huckleberries."

In Saco he took the popular side in politics, being an ardent Democrat. By his long experience, his readiness as an advocate, his fastidious and agreeable manners, he became very popular, and for a while had a great run of business. He was elected to the Senate of Massachusetts in 1805. He afterwards attempted to set up Daniel Cleaves as a candidate for Congress in opposition to Col. Richard Cutts who was first elected from that District in 1800, and held the office by six successive elections, through the administration of Jefferson and a part of Madison. In attempting thus to usurp the management of the party against such leaders as Col. Cutts and Dr. Thornton he over estimated his personal strength vastly, and in the rash and egotistical attempt was the chief sufferer. The organs and leaders of the party opened upon him with great severity and withered him and his business together into insignificance. Although he brought an action against Nathaniel Willis of the Eastern Argus for libel and imprisoned him and recovered damages, it did not help his cause; while it put money in his pocket it ruined his business in Saco, and he was obliged to move out of town. He left the State in 1809 or 1810 and lived afterwards on his desultory literary labors. He drifted about from place to place, and finally turned up in Boston where, on the 4th of July, 1823, he delivered an oration in the hall of the Exchange Coffee House, and recited an Ode entitled "The New Vicar of Bray," which are mentioned by Mr. Loring in his "Hundred Boston Orators." The same year he published an edition of poems dedicated to John Quincy Adams to which he appended "Aphorisms on Men and Things." While living in Saco he edited a paper called The Freeman's Friend, and on the 4th of July 1805 delivered an oration in Biddeford [Me.]. In 1827, at the age of 65, he wrote the following epitaph upon himself:

"'Tis done! the fatal stroke is given,
And Bartlett's fled to hell or heaven;
His friends approve it, and his foes applaud,
Yet he will have the verdict of his God."

"BARTLETT'S WORKS," the book alluded to above by Mr. Cutter, is a small, thin volume, and bears evidence on one of its fly-leaves of having been bought by G. L. Sibley, the price as marked being six shillings, ($1). On August 2, 1829, it was presented by Samuel Shaw, a prominent citizen of Palmyra, Somerset County, Maine, to John Harvey of the same place, and subsequently, probably near 1842, it came into the possession of George M. Mason (my step-father), a lawyer residing at that time at Canaan, Somerset County, Maine. It is likely he obtained the book from Harvey. I am not clear in my recollection as to how I came to have it, but as I was at home in 1844 it is fair to presume that I got it of Mr. Mason at that time. It has been in my possession ever since—45 years, or more.

The volume contains all the literary productions of JOSEPH BARTLETT so far as is known. They are "Aphorisms on Men, Manners, Principles, and Things;" "Physiognomy, a Poem;" "The Blessing of Poverty;" and it was printed in Boston by Jonathan Howe in 1823. The book also contains a "Dedication to the Honorable] John Quincy Adams," and a preface which bears date January, A. D. 1823.

Considering that the volume is 67 years from the press it is in a good state of preservation and may be read as easily as any freshly issued printed work.—G. A. H., EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL.

Hints to the Cook.

CUSTARD PUDDING.—Take a pint of milk, one cup of sugar and six eggs. Beat the sugar and eggs together, flavor with vanilla. Pour the milk a pudding dish, mix in the eggs and sugar. Eat with sauce.

OYSTER ON THE HALF LOAF.—Drain the oysters and sprinkle with salt and pepper or with pepper sauce, roll in cracker crumbs or corn-meal and fry. Cut several pieces of bread in half, butter and lay on them the oysters and thinly sliced pickles; heat in the oven and serve hot.

APPLE PRESERVES.—Make a syrup of three-quarters of a pound of loaf sugar for every pound of apples; add a sliced lemon. Pare and quarter good, tart apples and put in; boil until transparent, and put in a glass jar; boil the syrup thick, and pour over.

MERINGUE PUDDING.—Line a deep pudding dish with slices of sponge cake, cover with rich fruit jam, pour over custard and bake, ice like cake, set in the stove to dry, take out and cover with meringue. Serve without sauce.

VANILLA CREAM SAUCE.—Two beaten eggs, four tablespoonfuls granulated sugar, two cups sweet milk (or one each of milk or water), butter size of hickory nut; stir over the fire in double boiler, until as thick as very rich cream. Do not boil. When cold add a very little vanilla. Use sauce cold.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, N. Y.

Great Discoverers.

What Bell and Edison are to the telephone and electricity, says the Pittsburg News, Dr. Franklin Miles, the well-known specialist in nervous diseases, is to the nervous system and nerve fluid. Among his numerous discoveries the Restorative Nervine is undoubtedly one of the greatest. It is unsurpassed in nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, epilepsy, neuralgia, backache, melancholly, sleeplessness, change of life, etc. Free trial bottles of it may be had of Charles H. Buss, Druggist. All should read his "New and Startling Facts for the Afflicted," a very able, interesting, and finely illustrated book. Free to all.

Some Documents Received.

From Senator Hoar: "Comparison of the Customs Law of 1883 with the New Law of 1890, with Index, to which is Appended the Administrative Custom Laws of 1890." This is a very useful pamphlet for it gives not only the Tariff Law of 1890 but directly beneath each section of it is printed the Tariff Law in operation prior to the adoption of the present one.

List No. 35 of The Defender, a weekly paper published by the American Protective Tariff League, which contains "Export Discounts,"; also List No. 36 of the same publication which contains "Wage Earners under Protection and Free Trade", and other valuable papers.

"Hatch Experiment Station of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. Bulletin No. 10." This treats of special fertilizers for greenhouse crops, and also of small fruits.

The Pulpit and the Stage.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a thorough trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it." Free trial bottles at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

Telling Time by Flowers.

There is not an hour of the day that is not the beloved hour of some blossom. Linnæus, the clebrated bontanist, conceived the pleasant notion of a flower clock. Instead of a rude metal bell to thump the hour, there is a little flower bell ready to open at 3 o'clock, a flower star that will shine forth at 4, and a flower cup, perhaps, will appear 5 o'clock to remind old-fashioned folk that it is near tea time. Claude Lorraine, although he did not, like Linnæus, make a clock of four-and-twenty flowers in his garden, was a landscape painter most familiar with nature, and when he was abroad he could at any time know what o'clock it was by asking the time of the flowers of the field.

It is Foolish

To send for the doctor every time you don't feel just right. My doctor's bill for years was over a hundred dollars a year, which made a pretty big hole in my wages. For the past two years, I only spent ten dollars, with which I bought a dozen bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and health has been in my family since using them.—Robert Johnson, Machinist.

Unique pen or key racks are made out of the legs and feet of turkeys. The legs are dried and cured and the black claws polished, and then the legs are gilded with gold paint. Two little round sticks about the width and length of pen holders are also gilded, and fastened with an invisible wire to the legs. A fluffy bow of ribbons at one corner, and another bow of a contrasting shade at the corner diagonally opposite, give an artistic touch to this very odd and pretty wall ornament.

An Ingenious Invention.

An English genius has invented a tray containing a night-lamp and a small sauce-cup for holding infant's food. This mechanical arrangement can be attached to the bedpost, and is invaluable in a home where there is an invalid or a baby and a few or no servants. The night lamp emits sufficient heat to keep the childs's food warm. When not required for service the tray is a convenient place for a book.

A FAITHFUL SERVANT.

For more than 25 years Capt. E. F. Wyer has been one of the most active and influential Republican workers in Woburn. By his devotion to party interests and successful management of political affairs placed in his hands he was long ago by common consent of his co-leborers given the leadership among them, the wisdom of which has been demonstrated time and again in the results of the elections which have taken place.

Capt. Wyer was never ambitious for leadership. A position among the rank and file always suited him just as well as any other. It never made any odds to him at which end of the procession he marched—he has been a WORKER from the start; his object always has been to MAKE POINTS, to accomplish results—to bring something about which would be beneficial to his party.

Capt. Wyer has always worked solely for the advancement of the interests of the Republican organization. A more disinterested person never mingled in political affairs. Although he has been a successful laborer and leader for more than 25 years he has never yet asked for an office—not only has he never asked for an office, or any other political favor, but has persistently refused to accept the suffrages of his party at all primaries, conventions and at the polls, during that long period.

Many times, as would be naturally the case, Capt. Wyer has been urged to accept nominations to official positions which were equal to elections, but that was not what he wanted or was after.

Republican success was the only consideration that could induce him to work, or whose claims he honored, and if others wanted the offices he was perfectly willing that they should have them.

Capt. Wyer did not this year accept the Senatorial candidacy in this District willingly although his election would be assured. He did not care for it and would not have taken it had not certain things occurred which need not here be mentioned. He preferred to work for someone else. But he has many staunch friends all over the District and these insisted that, in token of his valuable services last year and previousiy, he ought to take the nomination and must. He finally yielded to the solicitations of these friends, and here we find him, for almost the first time in his life, running for office.

The JOURNAL has been constrained to submit the statements herein made, not that they are needed to help assure Capt. Wyer's election, but that justice in some small degree at least might be done to a worthy and very successful local Republican leader, and a gentleman who is influential among and is highly esteemed by political lights all over the State. It is right and proper that we should say what we have in this article, for it is truth and Capt. Wyer is fairly entitled to the statement.

In no way can Woburn Republicans do more honor to themselves next Tuesday than by giving Capt. Wyer a vote that will send him AWAY AHEAD of the general ticket.

REPUBLICANS, DO YOUR DUTY!

If the Republican party in this city do their whole duty next Tuesday they can finish the race neck and neck with the Democracy, if indeed it may not lie in their power to get under the wire just a little ahead of the old enemy. All they want to do to accomplish this desirable end is to go to the polls and vote—every man of them! DON'T FAIL TO VOTE!

The Republican party here are not engaged in striving one against another. There is harmony all along the line. Party takes precedence of men in this campaign and that spirit has united the Republicans solid, and placed victory even in this city within their reach.

Every Republican candidate in the field is worthy of the cordial support of the party. Brackett, Fox, Wyer, and for Representatives Pierce and Kittredge — these are all honorable men, good members of society, upright and intellegent — can anybody give a reason why the party should not put forth special efforts to elect them?

Everything in the world the Republicans of this city need do to beat their opponents IS TO VOTE. If every Republican will be sure to go to the polls himself and sees that his neighbor also goes, the result of next Tuesday's fight will be the biggest surprise party the Democracy ever went to.

Republicans, do your WHOLE DUTY next Tuesday. Let there be no stay-at-homes in Woburn!

FOX'S ELECTION SURE.

Reports from all quarters of the District agree in this, that the election of Capt James A. Fox as General Bank's successor is a foregone conclusion. He will gain the victory by a large majority too.

The more the District have come to know about Capt Fox the better they like him, and it would be a task of no little difficulty to find a Republican who is not wideawake for his triumph at the polls.

It is confidently predicted by gentlemen of good judgment and the best means of knowing, that Capt Fox will tie Shermy Hoar in that notorious hotbed of Mugwumps, Cambridge, and if he does, his majority in the District will be almost equal to Hayden's in his second run which footed up considerably in excess of the average usually won by the Republicans.

One reason for Capt Fox's popularity is that he is emphatically "one of the people." He is an every-day sort of a man; plain and unpretentious; a modest gentleman, esteemed by all classes of community and enjoying the confidence of everybody who knows him.

The little ripple of disappointment over Capt Fox's nomination has entirely disappeared and the Republicans all around the District are working shoulder to shoulder for his election, which is as certain as that the sun rises next Tuesday morning.

VOTE FOR FOX!

ANOTHER GREAT MEETING.

The Republican Congressional Committee for the 5th District have appointed another grand rally and announced the time and place for holding it in the columns of THE JOURNAL to-day. It is their intention to close the campaign in a blaze of glory.

The speakers for this mass meeting are the best on the stump in the State. They always draw great crowds and keep them there until the speaking is over. They are eloquent gentlemen and handle the great political issues of the hour in a manner which always delights good, sound Republicans.

Republicans, let this closing meeting of the campaign be a buster. Let it be the capsheaf. Let it be such a gathering as will strike terror to Democratic hearts. No good Republican will fail to be there sharp at 7.15 P. M. unless prevented by sickness or death.

"COME ONE: COME ALL!"

REPRESENTATIVE CANDIDATES.

The Republicans of the 14th Middlesex Representative District have nominated two firstrate men for Representatives to the General Court and it is gratifying to hear favorable reports of their prospects in both Woburn and Reading. The general belief prevails that Messrs. Pierce and Kittredge will be elected by good majorities.

Republicans can give no sufficient reason for voting for the Democratic Representative candidates and it is not to be presumed that any will do so.

Pierce and Kittredge are receiving handsome support all along the line. A good many Democratic ballots will be thrown for Pierce in this city, and we are informed that Reading's vote will show the same thing. Both deserve the support of all clean, intelligent men.

Republicans, look carefully to your ballot and be sure you don't cast it into the box unless the names of Elmore A. Pierce and Henry G. Kittredge are on it.

VOTE EARLY.

It is never safe to postpone the duty of casting one ballot until afternoon. The old adage says: "there's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," and if one puts off voting until the after part of the day he is never sure that his ballot will get into the box.

It is dangerous to thus put it off.

Many things are liable to happen to prevent one from voting, and the danger is increased by postponing it till towards night.

Brethren, go to the polls the first thing you do after breakfast next Tuesday morning and deposit your ballot that it may be sure to count for the Republican ticket and good government.

Brethren, don't wait until you come out from Boston before you vote, but vote before you go in, then you will enjoy all day the consciousness of having performed your duty as good citizens, and be happy.

THE STATE TICKET.

Every one of the men chosen by the Republicans to fill the State offices from Gov. Brackett down is absolutely certain of being elected if he lives until next Tuesday comes around. Death is the only contingency that can possibly happen to prevent it.

Nevertheless it behooves the Republicans to go to the polls and vote the straight ticket and thus swell the Republican majority in the State to its utmost dimensions.

☞ Capt. E. F. Wyer commands the respect of everybody for his ability and honesty, by which token the size of his vote will be a surprise to Felch and his friends.

☞ Pierce is a very popular gentleman in Woburn, and Kittredge is a very popular gentleman in Reading. That means their election.

☞ Mr. Kittredge will poll more than a party vote in Reading and will make a strong pull on Woburn.

☞ Just watch and see how much less Felch's vote will be this year than Mr. James Skinner's was last.

— Mr. Benjamin Champney and wife will return to their winter home in this city from their summer one at North Conway on next Monday. Miss Alice Champney came back last Saturday.

— Property left in the hands of E. J. Gregory for sale is always faithfully attended to and sold at good advantage. A few days ago he sold the C. H. Svenson property for $2,800, a big advance.

— The Woburn Woman's Club will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 7, at 3 P. M. Miss O. M. E. Rowe of the Boston City Hospital will lecture on "The Heredity of Character and Ability."

— The farmers are taking especial interest in the election of Capt Wyer. Out in the central and western part of the District the Captain will get a big vote (as well as at home)—more than a party vote by considerable.

— The anniversary of the Battle of Five Forks will be duly observed by Post 33 G. A. R., on Nov. 5 next. Col. Porter, Mayor of Quincy, will deliver the address which will be followed by appropriate exercises.

— Hoar will not get over two-thirds of the Democratic vote of this city for Congress, if old, level-headed Democrats know what they are talking about. Democratic candidates who wear kid gloves never command the whole strength of the party.

— Messrs. W. H. Smith & Co., real estate dealers in Woburn and Boston, have a notice of sale in the JOURNAL to-day to which we call attention. The auction will take place to-morrow afnoon when a large amount of personal property will be disposed of.

— The Woburn Democracy propose to spread themselves to-morrow night at Lyceum Hall. The speakers are to be Shermy Hoar, who imagines he is running for Congress against Capt. Fox, Micheal J. McEttrick and Thomas B. Hevey. It will probably be a big time—in a horn.

— Evening schools in this city will re-open on Monday, Nov. 10. The fostering care of Supt. Richardson with the employment of peculiarly competent teachers have brought these schools up to a point of proficiency where they have become a strong educational agency in this city.

— The Boston Globe publishes on every Monday morning the sermons of various clergymen on the day before, and last Monday it devoted considera-space to that of Rev. D. D. Winn of the Baptist Church, this city, who spoke on "Crime and Criminals." It was an able sermon well reported.

— We were premature in our statement last week that Mr. O'Neil of Boston had taken the management of the City Press, and that Mr. Conn was to take an Editorial Chair on the same. However, there are changes going on in the management of that paper and all we can do is wait developments.

— Mr. George Clarke, a member of the famous Ruggles Street (Boston) Quartette, has, through Mr. John I. Munroe's popular real estate agency, bought the Russell Duren farm in Ward 7, this city, and will make it his future summer home. Mr. Clarke is the kind of emigrants Woburn warmly welcomes.

— A splendid present for an invalid or aged person is on of the great Easy Chairs, with fendered sides to shut off all draughts of air, and broadly cushioned arms and shaped back. There is a fine chair of this description now being sold at a very low price by Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston.

— Capt Ed. Wyer was born and raised in Woburn; Felch is a recent comer. Capt Wyer feels an interest and pride in his native place: all Felch cares for Woburn people is to make as much out of them as he can, and get political honors if possible. For the latter this isn't his year. He'll have to wait.

— The ball given by Clan McKinnon last Friday evening turned out to be a gratifying surprise to the managers and the Clan generally. And well it might considering the weather. The concert which preceded the ball was a fine one, everything passed off in the very best of shape, and everybody was well pleased.

— Fitz & Stanley, proprietors of the popular Boston Branch, have got in a big supply of Thanksgiving goods in all the varieties of nice things that can be mentioned. This firm are famous for the fine quality of their groceries and the low prices which prevail. Good housewives, read what Fitz & Stanley have to say in the JOURNAL this week.

— John I. Munroe has recently sold four farms ranging from 25 to 200 acres — two in Woburn, one in Winchester, and one in Burlington, to business men in Boston — realizing good prices. Those having any kind of property to sell, or let, will do well to consult him as he gives special attention to the management and negotiation of Real Estate.

— Our friend, Mr. Albert A. Clement, is making a visit to his native town Warren, N.H., where he spent the early part of his boyhood in catching fish and hoeing potatoes. Warren is one of the most beautiful towns in New Hampshire and is situated at the base of Mooshillock, which was visited this summer by one of Woburn's famous school- teachers.

— The Foresters have laid things out for the largest and best ball they have ever given in Woburn. It will be held in Music Hall on Friday evening, Nov. 7. Calnan's Orchestra will furnish the music, with J. R. Thomas as Prompter. The price of tickets is only $1. From all accounts this annual Ball of the Foresters is to be a very grand social affair.

— About the best place in this city at which to spend a pleasant evening hour is at the Republican Headquarters in the National Bank Block. At the Rooms may be met many prominent Republicans, pleasant gentlemen, and information can always be gained there respecting local political affairs. The Headquarters will be open every evening until the charter election.

— City Clerk D. F. Moreland addressed a large meeting in St. Mary's Hall in Lynn last Tuesday evening on political themes. The Lynn reporter of the Boston Globe said that "David F. Moreland was received with cheers." If he had discharged his duty faithfully and conscientiously he would have told his deluded hearers that Dr. Everett can't whip one side of Cabot Lodge in the Congressional contest over in the Sixth, and that the best thing they conld do next Tuesday would be to vote for Lodge and make his election unanimous.

— This city did fairly well in registering for the November election, although they might have done a hundred or two better without straining a nerve very much either. The condition of things at 10 o'clock, P.M. last Saturday, when registration closed, was as follows: 421 names were dropped and 434 added. The total registration in 2640, as against 2627 last year.

— The Woburn conference held their quarterly meeting at No. Reading last Tuesday in the Congregational Church. The programme published in the JOURNAL last week was carried out. The banquet and social intercourse were not among the least of the pleasures of the occasion. A full barge load went over to the meeting from the First Congregational Church in this city.

— Rev. Dr. March, of Woburn, will deliver the address before the Winchester Auxiliary of the McAll Mission at its annual meeting to be held in the Congregational church, on Sunday evening Nov. 20, at 7 o'clock. A very rich treat will be expected by all who know of Dr. March's thorough acquaintance with missions, and felicity and ability as a speaker.—Winchester Star.

— Republicans, look sharp and do not misplace the Xs on your ballots next Tuesday. Be sure that one is made opposite the name of Brackett, Fox, Wyer, Pierce, Kittredge. Of course you are expected to vote the whole Republican ticket. but Woburn wants to see Brackett, Fox, Wyer, Pierce and Kittredge go out of this city with a majority that will be an eye-opener to the Democracy.

— Can't something be done to stay the ravages of the hen thieves? They are on the rampage and within a fortnight or so several owners over towards Reading and near Montvale and at Winchester Highlands have had a great many valuable fowl stolen in the night time, and still no clue has been discovered leading to the thieves. Sheep-stealing is an honorable employment compared to robbing hens-roosts.

— At a recent election of the Unitarian Club of this city the following officers were elected for the year then ensuing: President, Julius F. Ramsdell; Vice Presidents, Col. William T. Grammer, Herbert B. Dow, Hon. Edward D. Hayden, John I. Munroe, Edward B. Parkhurst; Treasurer, Henry C. Hall; Collector, Daniel H. Richards; Recording Secretary, Chas. W. Bryant; Corresponding Secretary, Marcellus Littlefield.

— And now Rev. Hugh Montgomery, pastor of the M. E. church and champion temperance man among us, wears his buckthorn cane as well as the rest of us. His friends had a fine buckthorn straight from the bogs handsomely mounted in gold and then presented it to the pastor in token of the high esteem in which he is held by his church-people, temperance folks, and citizens. Being an Irishman Mr. Montgomery cherishes his handsome buckthorn.

— It looks as though the Woburn Democracy are turning the cold shoulder to Candidate Felch. Last week the City Press "damned him with faint praise," and an exhaustive search this week by our reporter has resulted in a total failure to find Mr. Felch's name on any of the Democratic posters or dodgers so plentifully flying about the streets. We greatly fear that Mr. Felch will fail to receive a full party vote in this city. The managers are not working for him very much.

— Mr. Walter O. Bacon of Canal street in this city has been in the employ of Chickering & Son, the famous piano makers, at their Boston establishment, for 17 years, the last 10 of them as confidential business man. Fidelity to the interests of his employers and capability have brought him a gratifying promotion and next week he goes to take an important position in their New York establishment. Mr. Bacon will, of course, make his home at New York hereafter.

— Inspector Andrew Houghton, of Boston, accompanied by Lieut Daley and others, came out to Woburn yesterday evening and formally presented to the survivors of Co. K, 39th volunteers, the headboard which for 25 years past marked the grave of his brother, Edward J. Houghton, in the Norfolk Naval cemetery. The presentation took place in Burbank Hall. Capt Tidd received the relic, on behalf of the comrades of Post 33. The board has been polished, framed and suitably inscribed.

— Johnny Kelley, son of John Kelley and grandson of Mr. Michael Kelley of Everett street, this city, who lives with his maternal relatives at Lynn, was playing on the street in that city last Tuesday evening when he was struck by a horse and run over. The little fellow's left arm was broken in three places and a gash was cut in his forehead. Drs. Meader and Morse were called. It is thought that the boy may lose the use of his arm. Five stitches were taken to close the gap in his forehead.

— The October number of "The University Magazine," N.Y., has for its frontispiece a very finely engraved portrait of "Ephriam Cutter, M. D., LL.D., F.S.Sc." as the line underneath the picture reads. On 368 and following pages of this same number is a comprehensive biographical sketch of Dr. Cutter by William Ludden, which gives his advent into this stormy, contending world as having taken place at Woburn, Mass., in 1832. Dr. Cutter stands in the front ranks of scientists not only in America but in Europe.

— Mr. Charles F. Kelley of New York City, son of Mr. Joseph Kelley of Church street, in this city, has been visiting family and friends here this week and will leave to-day for home. It was nearly seven years ago that Mr. Kelley left the Boston Postoffice and engaged with a prominent hardware firm in N. Y., with which house he has remained ever since. He has however made very satisfactory arrangements with Charles J. Healy, a prominent cutlers dealer at 106 Chambers street, N. Y., and will take charge of his large establishment to-morrow. Mr. Kelley is a good business man who believes that in dollars and cents (to say nothing about any higher reward), "honesty is the best policy." Good luck to him.

— On the first page of this issue of the JOURNAL is printed "Woburn's First Lawyer" which, we have no doubt, will prove interesting to many people in this city, by whom it should be preserved. It cost considerable time and research to get the facts embodied in the paper, but the labor was well rewarded in bringing to light so much of Lawyer Bartlett's eventful career and so many of the eccentricities of his character. Woburn lawyers will doubtless prize this sketch of the life of their forerunner with deep interest.

— Go slow, boys! Not too slow—but just slow enough, you know. This is Halloween—quite a superfluous announcement no doubt so far as you boys are concerned—quite; but the announcement is here made for the benefit of those who may possibly—just barely possible, you know—want to save their front gates and things to-night. Careful there, lads: don't carry the fun too far—just far enough for fun, and not quite far enough for shotguns. You understand—clean to the outer edge of fun, but still within the bounds of propriety and good breeding. Lots of fun, boys, but no serious devilry.

— "The Middlesex Investment Company of Manchester, N. H.," is the name of a new enterprise that has recently been started in this city and just begun to do business. We shall have more to say about it hereafter. The Home office is at Manchester, N.H., and the General Agency is established at 387 Main street in this city. Its officers are: President, Benjamin A. Tripp; Vice-President, Charles E. Tripp; Treasurer, Charles H. Kimball; Secretary, Horace N. Conn; Clerk, George W. Cook. This seems to be an institution based on correct principles, and it certainly would not have the countenance and support of the above named gentlemen were it not an honest enterprise.

— The monthly meeting of the Managers of the Home for Aged Women will be held Tuesday, Nov. 4. It is very desirable that all should be present as some important matters will be discussed. The friends of this Institution will remember October is the month the yearly subscription of one dollar is due, all who are not personally solicited are requeeted very earnesly to hand the amount to the collector, Mrs. Sullivan Simonds, who may be found at the residence of Dr. Chalmers on Pleasant street. As the support of the Home should interest all alike, do not, we beg of you, require ladies already burdened with many duties to wait upon you at your homes for this small amount.—X.

— It stands everybody in hand to attend the Fair of the Daughters of Rebekah, I. O. O. F., at Lyceum Hall this evening and see who gets the prizes. It will be an exciting season. Mrs. Hovey has charge of the floral decorations which means that they will be fine. There are all kinds of "tables"—a real good chance to spend all the money one has a mind to and get his mouey's worth every time. The Past Grand badge which has been on exhibition in one of the big show windows of Mr. C. M. Munroe's popular clothing store, 423 Main street, all the week. There will be dead loads of genuine fun at the Fair on this (Friday) the closing night. Go early, gentlemen and ladies, and "get the best." The Fair will be open this (Friday) afternoon and between 2 and 4 o'clock the great Baby Show will take place. Nobody will want to miss the Baby Show. Go early.

— Mr. Alfred H. Fisher who carries on the harness business in the JOURNAL building, with his wife and child, left here last Monday week for No. Carolina where he has considerable property in real estate left him on the death of the widow of the man by whom he was raised. He went South last spring and made his right to the property secure and has gone this time to look after it. In his youth Mr. Fisher was legally adopted by a citizen of Cape Cod who many years ago settled in the South at a place called Southern Pines in N. C., where some time ago he died leaving a widow. She also died not long since and by process of law her estate fell to Mr. Fisher by virtue of heirship. The administrator of the woman came across the adoption papers, and just here is where Mr. Fisher comes in. The administrator would take no action on the will until Fisher was found, if he was alive, and after some little correspondence he was discovered in this city.

Are You Sure You Do?

Do you know a good thing when you see or hear about it? If you do you are wise beyond the average of your generation. Some, you know, plod along in the olden ruts of work and worry, keeping house on the old-fashioned plan—that employing much bone, sinew and muscle—but others there are who have modern ways. For instance, they use Brussels soap and save much labor. It's economical.

He Knows Nothing Derogatory.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Hon. Chester W. Kingsly of Cambridge, addressed to Mr. Starbuck, Editor of the Waltham Free Press, and President of the Suburban Press Association:

"I know nothing derogatory to the character of Capt. Fox as a candidate for Congress. He was elected mayor of our city four consecutive years, and of course failed to please everybody. He is a Republican and a nominee of the Republican party. So far as I can see the only vital question to be settled in deciding whether to support him or not is this—shall we have as our Representative one who will support the administration in its work of this session so well begun, or a Democrat who will do just the contrary? * * * * I hope all Republicans will unite and elect our candidate, sinking all minor matters in considering the greatest matter of good, honest governmeut, north, south, east and west."

A Card.

We embrace this time and method to return our sincere thanks to Posts 33 and 161, and Relief Corps 83 and 84, for their beautiful floral tributes at the funeral of our father, Mr. William B. Harris.

MR. AND MRS. C. H. MENTZER.

Would most respectfully announce to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the production at the Lyceum Hall, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, November 5 and 6, of that new and Charming Comic Opera, Priscilla, which has made such an instantaneous hit wherever produced. The costumes and appointments will be the same as will be used at the Boston performance the coming season, special scenery and other accessories. The chorus will be made up of about 30 of the principal singers of Woburn. Mr. W. H. Dodd of Boston will assume the role of Hatebad Higgins and will also have direction of the stage. No pains will be spared to make this event one of the most noteworthy in the amusement annals of Woburn. Notwithstanding the large expense in bringing this opera out in first-class shape, popular prices will prevail. The sale of seats will open at the Box Office of Lyceum Hall on Friday evening, Oct. 31, at 7.30. After that date tickets will be on sale at Horton's Bookstore and Leeds's Drug Store. Out-of-town parties can secure seats by mail or telegraph. Price of tickets 35, 50 and 75 cents.

The Men's meeting at 4 P. M. Will be reports from the State Convention. Mr. W. W. Hill in charge.

Ladies Auxiliary met last Tuesday afternoon and held one of the best meetings that has ever been held. Ladies from No. Woburn were present. Afternoon tea was served at 4.30.

At 8 o'clock on Monday evening, Nov. 3, all who desire to join the Vocal Class, whether members of the Association or not, are invited to meet in Concert Hall, when Prof. Russell will be present to explain what work is to be done.

Rehearsals are in progress on a Cantata, for solo voices, choruses and orchestra. It is founded on Longfellow's poem. Mr. James Kimball has the musical part of the programme in charge, assisted by the Woburn Orchestra and the Ladies Schumann Quartette and others. Mr. Morse of Mansfield will with the stereopticon illustrate the Cantata on canvas. This is to take place December 4th 1890.

A PREDICTION.

That great aspirant, William Russell,
Has made a most tremendous tussel,
And wrought till he can work no more
To be elected Governor.
But all his efforts will be vain,
He can't that position gain,
The Democrats can't elect him,
Republicans they will reject him
And send him where he was before
His sad misfortune to deplore.

A VOTER.

Scrofula

Is the most ancient and most general of all diseases. Scarcely a family is entirely free from it, while thousands everywhere are its suffering slaves. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had remarkable success in curing every form of scrofula. The most severe and painful running sores, swellings in the neck or goitre, humor in the eyes, causing partial or total blindness, yield to the powerful effects of this medicine. It thoroughly removes every impurity from the blood.

Scrofula

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had 7 running scrofula sores. One physician advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. When we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, a marked improvement was noticed and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy." B. C. JONES, Alma, Lincoln County, Me.

The Woburn "Laddies."

Close on to 5000 people witnessed the firemens exhibition last Tuesday evening. For an hour before it came off the principal streets were lined with men, women and children anxious to see the sight. It was a merit trial of the various companies by the Engineers, and as such it was successful.

Mayor Johnson pulled box 62 on the corner of Main and Park streets at 7 o'clock, P. M. and two minutes later the companies were scampering like whiteheads for their respective hydrants assigned by the Board. The first alarm brought out the following companies: Hose 1, hydrant at flagstaff on common; time, 1m. 16s. First water, 59s.; second water, 1m. 29s. after arriving at hydrant. One hundred feet of hose was used. Hose 5, hydrant at Orthodox church; time, 2m. 20s. Water on first line, 1m. 15s. In this case first water came through the second line of hose. Hose 6, hydrant at Savings Bank building, 4m. 27s.; first water, 1m. 58s.; second water, 2m. 11s. In each of the above cases 100 feet of hose was laid. Hook and ladder truck No. 1, reached the City Hall, got a ladder on the building and a man at the top of it in 4 minutes.

The general alarm mustered in double-quick time Hose 2, hydrant at corner of Main and Walnut streets: time, 9m. 55s. and water on in 1m. through 450 feet of hose. Hose 3, hydrant at public library; time, 6m. 38s. and first water in 2s. through 650 feet of hose. Hose 4, hydrant at Dow's block, Main street; time, 8m. 45s. from the second line of hose, through 550 feet of hose. A test was made of adding a piece of hose and the time was as follows: Hose 1, 1m.; hose 2, 55s.; hose 3, 45s.; hose 4, 48s.; hose 5, 50s.; hose 6, 65s. The streams singly and nine at once were highly satisfactory, the pressure being about 65 pounds. Even when nine streams were thrown any one of them would have reached the top story of the highest building.

The exhibition demonstrated the fact very clearly that Woburn may well feel proud of her Fire Department. As a working display the affair was a splendid success. Mayor Johnson and the Board of Fire Engineers were highly pleased with it.

The subsequent banquet in Hook & Ladder Hall, prepared by Tufts, the famous Boston caterer, was highly enjoyed by the firemen and their guests. Chief Ferrin presided. Some of the guests of the Board were Mayor Johnson, Aldermen Kenney and Kendall, Councilmen Emery, Shaw and McGowan, ex-Chief Engineer Perham, ex-Assistants Poole and Devlin, Water Registrar Albert P. Barrett, Clerk of Council Lounsbury, Capt. E. F. Wyer, William P. Cutler, A. C. Symmes of New Bedford and others.

The principal speakers were Mayor Johnson, Prof. Elmore A. Pierce, Capt. E. F. Wyer, ex-Chief Perham, Water Registrar A. P. Barrett, Colonel Charles K. Conn, Councilman McGowan, Mr. Emery and others.

To spend $500 in raising and training a horse and then to have him win only a $10 race is like trying to economize by using any other soap than Brussels.

It Was a Great Meeting.

The Republican Rally at Lyceum Hall last Saturday evening was a rouser in every sense of the word.

The great hall including the galleries was filled with one of the best looking and most intelligent audiences that ever assembled at a political meeting in this place.

Hon. B. F. Whittemore, Chairman of the sub-Congressional Committee, introduced Senator George F. Hoar, and subsequently Capt. James A. Fox, candidate for the U. S. House of Representatives, and Capt. Patrick D. Conlon, in words that were patriotic to the core, and brought out shouts of applause that made the rafters of the building tremble. Nobody can do these things in finer style than Hon. B. F. Whittemore, and he was at his best on Saturday evening.

Hon. E. D. Hayden, ex-Congressman from this District, was advertised to preside at the Grand Rally but business called him to New York City and he could not get back in season to occupy the Chair on that very notable occasion.

The Woburn Brass Band discoursed the livliest and best of music in the street and hall and contributed largely to the interest and pleasure of the occasion.

Senator Hoar was the first speaker. He laid down sound Republican law and gospel in good style. He has a brain and tongue capable of great oratorical successes. He is clear in his ideas and logical; his language is clean-cut; he argues convincingly; he captivates the understanding instead of charming the ear with his rhetoric; and when he gets through his audience seem to feel as though they have been listening to things from the tongue of one in authority. Senator Hoar is a great man.

A large number of prominent citizens occupied seats on the platform. We have not space to name them all, but there were Jacob Brown, Esq., Rev. Hugh Montgomery, Hon. J. G. Pollard, Chairman E. F. Wyer of the Ward and City Committee, Mr. Fred J. Brown, Clerk of the same Committee, Judge Charles D. Adams, Alva S. Woods, Esq., Hon. John M. Harlow, Councilman P. McGowan, E. E. Thompson, Esq., W. N. Titus, Esq., Prof. Elmore A. Pierce, Charles F. Spear, Esq., and others.

When Capt. James A. Fox stepped to the front of the stage in compliance with Mr. Whittemore's graceful introduction he was greeted with the wildest cheers, proving beyond a peradventure that there were chords under many waistcoats there from which just the sight of our next Congressman called forth quick and generous greetings. When quiet was restored Capt. Fox launched out into one of the best speeches that have been made this campaign. He is a pleasant, effective stump orator and commands the strictest of attention while speaking. He left a very favorable impression on the minds of his audience both as to the matter and manner of his address, and there can be no doubt but that his appearance and oratory added many to his long list of warm political friends in this city.

Capt. Patrick D. Conlon wound up the speech-making of the evening. Truly it might have been said that "the best of the wine was kept for the last of the feast," for the Captain's speech was a big one. It was emphatically a vote-making effort, and there wasn't an ear in that great Hall which did not strain itself to the utmost to catch every word that fell from the eloquent speaker's lips. He took the house by storm and the general regret was expressed that the time allotted to Capt. Conlon was altogether too brief.

The quality of shoes is truly the essential thing, as is well said in Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom's advertisement in this week's paper. A thorough reading of their advertisement will save money for every purchaser of shoes, as their mailing facilities are such that they send shoes everywhere and guarantee the fit of them.

The dietary of an invalid differs materially from that of a person in robust health. He needs light, nutritious food, and it is essential that besides being nutritious it shall be easy of digestion. Mellin's Food is very nourishing and is assimilated as soon as taken into the stomach.

The Bishop Preached.

Last Sunday was held the opening service in the new Methodist Episcopal Church. The sermon by Bishop Foster was eloquent and practical. A large audience gave earnest attention. The following is a brief outline:

The text consists of two passages, one in doctrine and one in spirit; one from the Old Testament and one from the New.

The one from the Old Testament is found in Proverbs, Chap. III. 27th verse: "Withhold not good from them to whom it is due when it is in the power of thine hand to do it." It is the nature of a command, a negative sort of command.

The second is found in Galatians, Chap. VI. 10th verse: "As we have therefore opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

You will observe in both of these passages the same idea, that believers should be engaged in doing good. The first enjoins that we should not withhold good when it is in the power of our hand to do it. There is a limitation in this, which is very broad. It covers our ability. We should do good when its fulfilment lies in our power. It would seem to some people that they might be excused from doing it. The idea they might have of some, is, that they were unworthy and undeserving, and that they ought not to do good to them that give offence but only to those who deserve it. If God acted upon this principle what would become of us? He does not give unto those who deserve it only, but causes the sun to shine upon the just and the unjust giving blessings unto all men so far as they will receive.

One man attaches great importance to the external observance of his church. His religion largely consists in observing the external laws of the ritual of his church. He makes great account of the fidelity to the services of the church. He would consider himself very blameworthy as he would be, if he did not strictly attend to the so called means of instruction furnished by his church.

Another man is not particularly strong in in that line; he does not attend the services regularly; he does not feel under strong obligation in that way. He is intense in his sense of obligation to obtain an honorable and honest character. External morality is but the essence of religion.

Still another differs from both of these. He wants his heart to be right; he separates that of the world from things of God.

Another differs from all of these. He wants to have his creed right, wants to have his faith right.

So these different forms of Christian phases of Christian character turn up in every community.

In every true Christian character, in every fully developed man and woman, all these things which just mentioned, are brought together in perfect unity and harmony.

So far as is possible this enlightened and well developed Christian attaches great importance to the services of the house of God. He knows there is a strict connection between what a man believes and what he does. It is the inward faith of the man that expresses itself in his outward life. It is not difficult to tell what the nature of a man is, when you know him outwardly.

When we go to church we think the church is to make us happy. We have an idea that when we come home after going to church, if the sermon has not lifted us up and made us feel more happy and comfortable it is a lost day. It is not the most profitable sermons that make us feel the most delicious. You know sometimes if a preacher will tell a touching story, making us cry, we feel that we are happy but we are no better, we do not add anything to our spiritual condition. It does not prove that we are over righteous. A sinner cries just as easy as a saint.

If you should judge his righteous state by his emotions, why! he would be as righteous as any of us.

The sermon that is important to us is the one that makes think, makes us determine to live aright. It is the doctrine that comes from the pulpit to settle us in a purpose to reach a high and noble standard of character that goes with us home, makes home right, makes every day right. That is the kind of a sermon we want. Several illustrations were given and many grand truths uttered that can not be given through want of space. He closed with a most earnest appeal to all present that they might realize "the path of life" as a road but once travelled therefore to be passed over with great care and faithfulness so that none might desire to live their life over but with joyous expectation go on to hear the welcome, "Well done thou good and faithful servant enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Boston Theatres.

Only a few more performances of Mme. Angot will be given at the Globe Theatre. The production has met with unqualified and well-deserved favor, and has added another success to the New York Casino company's long list of Boston winnings and to the able management of the Globe.

Offenbach's most popular opera will be produced at the Globe Theatre, commencing next Monday, Nov. 3. "The Grand Duchess" is to have all the splendor of the New York Casino production, with D'Arville, Halton and and others of the metropolitan cast. Seats are now on sale at the box office. This is one grandest plays ever seen at the Globe and will doubtless draw immense audiences each evening.

ABOUT SHOES.

Quality is the essential thing in Shoes.

The quality of mercy is not ever strained half as much as the quality of Shoes.

They should therefore be made of the best of leather, tough and firm.

Carefully sewed with linen thread.

Smooth finished without nails or tacks.

So shaped over common-sense lasts that they don't need "breaking in."

Have all leather soles.

We know our shoes will meet these requirements.

The price is as noteworthy as the quality of the shoes.

For Father, Splendid Seamless Congress or Lace,	$2.87
For Mother, French Dongola Kid, Button,	2.23
For Brother, Strong Seamless, Lace,	1.49
For Sister, Selected Goat, Regular or Spring Heel,	1.87

These are representative offers. We have Shoes of every style, quality, and price.

HOW TO ORDER BY MAIL.

Take a piece of paper, and standing upon it in stocking feet, trace around outside of your foot with pencil. The diagram will look something like this.

Send us this sketch, and we will, by return mail, quote you price for any quality shoe you desire, delivered free to you by mail, and guarantee the fit.

An Endowment Policy in this Company, issued under the new perfected non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts, provides for three most important things.

1st. It is a security to the beneficiaries in case of the early death of the assured.

2d. It makes a certain provision for the wants of one's older years.

3d. It provides a sum of money continually increasing in amount, that the policy-holder may at any time receive, should he be overtaken by misfortune and lose his property.

No business man can afford to do without the advantage that such a policy may be to himself if unfortunate in business; to his family in case of his early decease or as an endowment to himself at a time in life when, if he has no property, he will be poor indeed.

All classes Policies for any amount issued on this principle.

JESUS ACCUSED.

LESSON V, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 2.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxii, 54-71. Commit Verses 66-70—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 5—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

54. "Then took they Him, and led Him, and brought Him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off." John says that they took Him and bound Him, and led Him away to Annas first (John xviii, 12, 13). Matthew and Mark both say that then all the disciples forsook Him and fled, but John adds that Peter and another disciple (no doubt himself) afterward followed (Matt. xxvii, 56; Mark xiv, 50; John xviii, 15). When Jesus surrendered Himself to them He asked that the disciples might be allowed to go their way (John xviii, 8), but yet by their forsaking Him what became of their assertion that they would die with Him rather than deny Him (Mark xiv, 31)?

55. "And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them." This is surely a down grade. For a few verses now we leave our Lord in the hands of His captors, and consider Peter being sifted. And what a contrast between the disciple and his Master! The one faithful unto death, the other in the company of those who hated Him and were seeking His life.

56. "But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him and said, This man was also with Him." We are observed when we least think it, and by those whom we think see nothing. Let a person go from home, and being among strangers, and unknown (as he thinks), let him do the least thing that he would not do if at home, and it will surely be carried abroad and at some time brought home to him. But Peter was here accused of nothing wrong, he was simply pointed out by this maid as a follower of Jesus, and judging from his previous confessions in Matt. xvi, 16; John vi, 68, 69, we would have expected him to stand by his colors and rejoice to own Jesus as his Lord. But he was alone now and in the midst of scoffers. How have you acted under similar circumstances?

57. "And he denied Him, saying, Woman, I know Him not." Did you act that way when you found yourself among the scoffers? Or if you did not openly say that you were not a Christian, did your silence when He was ridiculed, or the Bible sneered at, give consent? Or do you always by word and deed proclaim yourself on the Lord's side?

58. "And after a little while another saw him and said, Thou art also one of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not." Another opportunity of confessing Christ is given to this poor erring man, but again he loses it and adds sin to sin.

59. "And about the space of one hour after another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with Him, for he is a Galilean."

60. "And Peter said, Man I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew." Matthew says that he now began to curse and swear (Matt. xxvi, 74). What a sink of iniquity is the heart of man! How desperately wicked!

61. "And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how He had said unto him, Before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice." The Lord had seen and heard it all, and no doubt it grieved Him to His heart, and Peter had added to His much sorrow, but He loved His sinning one through it all, and this look now turned upon him must have been full of tenderest love, mingled with deepest sadness.

62. "And Peter went out and wept bitterly." That loving look pierced his heart and brought him to his senses.

63. "And the men that held Jesus mocked Him and smote Him." We now turn from Peter, who failed, to Peter's Lord, who faileth never. Peter they only spoke to and accused of being with Jesus; but Jesus they mock and even smite.

64. "And when they had blindfolded Him they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophesy, who is it that smote thee?" Lose not sight of the fact that this ill-treated one is God manifest in the flesh. The Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, the mighty one of Jacob, the only Redeemer of men, and thus is His treatment from those whom He came to save. Not for Israel only did He suffer thus, but for you too, dear reader, and for every scholar in your class.

65. "And many other things blasphemously spake they against Him." Buffeted, mocked, spoken against, but He fails not.

66. "And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priests and the scribes came together, and led Him unto their council." The fearful night had passed and the more fearful day had come.

67, 68. "Art thou the Christ? tell us. And He said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe; and if I also ask you, ye will not answer me nor let me go." He knew that they meant to kill Him, and that their question was an idle one. He knew that His hour had come to be offered up, and that this was the way to the cross.

69. "Hereafter shall the Son of Man sit on the right hand of the power of God." Matthew adds, "And come in the clouds of heaven" (xxvi, 64). He has not yet been brought before the Roman governor. He has been before Annas and Caiaphas, and now He is still before the Jewish council, and He reminds them of the words of their prophet Daniel (vii, 13) concerning the coming of the Son of Man in glory.

70. "Then said they all, Art Thou then the Son of God? And He said unto them, Ye say that I am." He acknowledges that it is even so. He is the Son of Man and the Son of God, the Divine human Messiah, the God man to sit in due time on David's throne. He has by word and deed proved Himself to be the one foretold by the prophets, and now they are by their conduct fulfilling other prophecies concerning Him, as Peter afterward told them on the day of Pentecost (Acts ii, 22, 23). They will not believe it now, but some will later, and many never. Whosoever will may. All unbelievers must perish.

71. "And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth." So because He said He was what He truly was, and what God the Father had on two occasions said from heaven that He was (Matt. iii, 17; xvii, 5), He has in their judgment committed an unpardonable sin and must be put to death. Well, let us not wonder if to this day the wrong is often uppermost and right goes to the wall; it will be so till He come. But let us overcome by the Blood of the Lamb and by the word of our testimony, not loving our lives unto the death.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store.

VIRTUE IN CEDAR BLOCKS.

An Impecunious Traveler Had Them in His Valise, But the Veteran Caught On.

A well dressed stranger walked briskly into the Tremont house one morning, placed a large valise on the desk and his name on the register. The veteran Cobb assigned him a room, but it was noticed that the clerk followed him with his eyes until he was lost to sight, and then, if the brown study into which he plunged was an indication, he continued the chase mentally. Then he turned to his French assistant, Mike O'Brien.

"Mike," he said, "I have suspicions of that man who just registered."

"Indeed," quoth Mike. "And why, pray? He certainly appeared all right."

"Ah, perhaps to you, my boy, perhaps to you," the veteran responded, "but when you have been in the hotel business for the best part of half a century you will have become suspicious of any man who takes the trouble to place a heavy valise on a desk instead of setting it on the floor, as would be most natural and easy to do. Now, that man put his valise on the counter, and therefore I am suspicious."

M. O'Brien has an infinite respect for the veteran's opinion, and he confessed that in this instance in particular his opinion was well founded.

"In fact," he said, "I had a queer kind of feeling myself pass through me when he registered. I didn't know what it was at first, but now I know it must have been a suspicion."

A little later, when the veteran had made up his mind that the proper thing to do would be to demand payment in advance the housekeeper asked him to step to the new comer's room. He did so, and found lying open on the bed the valise where the housekeeper, entering the room to see if it was in order, had found it. In one side was a linen duster, a pair of soiled collars and cuffs; in the other side four large cedar blocks, presumably to give it weight. With feelings of mingled wrath and self congratulation the veteran returned to the office, where the guest in question after finishing his breakfast appeared.

"One moment, please," Veteran Cobb said to him as the guest laid his key on the desk and started to depart. "It is customary for strangers stopping here without baggage to pay in advance."

"But I have baggage," the stranger said without turning a shade. "My valise; you saw it when I came in."

"Pardon me, you are right," said Mr. Cobb blandly. "But permit me to ask what you have in it."

"My clothes."

"Your wardrobe is extensive," rather sarcastic like. "By the way, what are the cedar blocks for?" asked Mr. Cobb, by way of a settler. But the stranger wasn't settled, neither did he settle, for looking his interrogator in the eye he replied: "Oh, they are to keep the moths out. Cedar's great for that," and before Mr. Cobb could recover from his astonishment lit a cigar and walked out of the hotel.—Chicago Post.

Catching Gold Fish.

The Ford-Whistler quarrel called forth in a club cafe half a dozen good stories about Whistler. One concerned an amusing performance of his in Florence. He and a brother artist were lodging together on a high floor of a big house, and just below their windows were those of the landlady's apartments. One morning Whistler discovered a jar with gold fish setting in one of the windows below, and he at once announced his intention of going a-fishing. Baiting a pin with a bit of bread crust, he deftly lowered it into the bowl and soon landed a fish.

The operation was repeated until all the fish had been caught, and then Whistler proceeded to cook them just as they were. The first taste of the fish was enough for both artists, however, and Whistler quietly lowered them all back into the bowl. On Whistler's return from a day's outing that evening the landlady gravely informed him that the sun had been so extraordinarily hot during the day that her gold fish were actually boiled to death in their bowl. How the good woman accounted for the appearance of the fish that the artist had tasted Whistler does not explain.—New York Star.

A Famous Criminal Lawyer.

A little man, say 5 feet 4 inches, with his head set well back on his shoulders, is Abe Hummel, of the law firm of Howe & Hummel. He has been excessively caricatured in New York papers, but he is a good deal better looking than his pictures. His name is the most Hebraic thing about him. His heavy mustache is blonde and his eyes are brown. He dresses very plainly in gray, and shows almost no jewelry. Twenty years ago Hummel was an alert newspaper man and picked up news about the police courts. Now he is the junior of the law firm most frequently mentioned in New York papers. Howe & Hummel have the pick of the big divorce cases. The criminal calendar is their meat. All of the about town people of prominence who get into trouble go to them.—Saratoga Letter.

A Valuable Discovery

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted with serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers eveywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, of Knightstown, Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles' New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

Blue or brown for the street dress, black for the jacket and prune or magenta millinery is the law of color among ladies' tailors.

Catarrh indicates impure blood, and to cure it, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies the blood. Sold by all druggists.

TOM CRUSE'S CAREER.

A Story That Illustrates the Ups and Downs of Western Life.

The history of the thrice millionaire banker of Helena, Mont., Thomas Cruse, illustrates the ups and downs of western life, and sets in strong contrast the two extremes of absolute, groveling poverty and extraordinary affluence.

"Six years ago Tom Cruse," says Thomas M. Long, "was only a common, ordinary laborer, a prospector and a miner. He had spent almost his last nickel, was out of luck, and being out of money it naturally followed he had very few friends. Indeed he was so poor that I well remember the day when he was actually refused credit for a fifty pound sack of flour. He did odd jobs about town—anything so long as he turned an honest dollar. One day he took a tramp into the mountains. When he came back to town he astonished everybody by reporting the discovery of what turned out to be one of the richest silver mines in Montana.

"He pre-empted the place and made everything solid in his own name. This mine was the famous Drum Lummond, in the mountains near Maysville, twenty-one miles from Helena. A syndicate of capitalists hearing of his great find went out to investigate it. The result far surpassed even their expectations, and on their way back to town they sought old man Cruse. Would he sell the mine? Yes. How much? Five hundred thousand dollars, spot cash. That was too much, they thought. 'Well, gentlemen, if you think it is too much don't take it,' said Cruse. 'This offer is good until noon, but no longer. I'll have another price on it after that.' They thought he was bluffing. The next day, after further investigation, they came back to Cruse. They told the old man they were ready to pay the $500,000, and for him to draw up the papers.

"'My price today is $1,000,000, boys,' said Cruse. Of course there was no deal possible under the circumstances. Cruse could then get all the capital he wanted to work his mine. Before three months had passed he had pulled out $200,000 worth of ore, and there was still unlimited quantities—millions, in fact—in sight. The syndicate came back to him and actually paid over $1,000,000 for a two-third interest in the Drum Lummond.

"Since that time Cruse has bought other mines, the Iron Mountain, for instance, in the Cœur d'Alene region, and others. He is worth today $5,000,000. He was married a couple of years ago, but his wife died, leaving him a child. 'Old Man' Cruse, as he is called, is a good old fellow, who delights now in talking about his hard times. When he came to Montana, six years ago, he walked all the way from Salt Lake City. That's the way fortune smiles sometimes."—Chicago Times.

Chicago's Mayor.

This story is told by The Chicago Post on Carter H. Harrison: One of "Our Carter's" characteristics is a smooth tongue and a cultivated mind. He can charm most people with the polish and variety of his conversation. He once attended a party given at the residence of a leading citizen, and was there introduced to a lady who did not catch his name. She enjoyed a half hour's conversation with Chicago's mayor immensely. After he had left her she asked a friend who had bowed to the gentleman: "Do tell me who that delightful gentleman is with whom I have been conversing. He is perfectly charming." Why, don't you know? That's Mayor Carter Harrison," replied the friend. "Is that really Carter Harrison?" she said. "Well, I declare that he looks and acts like a perfect gentleman. I thought from reading about him in the newspapers that he must be a highway robber and a thug."

An American Abroad.

Says an American in Lucerne: "There are seventeen old ladies from England at my hotel at Lucerne, and all of them wear white caps. As they sit all in a row at dinner they look like the pictures I have in memory of the assembled saints of old village quilting bees. All the well to do old ladies of England seem to revel in doing worsted work on the piazza of Swiss pensions. That young Englishman who sits opposite to me at table has Mark Twain at his tongue's end.

He thinks that the United States is distinguished mainly by having given birth to Mark Twain. There are two young girls at the Schweitzerhof who sing. One of them sings very well and the other thinks she sings very well; but there are those with whom her vocal pyrotechnics disagree. The great cross of the evening at the hotel is to have to sit for an hour and hypocritically applaud singing that contains no more melody than a fatal case of chronic bronchitis.

A Plague Among Bees.

A "nameless bee disease" has appeared during the last few years, and the bee keepers have had to lament not only depleted hives, but large numbers of diseased bees. The bees look black because of loss of hair, much as do robber bees, or old bees in the spring, and frequently make strange motions in front of the hives, as though dancing or in convulsions. The disease is supposed to be due to fungoid attack. The remedy is found in superseding the queen with a healthy one, and also in having a plentiful supply of salt water close to the hives, where the bees can gain ready access to it.—New York Telegram.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists. Sample bottle free.

FORCED TO DROP 100 FEET.

Four Workmen in Pittsburg Unwillingly Do the Brodie Act.

What might have resulted in a serious accident occurred to some workmen engaged in building the extension to the Smithfield street bridge. While the James G. Blaine was passing under the bridge, on her way up, her smokestacks came in contact with a platform which swung from the bottom of the bridge. Capt. Cook saw that the boat must strike the platform, and called to the pilot to sound the whistle. The men realized their dangerous position, and got off the platform and caught hold of an old iron bar which runs from pier to pier not a moment too soon, as the smokestack of the Blaine struck the obstruction as the last man stepped off the platform. One of the steamer's stacks was broken in two by the force of the collision, and the swinging platform snapped from its fastenings and fell to the water.

The four men remained hanging by their hands, their only means of rescue being to let go of the stringer and drop to the water below, nearly 100 feet. Several men were attracted, and pushed out skiffs to rescue them.

Finally one of the four was compelled to relinquish his hold through exhaustion, falling into the water. He disappeared beneath the water, arose again and tried to swim to the skiff, but before reaching it the little strength which he retained gave out and he sank. He arose for the second time, and the occupants of the skiff succeeded in catching hold of him and pulling him into the boat.

The poor fellow became unconscious, but the rescuers could not give their attention to him, as the other three workmen were still hanging to the iron bar. All three held on for dear life for fully ten minutes, when they could no longer retain their grasp, and one by one they fell to the water and were rescued by the men in the skiff, who were by this time re-enforced by another boat from the shore. The first man who fell soon recovered, and was taken ashore, where all three received medical attention on the Brownsville wharfboat. After resting awhile they were sufficiently strong to resume work again.

During the excitement a large crowd gathered on the shore and shouted at the men to do different things, which badly disconcerted them, and if they could have held to their positions a few moments longer they would have been rescued without getting a ducking. The workmen would not give their names, but say it is their own fault, as they should not have blocked the channel with the ladder.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Floated, but Died.

The story of the fat man who fell overboard in New York harbor and floated around for an hour or two until he was mistaken for a whale and towed to shore unhurt has set the old watermen and wharfmen all agog with reminiscent talk. They tell peculiar tales of happenings to fat men which have occurred under their eye, and in which they took a part.

John McClain, the veteran watchman on the Thomas Clyde pier, above Chestnut, told a number of incidents concerning the floating tendencies of fat men.

During the war Mr. McClain was a night watchman on the piers at Washington avenue. One dark night a government receiving vessel came up the river, and when it neared the Washington pier two sailors jumped overboard to make their escape. One was a gigantic fellow and the other a man of medium size.

Before jumping overboard the fat man fastened $200 in double gold eagles in a leather belt which was strapped around his waist. He could not swim a stroke. When they touched the water he floundered around, but did not sink. Shortly afterward a tremendous swell carried him under the pier, where he was knocked senseless by the piling. When the body was found, several hours afterward, it was not at the bottom of the stream, but plump against the planks of the pier, with the head above the water. The man never sank, but was drowned while insensible. Superstitious sailors concluded that it was the gold that kept him on the top of the river.—Philadelphia Record.

Mark Twain's House.

You should see Mark Twain's house, the most picturesque and most elegant of all those Farmington avenue houses on the road to West Hartford. It is a dark, rich red, with showy windows, one of deep blue, surrounded by green; hilly lawn, overlooking a meadow gay and flowery, not foggy and froggy, as is the manner of some meadows. There's a cool, retired, covered platform at the back of the house where, during the warm days, the children's playthings and the tables and easy chairs of older ones are brought. The kitchen is on the front ell, very near the street, "so that the kitchen folks can see who is going by in the road without having to go through all the rooms in the house." The elegance is suggestive of Mrs. Twain, but the kitchen joke standing there always, to make us laugh every time we pass there, was, of course, made by Mark himself.—Hartford Cor. Conquering a Pupil.

A Maine boy who is now a professor in one of our New England colleges used to teach town schools while fitting himself for his university course. Seated opposite to him on a railway train a while ago he related to me some of his early experiences in teaching the youthful idea. One strapping great girl, a woman grown, caused him considerable trouble because of her indifference to the beauties of education in general and "gogerfry" in particular, for which neglect he caused her to put in considerable time after school in making up.

It reached the teacher's ears one day that this maid had declared to an admiring group that she wouldn't have her lesson on that afternoon, and if the teacher kept her after school he would have the privilege of sitting up one night with her at any rate before she would make the lesson up. This idea caused much excitement among the pupils, who are usually ready to enjoy a teacher's discomfiture.

According to the programme the young lady's lesson that afternoon was a complete failure, and she was told to make it up after school. When the session ended the other pupils lingered about with an air of expectancy to see the outcome of matters.

The teacher politely showed them out of the room, however, and then went in and shut the door. There sat the damsel with her arms defiantly folded, and the book closed on the desk before her. The pedagogue cordially invited her to open her book and begin operations, but this had no effect whatever.

"All right," said he, taking out his watch. "I'll give you just thirty minutes to get that lesson, and if it is not ready at the end of that time I'll take you across my knee and give you one of the most comprehensive, unabridged and able bodied spankings that have occurred since Julius Cæsar was an infant."

Then he took a chair with his back to the enemy. Surprise, mortification, tears and sobs ensued, but at the end of the half hour the lesson had been learned—two lessons, probably.—Lewiston Journal.

Distance and Echo.

Did you ever figure on the exact distance that one may be removed from a reflecting surface and yet hear the echo of his own voice? It is said that one cannot pronounce distinctly or hear distinctly more than five syllables in a second. This gives one-fifth of a second for each syllable. Taking 1,120 feet as the velocity of sound per second, we have 224 feet as the distance sound will travel in one-fifth of a second. Hence, if a reflecting surface is 112 feet distant, the initial sound of an uttered syllable will be returned to the ear from a distance of 112 feet just as the next syllable starts on its journey.

In this case the first fifth of the second is consumed in the utterance of a syllable, and the next fifth of the second in hearing its echo. Two syllables would be echoed from a reflecting surface 224 feet distant, three syllables from 336 feet, and so on within the limits of audibleness. It is evident that a sharp, quick sound, the duration of which is only one-tenth of a second, would give an echo from half the distance, or 56 feet. The above estimates are for a temperature of 61 degs. Fahrenheit, at which the velocity of sound is a little over 1,118 feet in a second. The velocity of sound when the mercury stands at freezing is 1,086 feet per second.—New Orleans Picayune.

Saving His Books.

There is a story told on Hon. H. G. Struve which has not as yet been made public property. It is said that during the raging of the great fire, in which Mr. Struve with all the rest of Seattle was a heavy loser, he rushed up into his office to save some of his most valuable books. It is well known that he had accumulated a vast amount of material, which he purposed working up into a history of Washington. This material and some of his books were very precious to him. So as the fire came sweeping down toward his office he rushed up stairs and began to select the books most valuable.

"Ah, this one I will save. No, I guess this one is more valuable." Thus he hesitated, and among his many books, all of which were dear to him, he was unable to decide which ones to save. Just then the cries of firemen were raised, and the judge was urged to come down and save his life. Being thoroughly alarmed and still undecided, he turned and grabbed the first book in reach and rushed out of the building. Reaching the pavement he found he had saved—the city directory.—Seattle (Wash.) Press.

Care of Baby's Food.

A visit to the buttery in the Babies' hospital of New York, in East Fifty-fifth street, shows the care with which every mouthful of food is prepared. There are great cans of milk, bottles of the best of baby foods, rare beef and its juices, delicious bread—everything suitable for all the different baby needs. Out in the cold room there is a large case of "postoffice boxes." Each baby has one, labeled with its name. In it is daily placed the food he or she needs, apportioned and chosen with the greatest exactness, and in bottles queerly corked with baked cotton batting. This is done because the doctors and wise men have found out a strange thing. The air we breathe is full of floating bits—germs of disease—and these cannot get through cotton batting and poison the babies' milk.—New York World.

Literary Notices.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for November is a very handsome late Autumn issue and as good as it is handsome. Nearly a dozen of its articles are profusely illustrated by the most talented of artists whose pictures are of the finest. The literary contents are original, fresh and timely, while the Departments are complete. HARPER'S is sold by the New England News Company of Boston, and Sparrow Horton at the Old Woburn Book-store, this city.

THE COTTAGE HEARTH for November is an uncommonly interesting number. Its literature is of the best class, being furnished by writers of note; the music is new; the illustrations are more than good; while the fashion, domestic and other every-day departments are filled with the very freshest of matter from experienced pens.

We give THE WOBURN JOURNAL ($2.00 a year) and THE COTTAGE HEARTH ($1.50 a year) for $2.00 INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

The contents of the November number of THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY (a capital one, by the way) are: The Origin of Music, The Relations of Men of Science to the General Public, The Root-Tip, My Class in Geometry, The Logic of Free-trade and Protection, The Habits of the Box Tortoise, The History of a Star, Some Lessons from Barbarism, The Use of Alcohol in Medicine, Human Selection, Sketch of Amos Eaton, Correspondence, Editor's Table, etc. D. Appleton & Co., N. Y.

The numbers of LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for October 18th and 25th contain The Progress of Weather Study, Carthage, In a Sunny Land, My Desert Island, A Mediæval Popular Preacher, On the Fighting Instinct, Goethe's Last Days, Carlyle and Old Women, A Tragical Tertulia, Mahomedans at the Docks, Eh, but It's Queer Altogether, A Princess of Conde, A Physiologist's Wife, In Ceylon, John Ball Abroad, The Defensive Position of Holland, The Last Days of Heine, Discovery of an Early Christian House at Rome, An Old Letter from the Baltic, by Lady Eastlake, Parallel Passages from European and Asiatic Writers, Ober-Ammergan, Behind the Scenes, and the usual amount of choice poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each the subscription price ($8) is low. Littell & Co., Boston are the publishers.

ST. NICHOLAS has completed seventeen successful years, and begins its eighteenth with this November number. From the first it has had a policy of its own and has adhered to it without wavering. The magazine seems to stand alone as a repsentative of the growing modern conviction that influence and example are better than preaching and teaching, and that cultivation of good taste is no less important than training the intellect. The new volume will, it is announced, contain a number of serials by prominent writers for the young. J. T. Trowbridge will contribute a long serial entitled, The Fortunes of Toby Trafford; and Noah Brooks whose exciting book The Boy Emigrants, is well remembered, will write a similar and yet different serial, The Boy Settlers, the scene of which is the Territory of Kansas during the border troubles. Both of these stories begin in this number and are full of wholesome interest.

Some of the remaining papers of the number are David and Goliath in Modern Warfare, Found in The Forecastle, Little Vemba Brown, A Story I told the Pirate, The Mules and the Electric Car, Jack and Jill Reynard, The 'Gator, An Old Friend, and others.

The complete novel in the November number of LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE is contributed by Mrs. Jeanie Gwynne Bettany, the clever author of "The House of Rimmon." The story is entitled "A Laggard in Love," and the scene is laid in England, principally in what is known as the "Black Country." The homes and characters of the rustic people dwelling therein are described with a wonderfully graphic pen, for Mrs. Bettany possesses a touch and genius something akin to that of George Eliot, which enables her to weave a thrilling romance out of the lives of humble people. The birth and development of an overmastering passion in the heart of a young country maiden, and the tragic force which it becomes, is pictured with the hands of a master. A great variety of characters, representing different phases of English life, are introduced, and all are capitally portrayed. Without obtruding itself, the moral of the story is a strong and healthy one. In addition to these are A Philosopher in the Purple, My Lady Waits, "Bonds," The Famous Sonnet of Arvere, When Others Envy, Accidents and Trifles, British Side-glances at America, Journalism versus Literature, Book-Talk, etc.

A Thanksgiving Feast is offered in PETERSON for November. It is especially rich in illustrations. A Medieval City is as interesting as a romance, and capitally illustrated. Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis contributes one of her best stories, and Minna Irving a charming poem accompanied by a pretty landscape. House Plants will be welcome to all flower-cultivators. His Thanksgiving is worthy of its illustrations. Knick-knacks and Necessaries tells what a woman's ingenuity devised, and appropriate designs show the success of her efforts. We cannot particularize further, though every tale, sketch, and poem deserves mention. The Fashion and Household departments teem with novelties and information. Next year, PETERSON will reach its fiftieth anniversary of successful publication. It has stood at the head of ladies' periodicals during all those years, and for the coming year the publishers announce a large increase of pages, more abundant illustrations, finer paper, and other improvements that will add greatly to its attractiveness and strengthen its claim as a model magazine for the family. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Club rates: Two copies for $3.50; three copies for $4.70, with a handsome premium to the getter-up of the club; four copies, $6.40; six copies, $9.00, with an extra copy of the magazine for one year to the getter-up of the club. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. A sample-copy will be sent for five cents.

A man of truly heroic make was Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, whose life-story is told by his daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, in the November WIDE AWAKE; the article takes its title, A Modern Hero, from Whittier's noble poem of which Dr. Howe was the subject; the article is accompanied by a portrait of this great champion of the blind and of all distressed souls, painted in his young manhood, by Miss Jane Stuart, the daughter of Gilbert Stuart, the artist. Golden Margaret, by James Purdy, an episode of the Civil War, is the initial story of the number; further on appears a Southern dialect tale of great strength, Lucy Perveay, by Margaret Sidney. A Western story, How Tom Jumped a Mine, is from the pen M. E. S. Stickney. Miss Risley Seward gives Part II. of a true ancestral war-romance, A Story of 1812, with Commodore Perry for one of its heroes. Mrs. Fremont contributes the last of her series, The Will and the Way Stories. An excellent school-tale, Herbert Pender's Translations, is by William B. Chisholm. Miss McLeod's Acadian story, Boy Blue of Grand Pre, is one of the most interesting of the Canadian series. Crinoids, by H. H. Ballard, Thanksgiving at the White House, by M. S., Mrs. Claflin's Margaret-Patty Letter, A Mother Goose Plum Pudding, and several poems, together with the Men and Things pages of anecdote, conclude a good number. WIDE AWAKE is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

Somehow there is a belief prevalent in Connecticut that Mr. David A. Wells, the great free trader, is not half so big a man as he was before his debate with Congressman Russell was begun.

It is surprising that Candidate Corcoran should have had the hardihood at Pittsfield to reiterate the fiction that the new law increases the duty on lumber, when the fact is that it reduces it one-half.

The Woburn Journal

[Reported for the WOBURN JOURNAL.]

AN ABRIDGED SERMON.

BY REV. D. D. WINN.

Preached on Prison. Sunday, Oct. 26, 1890.

Matt. 25: 36. "I was in prison and ye came unto me."

It is a pleasing fact that Christ claimed the man in prison for a brother of his own humanity; that being a prisoner does not obliterate the man, that though in prison, he is still a man and therefore has claims on our practical sympathy. The demand for such sympathy is greater today than at any former time, for the number of prisoners was never so large in this land as now. We have on our hands today four hundred thousand prisoners of all classes — criminals, juvenile delinquents, idiots and insane persons. Of this number four thousand are murderers, thirteen thousand are burglars and twenty thousand are common thieves. The average age of criminal prisoners is 26 1-2 years. The average age of juvenile delinquents is 13 1-2 years. The number of criminal prisoners in the State of Massachusetts at the present time, is abouts even thousand.

Last year there were 7,961 persons committed to Massachusetts prisons who were boys and girls in our schools 11 years ago, and nearly 2300 of this number had not been more than 6 years out of school when they were committed to prison. This is an alarming fact.

These prisoners are maintained at an enormous expense. The cost of maintaining the Boston House of Industry at Deer Island last year was $159,000. The maintenance of the Suffolk County House of Correction at South Boston, was $101,362. The total net cost of all the institutions of the city of Boston, criminal and pauper, was near $600,000. The maintenance of the Police force of Boston costs annually more than a million of dollars. These are direct expenditures for protecting the cummunity from criminals. It is estimated that the cost of maintaining the State prisons of the country is $15,000 000 per year; and that the aggregate expense of the police department is $15,000,000 more. Think of it, $30,000,000 expended every yeur in order to protect the community from criminals. This subject is one which ought to interest the tax-payer as well as the philanthropist. Now let us consider some of the causes which lead to crime and to the prison.

In the first place, I remark that unhappy undisciplined homes are the cause of crime. Parents harsh and cruel on the one hand, or on the other hand loose in their government, wickedly loose in their government are raising up a generation of criminals. A home where scolding and fretfulness, cursing and swearing, vulgarity and obscenity, are dominant is blood relation to the gallows and the penetentiary. Birth is a dire misfortune for many children for such is their inherited tendencies and such their early education that it is hardly a possible thing for them to pass through youthhood without becoming criminals. When Warden Brush of Sing Sing is asked "What is the particular cause that sends most of our men to prison? invariably gives this answer: "The want of family discipline." The indulgence of the father and mother who allow the child to grow up without any discipline to form character, leads almost inevitably to evil ways and consequently to prison. Any bad habit, any wrong act in the parent leads the child to the same habit and wrong act and on to even worse and greater.

Another cause of crime is an indolent life. Every young man without daily employment is severely tempted, and in peril every hour. An idle man tempts the tempter to tempt him, and no wonder he goes to the bad. Lounging is sinning and leads to sin. Indolence, where there are brain heart and hand to be engaged, is outright crime and leads to crime. An idler is a thief and lives on the hard earnings of others. A large majority of criminals become so when in a state of continued voluntary idleness. A young fellow in our State prison who was serving his third sentence in the State prisons of United States was discharged the other day. The Chaplain said to him, "Charlie what are you going to do?" He held up his pale white hands and answered: "Chaplain, these hands never worked; do you think they can learn to work? My father was a thief and I have stolen one fortune at least since I was twelve years of age." This is the history of most thieves. Idleness is one of the chief causes of crime; and as long as there is a multitude who seek to get a living without honest work, so long our prisons and reformatories will be filled with criminals. There are only four ways of getting money—only four: by inheritance, by earning it, by begging it, by stealing it. We know that thousands among us who live in idleness are well dressed, well fed and have plenty of money. How do they get it? Not by inheritance, not by earning it, not by begging it. They get it by deception, by fraud, by stealing it. The number of men in our cities who are trying to get their living by their wits, by sleight of hand, by fraud and by stealing is all the time on the increase. If all the thieves in this country received their merited punishment, instead of having in our prisons twenty thousand thieves we should have five hundred thousand.

And still another cause of crime is bad literature. Few are aware of the number of bad books and papers which are published in our large cities, the means employed to give them a wide circulation and the mischief they are doing. A worse literature than that which is spread before the youth of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive, or his hand to execute. This infamous trade is carried on for money, but its work is to degrade the intellect, to fill and pollute the imagination with gaudy, distorted and vile pictures of human life, to develop and inflame the passions; and the results are sin, vice and crime. A large proportion of the crimes committed in this country are committed by youths under twenty years of age; and the common confession of these criminals is that they got the inspiration for the life of crime from the reading of "blood and thunder stories." We often read of youthful murderers and highwaymen who are plainly the victims of the "dime novel" indulgence. Alas: it is sad to believe and realize how pernicious books and newspapers are everywhere at work, enticing, corrupting, demoralizing, rising generation, desolating thousands of homes, and filling our jails and reformatories with blasted lives and blackened souls. But this is not all.

There is yet another and greater cause of crime, viz.: the dram shop. We have in our large cities and scattered over this fair land two hundred thousand dram shops and every one is steadily at work making criminals. It is generally admitted that more than three fourths of the crime of the nation is caused by the liquor traffic. Wherever dram shops abound crimes of all sorts abound. It is everywhere seen that the number of crimes committed in any State or city is in exact proportion to the number of legalized dram shops in that State or city. In Massachusetts, during the year ending 1888 under legalized rum seventy-two thousand were arrested for criminal offences and over thirty-two thousand were committed to her prisons. In the State of Iowa, under prohibition, with a population of a hundred thousand more than Massachusetts, the total arrests made last year for crimes were but fifteen thousand, and the total commitments were only eight hundred and thirty-eight, and fifty-nine county jails were without an inhabitant. No fact in social science is more assured than that the overwhelming majority of criminals are the products of alcohol. Judge Allison of Philadelphia has said "that of the hundreds of murder tiials which had come before him, during more than a quarter of a century, the cause of the crime in fully ninety-five cases out of every hundred was the use of intoxicating drinks."

Chief Justice Noah Davis in a charge to the Grand Jury in New York said "An experience of more than 20 years of judicial life has taught me that more than seven-eighths of the crimes committed in this country—which involve personal violence were traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors." Judge Pitman of Massachusetts says, "that from two-thirds to nine-tenths of the crime brought before the courts of justice is due to intoxicating liquors."

Col. Haynes who was the Warden of the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown for several years said "that of 2000 convicts at least 80 per cent. owed their incarceration directly or indirectly to intemperance: that during the time he had been at the prison, 21 men had been there for killing their wives and two for killing a parent; that of these 22 were habitual drunkards and were actually drunk when they committed the crime." One hundred thousand drunkards are annually imprisoned for crime and two hundred thousand helpless children are reduced to beggary and want. Every liquor seller knows he is preparing his victims for the prison and innocent children for suffering poverty, sin and shame. I impeach every dram seller as a participant in the crimes of those who are maddened by his liquor, and in all the sufferings endured thereby by innocent children. All our criminals are not in prison. Where there is one in prison there ought to be if justice were done, fifty. The blackest criminals, in my judgment, are the retail rumsellers. In the spirit, if not in the letter of the law, they are guilty of man-slaughter for the law says whosoever accelerates the death of a human being is guilty of the crime. Dramsellers ought to be held responsible in law for all the panperism and crime and deaths they produce. They form the most tremendous curse in the community. They are stealthily killing their victims and murdering the peace and industry of the community and thereby converting happy homes into hells of misery, unthrift, poverty and rags. They are a blighting curse in every neighborhood where they are found, and all good men and women are praying everywhere that they may be either speedily reformed or summarily uprooted.

But has society any responsibility for the existence of criminal classes? we say yes, and responsible until we have to the full extent of our ability removed at least the chief causes of crime. We ought to put a stop to publishing and selling pernicious literature. Bad blood, unhappy homes, depraved example, and loose government are not the only causes of youthful crime. The influence of improper reading is sometimes a far greater cause of crime. The newspapers of the country that teem with stories of crime and of shameful conduct are the active cause of many of the offences they report with such avidity, and with so much of disgusting detail.

We ought to close the dramshops, and thus remove the greatest cause of crime. The low dram-shops and the gilded saloon are alike the creators of criminals and the great hindrance to their reformation. It is in these haunts that criminals congregate. It is there we find the thief, the burglar, the prostitute, the murderer, and the anarchist. The fugitive from justice is there, and the police know where to find him. It is our duty to close and keep closed these manufactories of criminals, and make it possible for every man, after his day's work is done, to go to his home free from temptation too strong for him to resist. Until we do this we are in complicity with the infernal traffic, and are responsible for the pauperism and awful crimes produced by it all over the land. Close the dram shop in America, and you arrest three fourths of the crime, and remove the great hindrance to criminal reformation.

Last year more than eighteen thousand prisoners were discharged from the county prisons of Massachusetts, outside of Boston. As the prisoner goes forth into the world, how is he received? His great need is a friend and work: but who extends to him a friendly hand? Who gives him work? Who makes him feel that somebody is interested in him? Ex-prisoners are generally considered irreclaimable and are shunned, feared, and neglected. The consequence is they often get discouraged, and coming into adverse circumstances and bad surroundings, and with saloons flashing their light all around them wherever they chance to go, they slip back into their old ways of sin and crime. How many are lost beyond recovery whom kindness and helpfulness would have saved. There are thousands in this State who have been prisoners, and who are to-day good citizens. Hundreds are leaving prison every week who will prove a blessing or a curse in the community, and it is left largely with us to determine which it shall be. We can suppress the drink traffic, the unqualified curse of the prisoner. We can bring to him the Gospel of Christ which has power to save, to cleanse, and make him a good citizen and fit to stand before the throne of God, and meet for the company of the white robed throng in heaven.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and instal instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by H. L. Flanders & Co., Druggists.

The Newark Daily Advertiser says: "The immediate effect of the McKinley bill on Newark and vicinity will be to start up many spindles which have been long idle in the Marshall Linen Thread Works, in Kearny, and others in the Barbour Works at Paterson, and to add considerably to the plants of both these concerns, giving employment to an increased number of hands. There is no end to this thing. There are five or six concerns in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania for which Marshall & Co. have already made samples, and the manufacturers have altered their looms to make linen fabrics, and are making up goods for next season's trade."

Marvellous Endurance.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times, and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many heart failures. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering, choking in the throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swollen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

A curious art imposition has been discovered in Paris. An ingenious person stole bronze and marble busts from the cemetery of Montparnesse, Paris, touched them up, and sold them as effigies of famous heroes, statesmen and orators. He did not find it difficult to pass off the busts of departed grocers as Demosthenes or some celebrated General.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, N. Y.

At Amherst, N. S., recently, Rev. Dr. Hartley lost a valuable ring. He advertised, but got no tidings, until a dream revealed to him the fact that the ring was under his bed, and he found it on one of the slats.

No Other

As good. This is the statement of Professor Smith, Analytical Chemist: I have analyzed all of the popular blood purifiers and medicines now sold. Many of them I found to be worthless, some dangerous to use. Sulphur Bitters contains nothing poisonous, and I think it is the best blood purifier made.

It is very pathetic," says the Tribune, "to hear a crowd of Tammany statesmen in a gimmill den uncing the McKinley act because under its operation there will be a slight increase in the price of imported Bibles." The "Bible tax" is one of the few "iniquities" of the McKinley bill that have been ignored by the Democratic press and politicians of this State. There seems to be a tacit agreement that it is a tax which will not greatly disturb the Massachusetts Democracy.

An infallible sign of physical decay is sleeplessness: if this is dangerous in an adult, it is deadly in early childhood. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will always assist in comforting the baby.

It has proved undoubted usefulness we refer to Old Saul's Catarrh Cure. Price 25 cents.

The schoolmistress at the workhouse in Westbury-on-Severn in England has been suspended on charges of ill-treatment of the pupils. Her style of treatment is illustrated by these statements: She threw sixteen buckets of water over one girl, and fourteen bucketsful over another; she caned boys until their hands bled, and sometimes beat them when they were naked; she pushed one boy down a flight of fourteen steps, injuring his knee; and she lashed another's naked body with a bunch of leather laces.

Everybody knows scrofula to be a disease of the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best remedy for all blood diseases.

A man in Houston county, Ga., in order to save the extravagance of a wife and the expense of hiring a cook, shells his corn, and before carrying it to mill spreads it on the floor before the fire, where it is parched. The corn is then ground into meal, and when he starts to work in the morning he makes up a mash of meal and places it out in the sun to dry. As the meal is already cooked, it will be ready for his dinner when he comes in from work.

Quebec customs officers were outflanked by a shrewd maneuvre of some smugglers the other night. The officers received a hint that two carts with four casks of whisky were to be found on the Beauport road at midnight, and they spent several hours on the watch. They captured the carts and the contents, and while taking them into Quebec the smugglers landed 148 casks on the Island of Orleans.

"Hey, what's that?" demanded the guest. "Room No. 496 on the top floor? Not much: I kick." He looked like a Texas Congressman, and the hotel clerk hastily gave him a front parlor on the ground floor.

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The United States Official Investigation

Of Baking Powders, recently made, under authority of Congress, by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., furnishes the highest authoritative information as to which powder is the best. The Official Report shows the ROYAL superior to all others in leavening power; a cream of tartar powder of highest quality.

"The strength of the Royal is shown to be 23 per cent. greater than any other.

"As a result of my investigations I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength.

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, NOV. 7, 1890.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

CAPT. WYER ELECTED.

The Republicans in these parts managed to save a nest-egg last Tuesday and that was about all. Capt. Ed. Wyer was elected State Senator for the 5th district, scoring the only Republican victory we can hear of.

But there is a good deal of comfort to be got out of his election. He was not only elected but he ran ahead of his ticket right here at home. If you want to know what a man is go and ask his neighbors about him. By that token Capt. Wyer has nothing to be ashamed of.

We rejoice over the Captain's victory because he is a true Republican, an earnest worker, an honest man, and an attempt was made by Republicans to slaughter him.

We congratulate him on his triumph at the polls.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Gov. Brackett has issued a proclamation in which Thursday, Nov. 27, is appointed as the day to be passed in thanksgiving and praise by the people of Massachusetts.

It was lucky for all of us, the Governor included, that the proclamation was issued before election, otherwise the day might have been set apart for fasting and prayer.

CONGRESSIONAL DEFEAT.

There was a huge political upheaval among the Congressmen last Tuesday in this State. They got only 5 out of the 12, whereas they should have had all but one.

Fox in this District was knocked out in the first round by almost 3,000 majority against him.

Lodge was re-elected, and that was a lucky thing for the Commonwealth.

THE STATE.

The result of Tuesday's election was a surprise to everybody. Russell, the Democratic candidate, was elected by nearly 10,000 plurality.

The entire Republican State ticket was successful except Gov. Brackett and Auditor Ladd, both of which positions were captured by the unterrified. Who would have thought it?

THE COUNTRY.

The Republicans got about as roughly used on election day elsewhere as in Massachusetts. Pennsylvania was snowed under; McKinley was defeated for Congress in Ohio; Wisconsin elected a Democratic Governor — well, these are only specimen bricks of the misfortunes which befel the Republicans last Tuesday.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The City Council, almost without an exception, are in favor of Alderman W. C. Kenney for Mayor to succeed Mayor Johnson. The fact is highly complimentary to Mr. Kenney's qualifications and may lead to his nomination by the Republicans.

WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE.

We have the best of authority for saying that Mayor Johnson will not, under any circumstances, be a candidate for re-election next month.

Many tax-payers will regret the Mayor's decision, but it is probably unalterable.

☞ Capt. Wyer had no reason to complain of the vote he received in this city last Tuesday, and we haven't heard that he felt very badly over it. He ran 19 ahead of Brackett, the party color-bearer, whereas Felch ran 63 behind his ticket. Capt. Wyer can't have much chance there for fault-finding.

— See bag found in advertising columns.

— Capt. Tay will cater for Co. K. this evening.

— Gregory advertises an administrators sale to-day.

— "Priscilla" was a success in every sense of the word.

— The Democratic caucuses will be held next Monday evening.

— Gregory has sold the Murray real estate on Park street at a good price.

— Look at Copeland & Bowsers picture gallery in the JOURNAL this week.

— Jacob Ellis has had considerably much needed street sprinkling done this week.

— Read what Mr. John I. Munroe says about leasing the Cook shop in this paper.

— Post 161, G. A. R., will be inspected on Nov. 17, by Comrade F. O. Waterman.

— Mrs. Alice May Bates Rice was simply perfect in the character of "Priscilla."

— Quealey Court hold their grand ball this evening. Fine music has been secured.

— The Democrats haven't looked so happy for years as they did last Wednesday morning.

— The Middlesex Investment Company is established on sound principles and the character of its officers is a guaranty of its honesty.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus," Dec. 4.

— The Herald went like hot cakes here all day Wednesday. Piles of them were sold.

— There wasn't much of a stir here on election day. Things were as quiet as Sunday almost.

— In the Democratic town of Burlington Capt. Wyer beat Felch 2 votes. How's that for high!

— We were pleased to note that Capt. Wyer ran ahead of his ticket in this city last Tuesday.

— We have had several frosty nights this week, but the days have been full of sunshine, joy and life.

— Yesterday was one of the loveliest November days that ever made the heart of man rejoice.

— The Lodge of Free Masons had a banquet last Wednesday evening. Capt. Tay was the caterer.

— "Priscilla" didn't show a more brilliant star than Mabel Davis. Boston hasn't many better singers.

— Dea. Gage is more than holding his own. The opinion exists that he has been doing so nearly all his life.

— Maud Pratt, Addie Richards and Stella Lincoln made a very pretty trio of Mayflower Babs in "Priscilla".

— Mrs. Helen Hanson advertises a nice house for rent. It is a pleasant place and will be let at a reasonable price.

— Now that the election is over we hope to be able to settle down and give local affairs more of our time and attention.

— John I. Munroe, as real estate agent, is doing more than any other man towards getting people to come to Woburn and settle.

— Voters, read the notice of the Board of Registrars of Voters in this paper. Don't fail to see that your names are on the lists.

— Miss O'Brien of Church Ave., one of the most accomplished music teachers in this city, is enjoying a gratifying public patronage.

— Make a note of the fact that the Y.M.C.A. Week of Prayer will be observed by the Woburn Association. Next week is the time appointed.

— "Angelus", mentioned in another article in to-day's JOURNAL, was sold a few days since for $40,000 more than the proprietor paid for it a year ago!

— Mrs. H. C. Mentzer of 185 Lexington street advertises a part of her house (the William B. Harris home) to let. See card. It is a pleasant place.

— Prior's new store, 421 Main street, shows off in fine style in the evening. With its arc and incandescent lights and stacks of handsome goods it is a brilliant looking place.

— In response to a request for aid from Wilmington Mayor Johnson sounded an alarm at box 62 between 1 and 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and the aid asked for was sent.

— The display window in Mrs. Packard's fine millinery store makes a very pretty picture and attracts a great deal of attention. It is filled with beautiful millinery goods.

— Marvin Parker played the "Reformed" Indian in "Priscilla". He did his part firstrate, but it would have puzzled a Philadelphia lawyer to have told where the "reformed" came in.

— Candidate Pierce went down with flying colors and in good company—we were all snowed under in a heap. He made a good fight and fared as well as a majority of his fellow-Republicans did.

— Miss Emma Fosdick is as competent a teacher of the banjo and guitar as can be found anywhere. Her pupils always make satisfactory progress in their studies, and she has a good many of them.

— The name of Hon. John Cummings of this city, President of the Shawmut National Bank of Boston, appeared in the Traveller's last Saturday evening's list of "Representative Men of Boston."

— We wish our business men would step forward and furnish us 4 columns of good advertising at reasonable prices and thus help the Editor over the rough winter road which stretches away before him.

— A good piano is an article highly prized in every household. Such a piano is the Hallet & Cumston of Boston. Their pianos are made of the best material by skilled workmen and are in every respect a superior piano.

— Burning of the old B. & L. depot at Wilmington Wednesday afternoon was the reason for calling on the Woburn Fire Department for help. The boys did not get there in season to save the depot but prevented several other buildings from burning up.

— The gentlemen whose names will be presented at the Democratic caucus in Ward 5 next Monday night for Alderman are: James Cogan, John J. Walsh, John Quigley, William McDonough. For Councilman: James Cullen, James McVoye, Frank McGarry.

— William Winn, Esq., of Pleasant street in this city, who for several terms represented the Burlington District in the General Court, voted last Tuesday and it made the 60th consecutive time he has voted at a State election. Mr. Winn is about 82 year old but hardly anybody would take him to be over 68 or 70.

— The First Baptist church of this city has advertised to give a grand turkey supper, entertainment, and Art Loan exhibition on Thursday evening next, Nov. 13, which we'll be bound to say will be a very fine affair. We advise everyone to patronize it. Read the announcement in another column.

— If everything went off as planned Post 33 had a big time at their anniversary last evening. A fine banquet was one of the features, nice music, and an address on "Five Forks" by Comrade Charles H. Porter Mayor of Quincy, were others. Comrade and Post Commander A. P. Barrett was in his glory, and he was not the only one who circulated around as spry and chipper as boys—if all the connections were made, of which the JOURNAL has no doubt.

— A Colonial High Back Rocking Chair in English Oak, hand carved, finely upholstered in silk plush, with polished brass trimmings, and mounted on long easy rockers, can be purchased at Paine's Furniture Warerooms on Canal street, in Boston, at the low price of $4. It is a wonderful bargain.

— Mrs. Rogers, No. 9 Bennett St., has had her house thoroughly renovated, newly papered, and otherwise improved, and is now prepared to give boarders better satisfaction than ever, if possible. Hers is a favorite with table or weekly boarders, for she provides liberally, everything is as neat as wax, and the best of satisfaction is given.

— The Democrats of this city celebrated their victory last Wednesday evening by a torchlight procession, and band and chin music on the Common. The saloons made more out of it than anybody else. W. F. Kenney of the Boston Globe, and City Clerk Moreland were the chief speakers, and Frank Curran was Master of Ceremonies.

— Dr. Joe. P. Shields has hit the right idea exactly concerning the entrance to his new drug store. It is just the checker according to the JOURNAL's architectural notions and will be found a big improvement. Cyrus Lamb has the job, which is a sure sign that it will be a good one. Just when Dr. Shields will move into his new store may be learned by referring to his advertisement in this paper.

— Everyone interested in the welfare of Woburn especially in its splendid Fire Department ought to ponder well on an article in this paper headed "$10.00 in Gold," signed by the officers of Highland Hose Co., No. 5, and then turn to and help the Co. secure the library. All the boys and girls to turn in bushels of coupons for the "Highland" and let us see if we can't bring that Globe prize to Woburn.

— Mr. Wiggin, who has been a driver for Potter & Wrightington, Boston wholesale dry fish dealers, for many years, was killed by a train at Wilmington last Saturday morning and the team badly used up. He made regular visits to Woburn and was well known by many of our people. It was strange that a person of so much experience should attempt to cross a railroad track when a train is near at hand.

— The rooms of the City Council and those adjacent thereto were not at all comfortable for Republicans last Tuesday evening. The JOURNAL man felt like a cat in a strange attic and kept out of sight of the crowd as much as possible. There was too much "Rebel Yell" present to make it agreeable for a true-blue G. O. P. man, so at a moment when he thought himself least noticed he buttoned his ulster and silently stole away.

— Mr. A. C. Floyd, who by the grace of General Banks, has occupied a lucrative position in the Treasury department of the U. S. Government at Washington since January 1, 1871—almost 20 years—has been visiting his old "stomping grounds" here this week and renewing the friendships of his boyhood days. The Department must think well of Mr. Floyd's services else it would have dispensed with them long ago. He's about as clean as they make 'em this season.

— Mr. Cyrus Cumming has recently purchased the Taylor tobacco store opposite the postoffice and has it in successful operation. Mr. Cummings has put in a fine stock of all kinds of goods and is prepared to furnish the choicest imported cigar, pure tobacco, or anything else in that line. Mr. Cummings's character and standing in the community are a guarantee that the establishment will hereafter be one that will deserve the patronage of the best portion of Woburn's male population.

— The Woburn Board of Trade will hold a special meeting at their rooms at 8 o'clock this evening to consider the the scheme of utilizing the Carter rink for manufacturing purposes. Secretary Lewis in his notice to members says concerning it: "Parties stand ready to come to Woburn and locate their business here if arrangements can be made to furnish them suitable locations and buildings. Any business connected with this subject can be acted upon at this meeting. Members are especially urged to attend and extend the invitation to Citizens generally to be present with us."

— The Woburn Woman's Club have engaged as one of the speakers Mr. John Baker now of Boston, a Russian Refugee, whose statements of his own experiences, and those of other members of his family, are most thrillingly given. Mrs. Livermore pronounces him superior to George Kennan, whose lectures on the same subject have been listened to with such interest by immense audiences in Boston. In order that the husbands and other friends of the Club may have an opportunity to listen to Mr. Baker the meeting will be held in the evening instead of the afternoon. Particulars next week.

— Miss Celia Reade, chief clerk in the Woburn Centre postoffice, has kindly furnished the JOURNAL with the following figures for publication. They indicate that under Mr. Reade's energetic and liberal administration of the affairs of the office its business has grown beyond belief almost. It should be borne in mind that these figures relate solely to the work of the carriers and have nothing to do with the inside delivery business of the office. Number of carriers at $850 per year, 5; number who make 3 daily delivery trips, 3; 2 daily delivery trips, 1; 4 daily delivery trips, 1. In collecting 2 carriers make 4 trips a day, and 3 make 3 trips. These carriers handled the following mail matter during the month of Oct. 1890: Registered letters, 35; letters delivered, 26,584; postal cards delivered, 5,943; 2, 3 and 4th class matter delivered, 16,641; local letters collected, 1,661; mail letters collected, 8,743; local postal cards collected, 1,242; mail postal cards collected, 1,778; 2, 3 and 4th class matter collected, 748; making a total number of pieces handled by the carriers in that time 63,075.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus," Dec. 4.

— It is announced that the board which marked the grave of the hero Houghton in the Norfolk Naval Cemetery for 25 years and was taken away when the remains of Houghton were removed to their final resting-place in Holyrood Cemetery, has been framed and will be presented to the trustees of the Woburn Public Library with appropriate ceremonies this evening. The visitors from Boston will be Capt. White, Lieut. Daley, Inspector Houghton, brother of the brave marine, and others, by whom the presentation of the slab will be made After the ceremonies a collation will be served. The occasion will be one of much interest no doubt.

— In the death of Mrs. Celende T. Dow, relict of the late Stephen Dow, a prominent and wealthy business man and citizen of Woburn, which occurred last Saturday afternoon at her residence in this city after a somewhat protracted illness, the community lost one of its oldest and most highly esteemed members, and the poor and needy a friend whose place it will be hard to fill. She will be missed and sincerely mourned by a great many people, for she was kind and charitable without ostentation towards all, and nobody will ever know just how much good she did here until the records are examined in the world above, for Mrs. Dow was a christian woman who never let her right hand know what her left one was doing.

— We have been saying good things about "Priscilla" and telling people what it was like for over four weeks and it all came out just as we said it would. There is no better or more pleasing comic opera than "Priscilla" extant and it was produced in Lyceum Hall last Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the best of style to good audiences. It is full of mirth and jollity, humor and laughter — not the button-busting kind but — hearty, happy, fat-making laughter. Mr. Macomber is a splendid Director, and where can a better pianoforte accompanist than Miss Mertena Bancroft be found? And there are few finer soloists than Miss Mable Davis, and the Boston artists were all first class. These were the people who floated "Priscilla" so charmingly at Lyceum Hall: Mr. C. E. Macomber of Boston, Director; the part of "Priscilla" was admirably acted by Miss May Bates Rice, and Miss Maud Pratt appeared as Barbara. Harry L. Chase as Miles Standish; W. H. Dodd as Hatebad Higgins; Miss Mabel Davis as "Resignation;" Frank Cummings as Gov. Bradford, while the Mayflower buds were Miss L. Maud Pratt as Barbara; Miss Stella Lincoln as Faith, and Miss Addie Richards as Prudence. The chorus was large and composed of choice singers, whose names were; Mrs. E. B. Blanchard, Mrs. Charles L. Grammer, Mrs. H. B. Clewley, Miss McLaine, Miss Ellard, Miss Richards, Mrs. Richards, Mrs. Remick, Miss Edie Davis, Mrs. Capt. Parker, Miss Lucy Woodside, Z. W. Atwood, Henry B. Wood, Mr. Clewley, George Cutler, Will W. Crosby, Mr. Story, Clarence A. Pierce, Edward Q. Brackett, Frank Cummings. If there were any more the JOURNAL reporter failed to find them. The affair gave great satisfaction to all.

For the Realm Beyond.

The writer, familiar with the woods and woodcraft, has hunted all animals in our nothern forests from the lynx down to the rabbit and is familiar with the habits of all. Not one of them but what takes some form of bath each day. In nature cleanliness follows the appeasing of hunger and here humanity gets a solid lesson. Take it to heart, add Brussels soap, and thus make clearer your path to the celestial realm.

A Silver Wedding.

The celebration of the 25th anniversary of the wedding of Rev. and Mrs. Hugh Montgomery in the vestry of the M. E. Church last Monday evening by their hosts of warm friends was a very pleasant affair. A large company were present from Boston and other cities in addition to the home visitors, all of whom were happily entertained.

The celebration was under the management of Mr. Frank W. Legg, and on behalf of many generous donors Mr. Warren P. Adams presented the pair with a purse containing $180 in silver and other good things. Mr. Montgomery replied to Mr. Adams's neat words of presentation appropriately and feelingly, and both were listened to with much interest.

Among those from whom letters containing contributions to the purse were received were: J. D. Flint, Fall River; D. O. Means, Worcester; E. H. Haskell, Boston; Henry H. Faxon, the celebrated temperance champion of Quincy; John K. C. Sleeper & Co., Boston; Samuel May, Strawbery Hill, Liecester; A. G. Hill, Florence; W. W. Rice, Worcester.

The occasion was one which will be long remembered by Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery and all who participated in it.

An Important Correction.

The following is a correct statement concerning the collection of taxes by City Collector Maguire which requires no explanation to be understood. The figures were taken from the collector's books:

The Fair.

The Fair given by the Daughters of Rebekah on three evenings last week was an immense success. The ladies who had it in charge know how to do such things, are enterprising, and carry in their vocabulary no such word as fail. The attendance was very large each evening, and everyone who went was delighted. The voting on the various schemes was very spirited and resulted in many surprises. In the baby contest the prize went just where it belonged. The sales of confectionery, etc., were full up to high-water mark and money was made from them. On the whole the Fair was a big enterprise and great success.

City Election.

The figures of last Tuesday's election in this city need no prefatory remarks from the Editor's pen. And besides, the Editor is in no mood to indulge in long-minded speculation over the matter, but, rather, to let the whys and wherefores slide. The simple truth about the business is, the Republican party in this city got beautifully whipped. We met the enemy and we were theirs in a hurry. We were the "under dog in the fight" from the start, and ought to be thankful that we got out alive. The figures show some queer politics; but then, that is the way figures have on off years, and sometimes in other ones.

Well, it is tough; but the Republicans of Woburn have been licked so many times that they don't seem to mind it much now. Here are the returns kindly furnished by City Clerk Moreland.

A Woburn Man.

L. W. Cooper, after a successful business career of thirteen years in this city, has disposed of his piping business—stock, fixtures and good will—to W. R. Park & Son. It was founded by W. L. Jordan in 1875. He was an old apprentice of Mr. Cooper and was helped by him to start with a good outfit of piping supplies, but at the end of two years his affairs were far from being in good shape, and to make the best of a bad thing Mr. Cooper bought his stock. By the new management things were put upon a paying basis, and by hard work evolved to their present success. Many of the large steam plants about the city stand as proofs of Mr. Cooper's skill and sound judgment. Among his customers have been the largest manufacturing establishments, while he has associated with and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the prominent dealers and capitalists in his line of business. His career has been marked by high integrity and financial standing. The many people who have gathered at his shop—smoked his ever-handy pipes and listened to his stories—will deeply regret his retirement from business, but these thirteen years have been a period of constant activity—have been broken by scarcely a holiday, and the leisure which he will now enjoy has seldom been more thoroughly earned. There are few kinder hearted men, few whose good deeds are more quietly done and few who are more truly and honestly esteemed than our friend.—Taunton Gazette.

Mr. Cooper expects to return to this city about next April and take up his permanent abode. He has many friends here who will welcome him back.

Storage Battery System

The latest report on the subject of electric propulsion makes it appear that the storage battery system, even at its present stage, is cheaper than horse power. If that is the case, perhaps it would be just as well to worry along with the latter for a few years more, rather than permit the erection of poles and wires in the heart of the city, however desirable they may be in the outskirts.—Boston Traveller.

Recent experiments at St. Paul demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of the large number of electricians and representatives of street railway companies who were there to witness and possibly to profit by them, that the storage battery system even in its uncompleted development, was a signal success as applied to the running of street cars, and could be safely relied on for the power necessary and to meet satisfactorily all the demands of the business. Many street railway companies in the West are now using the storage battery system, and it is only a matter of a short time when the employment of it will become universal. It is generally understood that President Breed of the No. Woburn and East Middlesex Street Railroad Companies and principal stockholder in both, as well as the chief owner and President of the Lynn and Boston line, is only waiting for a solution of this question satisfactory to his own mind to adopt electricity as the motive power on those roads, and that it would not be at all surprising if the change was made next spring. President Breed is a wide-awake, intelligent, 19th century sort of a man who keeps square up with the best "modern improvements" in his business, and knowing this to be true we shall be not a little surprised if the No. Woburn and East Middlesex Companies are not running cars on their routs with electricity employed by the storage battery system by May 1, 1891.

According to common report these lines of street railway have had a prosperous business year since Jan. 1, 1890 came in. There has been a large increase of travel on both, and the prospect for a still larger one next year is flattering. With wise and judicious management at the head of the Companies, and hard work directed by the good judgment of Supt. Sewell of the No. Woburn, and Supt. Wentworth of the East Middlesex (both thorough-going and experienced street railway men) it was expected that the patronage and net revenues of the lines which they manage would grow right along, and such, reports say, is the truth.

With such encouraging statements and fair prospects for these lines, coupled with the fact that electricity as a motive power is here to stay, and that the storage battery system is certain to prevail over all others and that too very soon, we think the belief that the cars on the N. W. and E. M. roads will abandon their horses for lightning within a year is a very reasonable one.

A careless and extravagant man will wade in mud until it is up to the straps of his boots, and care nothing about ruining them, but he will growl like thunder if his wife don't economize by using Brussels soap.

A Wonderfully Varied Array.

At the seventeeth triennial exhibition of the Massachusetts Charitable Association the big Mechanics Fair, on Huntington Avenue, Boston, art and science, the practical and the æsthetic, are so interwoven in the thousand or more different exhibits brought together from all parts of New England, and carefully arranged in the big Exhibition Building, that individual tastes, however widely they may differ, are sure to find many things of great interest. There is a wonderful variety—from a superb oil painting to a big casting or a grind-stone; from that wonderful piece of machinery, the loom, or the cotton gin, so invaluable to the cotton manufacturer; or the hundred other machines of notable notable worth, down through all the stages to a top or automatic toy for a boy; from those remarkable inventions, the telephone and the phonograph, to the plain, uninspiring pressed brick—surely here is an array that must interest the artist, the inventor, the capitalist, the working man, the teacher and the pupil; in fact, everybody. The fair enters upon its fifth week under the brightest auspi es, and though the attendance has been remarkably large, there is no doubt that still greater crowds will assemble during the remaining weeks.

"My feet are so slim I never can get a good fit unless I pay quite a high price." Then try Stetson at his well-known store, corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, and see what he can do for you in the way of a Ladies' fine boot. Goat or Kid for just $2.

The "Angelus."

Concerning Millet's celebrated painting "The Angelus," now on exhibition in Boston and drawing great crowds of people daily the Boston Herald of Oct. 31 says:

At last the "Angelus," the famous painting by Millet, arrived in Boston! It was at once placed on exhibition in connection with the Verestchagin pictures. Among the people who thus improved the first opportunity to see a work so celebrated were many of the leading artists, art lovers, and persons prominent in Boston society.

It is likely that the picture may be seen here for only a few days.

The scene yesterday was much like that before a venerated shrine in a chapel, the beholders sitting in silence in the seats before the picture, almost as if in devotion, in sympathy with the subject.

The beautiful arrangement of the exhibition, with its magnificent hangings, is much admired by visitors. Too much can hardly be said in praise of the skill and taste of Mr. Brandus in taking what was substantially a barn in its huge bareness and transforming it in such short order into a series of picture galleries worthy of a permanent art museum.

North Woburn.

I am glad to see Miss Florence Wyman up and about again.

Mr. C. J. Levers has recently built an addition to his factory on Pearl street. This means a large business.

A large number of our citizens attended the comic opera "Pricilla" and were very much pleased with the performance.

Many of our citizens think we should have a later train to Boston, the 5.59 P. M. train being the last one to leave our station for the Hub.

On Friday evening, Oct. 31, Vidette Hall was the scene of a very well attended dance which was managed by "The Jolly Rovers." Music was furnished by a good orchestra.

I am happy to see that the Supt. of the Highway has at last taken measures to repair our streets. It is indeed time that something should be done as they are a disgrace to our Ward as well as to the city.

Owing to the great increase of business Mr. Charles E. Eaton, manufacturer of shoe stock, has found it necessary to build a larger factory on his estate at Pearl street. The building is two and one-half stories high, and is heated with steam.

All good citizens should encourage home enterprise and buy their boots, shoes and rubbers of Herman F. Page, 87 Elm street, directly opposite Count Rumford's birthplace. A good steady Barber should be able to earn a fair living in this Ward.

Public Library Notes.

Special attention is directed this month to the Bulletin of accessions for the year. In its arrangement it is somewhat different from those preceding, being a classified list of the books alphabetically arranged with author and subject indexes; also a synopsis of the classification showing the general arrangement of the classes. It is hoped that this new method will greatly facilitate the process of finding books, and will be found a great assistance to those looking for works on special subjects. This, together with the card catalogue of all the bulletins catalogued by author and subject, and the class list of 1879, brings the entire library within the range of the reader.

It is true that one of the most encouraging signs of the times to one who is interested in noting the great amount of reading matter which is forced upon the attention is the condensed and abbreviated form in which knowledge is presented. The short biographies of historic personages which are being published are a great relief to a large class of readers. Among these are "The English Men of Action," American Reformers," and "Famous Women Series." Miss Sarah Bolton is the author of several books which are a great delight and profit to the reader. Among the latest are "Famous European Artists," and "Famous English Authors." She says that since all these distinguished workers possessed untiring industry and a resolute purpose to succeed, to read about them may be stimulating and encouraging to all those who would make the most of their opportunities. The author gives simply and clearly a full and fair sketch of the life and works of each person. "Cardinal Newman" by Richard Hutton was ready for the press before the death of this one of the most commanding figures in the religious world for in his singleness of purpose and the devotion to the main object of his life it would be difficult to find many men that could rival him.

Life of Dorothy L. Dix by T. Tiffany is the story of the founder of great and enduring institutions of mercy in America and Europe, living to the advanced age of eighty-five, and never pausing in her career of beneficient work till fully eighty; a woman of great excellence and dignity of character who said at one time "My reputation and my services belong to my country; my history and my affections are consecrated to my friends. I am not ambitious of of nominal distinctions, and notoriety is my special aversion." She rallied to her side a band of able men like Palfry, Channing and Sumner and interested them in hospital work and public institutions for the poor and unfariunate. In addition to the "Famous Women of the French Court," already noticed in previous notes as being valuable both as history and a study of human nature, is "Marie Louise and the Decadence of the Empire." This covers the intensely dramatic decline of the French Empire from the Russian Campaign when the wife of the Emperor "had the world at her feet" to the desperate campaign of 1814 which concluded her brief and brilliant reign.

European Days and Ways" by Alfred E. Lee, late Consul General of the U. S., is a book of travels of a higher grade than the usual volume which come from the hands of an ordinary traveller. This book covers Germany. Switzerland, Italy and Spain with many interesting criticisms especially on works of art. Stories by Rudyard Kepling, whose books are receiving so much attention in this country and in England at the present time, are stories of Anglo-Indian life and society—life of the people of their white rulers and of the private soldier. It is said that he has for the first time shown English readers what India is like, how full of various life and romance. He seems to have seen and known and been able to make real and vivid the manner of life of all classes in that continent.

"Ascutney Street" by Mrs. Whitney holds up an attractive ideal of character and life not impossible of attainment. Mrs. Deland who our readers will recognize as being the author of the popular book "John Ward Preacher" has published another story called "Sidney" which not unlike the former, abounds in dramatic incidents and is pleasing and entertaining.

"The Anglomaniacs" is bright and vivacious and those who have crossed the Atlantic on a few voyages will not fail to find amusement in the portrayal of scenes upon a European steamer. And will no doubt recognize a familiar character in the British dowager. "Manual Training" is by C. M. Woodward, a person who has given much thought and time to this important matter. No doubt this subject has grown in the minds of the people both in America and England greatly during the last few years and in this work the author discusses most fully the strictly educational bearings in manual work and it is hoped that it will help on in the cause of this rational and most useful education. A writer has said that nations write their histories in three ways: in the book of their Deeds, in the book of their Words and in the book of their Arts. To read one of these

The Gypsy Moth.

This part of the State has recently learned with alarm that the range of the Gypsy Moth is increasing, that it is journeying north, and that the Mystic Valley is in peril from its ravages. For some distance around Medford, where the exotic was first discovered in America, the blighting effects of its voracious appetite are suffered, and an enlargement of its field of operations is viewed with the gravest apprehension.

A couple of years ago, or so, members of the Gypsy Moth family, whose native land is France or thereabouts, found their way to America and settled in Medford. When first discovered their presence excited no fear because nobody knew what they were, but the investigations of gentlemen skilled in the science of insectology demonstrated that the foreign visitor was the veritable Gypsy Moth, which greatly alarmed the fruit and tree cultivators of Medford, for some of them had read that he was a tough customer to handle.

Grave consultations were held, and as soon as the next Legislature convened a committee of Medford gentlemen appeared before it with a petition for protection from the destructive invader. A legislative committee recognized the justice of Medford's appeal for succor and forthwith reported a bill to meet it. It provided for the same old remedy that the Legislature always resorts to for healing all kinds of real or imaginary public ills—namely, a Commission. A Commission was raised and an appropriation voted with no unnecessary delay. In Massachusetts a Commission is considered the great panacea for every public disease. The State is full and running over with them. Two-thirds of them are asylums for broken-down and poverty-stricken politicians.

The Board of Commissioners met, organized, and provided for a fair division of the appropriation. After a while they began to think something about exterminating the foreign pest. That was what they were there for, although at first the fact did not seem to be fully appreciated.

The first step of the Board was to get a large quantity of paris green, a number of sprinklers and a corps of experts to use them. Every tree in Medford suspected of harboring the enemy was filled full of paris green, after which a danger signal was nailed to its trunk informing the public that it had received its squirting and was in no condition to be fooled with. The black and white placards greatly enhanced the beauty of the trees.

So enthusiastically did the Board and their employes go into the work of extermination that they "doctored" trees which did not need it, and a couple of weeks ago Mr. J. T. Foster sued the Board to recover $300 damages which he alleged their recklessly used paris green had inflicted on his fruit trees. Notwithstanding which the Commissioners continue to hold fortnightly meetings and draw their salary with the same regularity as before.

Finding that the Moth seemed to thrive, multiply, and increase its domain on paris green, a little while ago the Commission bethought themselves of feather dusters as a weapon of defence. The brilliant thought was immediately acted on: a load of feather dusters was bought, a small army of men experienced in feather dusters were hired, and the battle reopened. But the bulwark of feather dusters turns out to be no bulwark at all; the Moth sits on the limbs and laughs at his enemies; he is covering more territory daily; and what is to be done?

The JOURNAL is no alarmist, but it thinks heroic measures ought to be taken to advert the threatened calamity.

Why not increase the appropriation? or try the experiment of making up the Board on a non-partisan basis?

It's economical—Brussels soap.

Boston Theatres.

The English version of Offenbach's "Grand Duchess," which recently held the stage at the New York Casino for 100 nights, is the attraction now offered by Manager Aronson's company at the Globe Theatre. It will be continued one week longer and is drawing immense audiences each evening. Unusual care has been taken in putting the opera upon the stage, and some idea of the lavish expenditure for this purpose can be gained from the completeness of other productions by Manager Aronson in this line. The first act scene is a winter encampment of the troops, with the trees and the ground covered with snow, and the entrance of the grand duchess is made in a Russian sled. The second act is a white and amber salon. The first scene of the third act is a corridor in the castle, and the last scene of all is a duplicate of the first act scene, but painted in a summer effect. A military band and drum corps appear in the first act. A sabor dance is introduced in the first act, and a waltz minuet closes the second act. The costumes have all been renewed for this production, and those to be worn by Camille Darville, who appears in the title role, were especially designed by Baron de Grimm.

The laughter-making comedians, Evans and Hoey, "old hoss and me," will present their great success, "A Parlor Match," at the Grand Opera House next week, introducing a number of new features. The piece is sparkling from beginning to end, and in its latest form is more popular than ever. "Old hoss" will continue to collect for the auction room, and I. McCorker still pursues his literary avocation. "A Parlor Match" leads all farce comedies in the amount of money made.

Literary Notices.

THE MUSICAL HERALD, published by Oliver Ditson & Co. in Boston is the leading musical publication in the country. The November number contains pieces of new music and many other things in which musical people will be interested.

THE NEW MOON for November is as bright as a dollar just from the mint. Everything found within its covers is firstclass. It has always been a mystery to us how such an excellent publication as THE NEW MOON is could be afforded at so low a subscription price—only $1.00 a year.

OUR LITTLE ONES for November is a beauty. Its pictures are many and fine. If a large share of its portraits are not from "life"—genuine photographs—then we miss our guess. OUR LITTLE ONES is one of the best youth's magazines, and is published by the Russell Publishing Company, Boston.

The frontispiece of the November CENTURY is that familiar picture "Lincoln and his son Tad." This sterling and very popular magazine celebrates its twentieth anniversary with the November number—a number which is intended to exemplify the best that an illustrated magazine of our day can do for its innumerable readers. In the editorial on the event the editor claims for THE CENTURY a sane and earnest Americanism, an Americanism that deems the best of the Old World none too good for the New. Instead of viewing at length the literary and artistic achievements of the magazine the editor considers it best to celebrate the astonishing progress in magazine printing during the past twenty years in an illustrated article by Theodore De Vinne of the De Vinne Press. There is a profusion and variety in the illustration of the November number which is remarkable even for THE CENTURY—varying from the actinic reproduction of rapid pen work to the exquisite engraving of Cole in the Old Master series—(a full-page after Signorelli.) The literary matter is all of the best, every piece of poetry, tale, sketch, etc., being choice. The November number is a brilliant one.

The merit of Mellin's Food consists not only in its superiority over other substitutes for mother's milk, but also in the readiness with which it is prepared. It is a real blessing to the busy or tired mother, for a very few minutes night and morning are all that are necessary to prepare the baby's food for twenty-four hours.

Mrs. Susan J. Smith observed her ninety second birthday at Sunnyside, Winchester, at the residence of her nephew, Mr. George H. Gilbert, on Oct. 30. Mrs. Smith has two sons, Mr. John H. D. Smith, Treasurer of the Boston Belting Company, and Henry F. Smith of Concord, Mass.; also a daughter, Mrs. Charles R. Bliss of Chicago. Her sister, Miss Lavinia Farnham, who resides with Mrs. Smith, was 84 in August last.

Lawyer McCall is President of an association organized to bring about the abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite to the exercise of suffrage. He was never in better business politically in his life. The poll tax is a relic of feudal times and rightfully has no place in the political economy of this Republic. Only three or four states have laws requiring the payment of a poll tax requisite before the right to vote can be exercised. I hope Lawyer McCall will keep right on until this absurd law now on our statute books is repealed.

As winter draws near the subject of Lamps is often discussed. A good lamp is a household blessing, and a poor one often proves a curse to its owner. There is an advertisement headed "Lamps" in this paper which combines instruction with timely information on this important subject, and we advise a careful reading of it by our readers.

LAMPS.

There are six essential points to a good lamp. It must be tasty in design, perfect in finish, non-leakable, produce the greatest possible light with least expenditure of oil, and be reasonable in price. We know our Lamps fulfil these requirements.

This Banquet Lamp is of finely polished brass, 36 inches high, and has duplex burner. Beautiful muslin, silk fringed shade. A real gem, costing only $2.49, that will give you splendid service for a lifetime.

Parlor Lamps with delicately colored bisque base, hand-decorated shade, lift-out fount, unbreakable chimney, with patent extinguisher, are a real pleasure, and at $2.69, our price, are not luxuries, but a necessity in every house.

We have lots of patterns and mounts, and can suit a full or lean pocket.

10 cents buys a real cute medium-size hand lamp, fully furnished with chimney and wick. See illustration.

If you have any idea of purchasing any kind of a lamp, you will lose money if you do not write us and let us give you our price for it delivered free at your home.

JESUS IN COURT.

LESSON VI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 9.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiii, 1-12. Commit Verses 11, 12—Golden Text, Luke xxiii, 4—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And the whole multitude of them arose, and led Him unto Pilate." It is written in Ps. ii, 1, 2, that the Gentiles rage and the kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against His anointed; so that to fulfill the Scriptures Jesus had to pass through the hands of Gentiles as well as Jews. And there we find Him in this lesson.

2. "And they began to accuse Him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that He Himself is Christ a King." Thus the rulers of the Jews accused Jesus before Pilate. What an accusation! Two lies and one truth in that which is here written.

3. "And Pilate asked Him, saying, Art Thou the King of the Jews? And He answered him, and said, Thou sayest it." The accounts in Matthew and Mark agree with this, but John gives the additional information that Jesus said to Pilate, "Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of Me?" (John xviii, 34).

4. "Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, I find no fault in this man." According to the account in John, Pilate said these words three different times (John xviii, 38; xix, 4, 6), thus giving a threefold direct testimony to the innocence of Jesus. And this from the Roman governor, who was certainly supposed to be capable of forming a somewhat correct judgment concerning a person's guilt or innocence.

5. "And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place." Afraid of losing their prey, they lie more vehemently concerning Him.

6. "When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean." He saw himself in a difficult position and was glad of the possibility of escape from it. He had before him an innocent man, and also a cruel and bloodthirsty people crying for the death of that innocent man. How could it be that from Galilee to Jerusalem all the people were stirred up against Cæsar by this man's teaching and the Roman governor never have heard of it. Pilate sees now foolish and ungrounded this accusation is and he pays no heed to it. He is only anxious for some way out of his difficulty.

7. "And as soon as he knew that He belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent Him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time." In chap. iii, 1, we read that Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea and Herod tetrarch of Galilee. Herod's being in Jerusalem at this time was no doubt of God, that he, too, as another Gentile ruler, might see and testify to the innocence of Jesus, thus providing two witnesses from among the Gentile rulers.

8. "And when Herod saw Jesus he was exceeding glad, for he was desirous to see Him of a long season, because he had heard many things of Him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by Him." In chaps. ix, 9, we learn that after beheading John, Herod heard of Jesus and desired to see Him. In Mark vi, 14, we read that Herod thought that Jesus was John the Baptist risen from the dead, and that that accounted for His mighty works. Jesus the Nazarene was evidently talked about even at Herod's court, but it must have been as some wonder worker among the poor, of whom the rich and the great knew very little. If Herod wanted much to see Him why did he not see Him? Jesus did not keep Himself hid. As this verse indicates, his desire was only to see the wonder worker and some of His wonders, but it was not worth his while to put himself out for it. He really wanted nothing from the poor Jew of Nazareth, for what could a poor despised Nazarene do for so great a Roman citizen as Herod? But now at last they are face to face; let us observe and listen.

9. "Then he questioned with Him in many words, but He answered Him nothing." Jesus is quietly going forward to His death. He is in the hands of His enemies, and neither in the heart of Herod nor in the heart of any one of His accusers is there the least desire to hear the truth to which He came to bear witness. So He is silent. Herod would like to be entertained; the Jews want only His death; entertainment Jesus will not give; He came not for that purpose; He came to give eternal life, but that Herod does not want.

10. "And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused Him." Representatives of the great accuser from whom all the followers of Jesus suffer, the father of lies, the accuser of the brethren, let us not fear either Him or His, nor be in the least moved; they can only go as far as God permits, but a hair of our heads they cannot hurt beyond this present time.

11. "And Herod with his men of war set Him at naught, and mocked Him, and arrayed Him in a gorgeous robe, and sent Him again to Pilate." Thus is His meekness rewarded by these cruel ones. He will not gratify their curiosity nor entertain them with His wonders, and this is their revenge, and He suffers it meekly, like all the rest of their ill treatment. Is there not something like this on the part of many today, who will not say anything good of such as refuse to provide entertainment for the curious in the house of God, and prefer the truth and the truth alone to draw and keep the people, believing that Jesus lifted up is sufficient to draw and save and keep; in fact, that the old, old story of Jesus and His love is all our need, and even though we be set at nought and mocked and despised for it we will meekly keep on our way? Be not discouraged, dear teachers and preachers, if the Herodians (the worldly ones) despise you for your narrow ways when you join not with them. Think of Jesus despised and crucified, and let the cross be all your glory. There are many with whom it is useless to argue; the only way of ttmes is to say nothing.

12. "And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves." It is not strange that two such as Pilate and Herod should be at enmity, for they knew not the Prince of Peace; but it is strange indeed when those who bear the name of the Prince of Peace are at enmity among themselves and will not unite in His service; yet such things are often seen. They will unite against Him, and often be brought together by some scheme which dishonors Him, and is on the side of His enemies; but to humble before Him for united effort for His glory, some will not do it. Blessed are all such as are made friends on His behalf.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. L. Flanders & Co's Drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

The rather vulgar diatribe which purports to be issued by certain "independent" voters of this State is not of a nature to give Republicans much uneasiness. The absurdity of most of its accusations are transparent. It is not calculated to win the intelligence of Massachusetts over to the party of free trade, free rum and Tammany Hall, and as to the ignorance of Massachusetts it is there already.

ENDURANCE.

How much the heart may bear, and yet not break!
How much the flesh may suffer and not die!
Question much if any pain or ache
Of soul or body brings our end more nigh.
Death chooses his own time; till that is worn
All evils may be borne.

We shrink and shudder at the surgeon's knife,
Each nerve recoiling from the cruel steel,
Whose edge seems searching for the quivering life!
Yet to our sense the bitter pangs reveal
That still, although the trembling flesh be torn,
This also can be borne.

We see a sorrow rising in our way,
And try to flee from the approaching ill,
We seek some small escape—we weep and pray,
But when the blow falls then our hearts are still—
Not that the pain is of its sharpness shorn,
But think it must be borne.

We wind our life about another life,
We hold it closer, dearer than our own;
Anon it faints and falls in deadly strife,
Leaving us stunned, and stricken, and alone;
But ah! we do not die with those we mourn;
This also can be borne.

Behold, we live through all things, famine, thirst,
Bereavement, pain; all grief and misery,
All woe and sorrow; life inflicts its worst
On soul and body, but we cannot die,
Though we be sick, and tired, and faint, and worn;
Lo! all things can be borne.

She Ought to Have Known It.

The peculiar ideas which some women have of the way in which railroads are run was well exhibited in a little scene which took place in the Union depot information bureau. "Give me my satchel," she commanded nervously; "I want to catch the train for New York." "Train for New York's gone," said the clerk, producing the grip. "Gone!" shrieked the woman. "Why, you ninny, I wanted that train. Do you understand, sir? I wanted to go to New York city on that train. I have a great mind to have you discharged. You, young man, are unworthy of holding the responsible position in the package and information department."

The clerk cowered. "Ma'am," said he, "I did not know that you were coming. I—I"——

"Didn't know I was coming? What excuse is that? You should have known it."

She gathered up her satchel and marched off. The clerk with a sad air took out a pen and wrote on a piece of paper a permit allowing him to live, but when he went out and sought the woman who owned the earth she had gone.—Albany Argus.

The Number Three.

Occasionally I pass an hour with a club acquaintance who sometimes startles one by the eccentric turns of his mind. His latest vagaries of thought he impressed upon me last night. "Do you know," he said, "that the numeral 'three' is always present before us in some shape or other? For instance, the three branches of an army—infantry, cavalry and artillery; three functions of body in nutrition—mastication, digestion and assimilation; three kingdoms in nature—animal, vegetable and mineral; three genders—masculine, feminine and neuter; three parts of the human body—head, trunk and extremities; three governmental powers—executive, judicial and legislative. I could go on much farther," he added; "the subject is rather odd." I thought so myself and left my friend buried in an armchair smoking his cigar.—New York Star.

The Popular Carnation.

A stranger who stood on Broadway Sunday afternoon took occasion to remark upon the floral buttonhole decorations worn by New Yorkers. He thought it singular that of sixty-five boutonnieres he had counted upon as many individuals there was only a single rose. In Chicago and Philadelphia, and even Boston, the white and red rosebud is pre-eminently the favorite. New Yorkers stick to pinks, heliotropes and violets, with occasional orchids, but the florists sell more pinks the year round than anything else for this purpose. An economical man, with a fondness for appearing jaunty, can make a crimson pink go further than any other flower on earth.—New York Sun.

A Millionaire Farmer.

The particular fad of W. K. Vanderbilt is the collecting of oak carvings, and he has some very fine specimens, for which he has paid very large sums of money. He is also fond of growing rare fruit, and grows a great deal of it on his Long Island farm. This also has called for what other people would regard as very startling expenditures of money, but the result is that in winter his table is supplied after a fashion that is not equaled by anybody else in New York or Newport. New York Cor. Chicago Herald.

Don't Disfigure the Flag.

Don't fail to remember that congress has passed a law under which a fine of $50 may be imposed upon anybody who prints or paints on the national flag, or affixes to it in any way any advertisement for public display or private gain. It is a good law, and should have been enacted long ago to save "Old Glory" from disfigurement.—New York Telegram.

Another Idiot.

Jack—Didn't you have your revolver in your hand when you saw the burglar?

Tom—Oh, yes!

Jack—Well, why didn't you shoot at him?

Earrings worth from $5,000 to $8,000 a pair excite no wonder today; formerly they were seldom seen. Of the French crown jewels sold in Paris over three years ago, more than one-third, aggregating over $500,000 in value, came to the United States.

Fifty Spasms a Day.

Had Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., lived two thousand years ago she would have been thought to be possessed by evil spirits. She was subject to nervous prostration, headaches, dizziness, backache, palpitation and forty to fifty spasms a day. Though having been treated by eight physicians for years without success, she was permanently cured by one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. A trial bottle of this new and wonderful medicine and a finely illustrated treatise free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

In its advertising columns the Boston Globe announces that canned goods of many varieties "are as low or lower than at any time for the past six months." In its editorial columns it reiterates its old assertion that the price of food and clothing has gone up all along the line. Though repeatedly contradicted by its own advertisers, the Globe apparently thinks that this particular falsehood is a "good enough weapon" until after election day.—Journal.

A JACK OF ALL TRADES.

He'll Do Pretty Nearly anything Short of Repairing a Man-of-War.

There is a little store in Brooklyn where you can leave an order for repairs of any kind and have it promptly attended to. The proprietor of the place does a general repairing business. He employs a score of men. On the slate the other day were orders for a patch on a leaky tin roof, a new trap door under a stationary washtub, a tumble down chimney to be rebuilt, three panes of glass to be set, a new catch for an iron gate, grates for two stoves, firebrick for a range, a new post for clothes lines, a kitchen to be painted and whitewashed, a cellar to be cleaned, a coal bin to be rebuilt, fifteen stoves to be put in order, three to be set up, stovepipes to be repaired, two bath tubs to be painted and a broken gas fixture to be mended.

"There is always something out of repair in one house or another," said the brisk proprietor, "and some of the things my men do you would find it hard to have done anywhere else in town for anything like a reasonable price. We saved a man $10 yesterday by matching the wall paper in his dining room. A patch had been burned by a careless maid, and if we hadn't matched the paper the walls would have been repapered. One of our men is out this morning fitting keys to locks in a house on Hart street, another man is repairing a broken sidewalk, a third is putting weather strips on a Bedford avenue house.

"An average job with us costs less than a dollar. Others charge double that for the same class of work. In our store room we have enough miscellaneous truck to astonish a wholesale junkman. It all comes into play. In the hands of jacks of all trades, such as our men are, every nail, screw, slab of wood, piece of wire, and bit of piping is of value."

A little woman in widow's weeds entered the store at this juncture. She enumerated seven articles of tin of her domestic stock that needed mending and asked how much it would cost.

"I'll send the tinker right around, ma'am, and whatever he says is right is right. I think about twenty-five cents would be the proper figure, without knowing just what there is to be done."—New York Sun.

The Armenians of Constantinople.

I met a number of Armenians during my stay in Constantinople. They do the business of the capital of Turkey, and you find them everywhere. They carry all the burdens of the city, and the Turks call them "the camels of the empire." They have a guild of porters who are practically the drays of the city. These porters carry immense burdens upon their backs. They have a little saddle of leather which they fasten just below their shoulders, and on which the burden rests. A strap is tied around the box or bag which they are carrying, and this is fastened to the shoulders and sometimes supported by a strap around the forehead.

These men bend themselves half double as they work, and some of them will carry as much as 500 pounds from one part of Stamboul to the other. A number of the Armenians are architects, others are engineers, and I met one very bright Armenian doctor. When I went to get my letter cashed in the bank an Armenian clerk figured up the exchange and an Armenian cashier gave me my money.—Frank G. Carpenter in National Tribune.

He Thought So.

A middle aged woman called at a Grand River avenue drug store the other evening and asked for morphine, and the clerk replied to her request with:

"Is it for your husband?"

"Oh, no, sir; I haven't got any."

"You don't think of suicide?"

"Far from it."

"What do you take it for?"

"Must I tell, sir?"

"You must."

"Well, then, don't you think that a woman 40 years old, who has had her first offer of marriage less than an hour ago, naturally wants something to quiet her nerves and give her a good night's sleep?"

The druggist thought so, and she got her nerve soother.—Detroit Free Press.

A Potent Incantation.

On All-Hallows eve there is one form of incantation which is known to be extremely, nay, terribly potent when all others have failed. You go out by yourself, taking a handful of hempseed with you. You get to a secluded place and begin to scatter the seed as you walk along the road. You say, "Hempseed, I sow thee; hempseed, I sow thee; he who is to be my true love, appear now and show thee." And if you look furtively over your shoulder you will behold the desired apparition following you.—William Black in Harper's.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1 00 at all druggists. Sample bottle free.

A negro woman apparently died in Shreveport, La., but when the funeral procession arrived at the cemetery next day, she rose up in her coffin and wanted to know what was going on. The mourners were terror stricken and dispersed in a hurry, leaving the woman to take care of herself. She is now as well as ever.

FIGHTING FOR THE LITTLE FELLOW.

A Muscular Farmer Defends a Small Half-Back in a Football Match.

An amusing incident occurred some time since at a football match between two western college teams. The game had been well advertised, and an enthusiastic crowd had gathered to witness the contest. The town in which it took place was a small one, and a goodly number were in attendance. Among the members of the visiting eleven was a very slight young gentleman, whose appearance would lead one to believe that he would be an easy prey for the rushers of the other side, but who, nevertheless, was an athlete of the first order, schooled in all the muscular arts, from tumbling to boxing.

The game opened and proceeded merrily, the elevens being well matched and the contest an exciting one. During the course of the fun a very verdant specimen of farm hand was noticed to grow interested in the game. He had occupied a seat in the grand stand, but as the contest grew warmer had forced his way nearer and nearer to the ropes, until he had succeeded in getting his anatomy as near the field as they would permit. His sympathies were evidently with the visitors, and every good play on their part was a signal for a hairraising whoop from the countryman. Especially did he interest himself in the little halfback, and frequently encouraged that young gentleman with cries of, "Go in, little feller! Don't let 'em bluff you! You ain't very big, but you're a daisy!"

At last the ball came with a beautiful sky kick right into the small player's hand, and seeing the lines of his opponents somewhat ragged he seized the ball and went for the other goal like a streak of white lightning. For fully half the distance he went, "bucking" and dodging, leaving two big players rolling in the dust, while the gentleman from the back districts almost lost his head. "By gosh! That's the stuff! Haw! haw! Hit 'em again! Go it, little feller! Now you got 'em! Just said right"—but just then a heavy rusher bounced the man with the ball and in a moment the little fellow was the center of a struggling, kicking, yelling mass of humanity.

The countryman's face lengthened and then brightened suddenly as his favorite cleared himself for a moment, and then the crowd was on to him again, and the fight was hotter than before. "Here, by gol, you fellers let up on that!" yelled the spectator as the halfback went down. "By gosh, I won't see no little feller bullied!" he exclaimed a moment later, and springing over the ropes he made a dash for the "scrap." Not looking for outside interference the players were taken by surprise, and in response to the vigorous blows and shoves of the countryman were soon sprawling in all directions. "Now, young feller, jest get up and tote your ball wherever you darn please."—Chicago News.

The Progress of Minstrelsy.

"An idea of the progress of minstrelsy," says Lew Dockstader, "may be gained from the fact that in the days of the San Francisco Minstrels it required only about $1,500 a week to run a show. Now nothing short of $2,400 will meet the weekly expense. It may not have occurred to many of the theatre going public, but the female impersonator has been laid on the shelf. He flourished for a long time, but you don't hear or see any more of him.

"Let me say that there is nothing like being jolly. 'A merry soul maketh a lean grave yard,' somebody has said, or ought to have said, whichever you like.

"Take this advice: Smile, grin, snigger, chuckle, guffaw, cackle, burst out, roar with laughter at every opportunity. Remember that laughter is like a ten grain quinine pill to a man that has the malaria. It has a tonic. Ha! Ha!"—Ernest Jarrold in New York Journal.

Romance of a Ring.

The romance of a ring, ending in tidings of a long missing son, has come to the surface in Scranton. When City Engineer Blewitt attended the state firemen's convention at Chester, he met George Sykes, of Swarthmore. Sykes informed him that he had in his possession a ring which Reese F. Davis, formerly of Scranton, had traded with him just before a battle in West Virginia, in 1865, in which Davis was killed, and that he was anxious to communicate with Davis' relatives with a view of sending the ring to them. A few days after the appearance of this statement John R. Davis, of Pittston, and William Davis, of Bellevue, father and nephew, called on Blewitt and learned for the first time the story of his son's death.—Scranton Truth.

His Limit.

Sad Young Man—I want you to take this ring back. It's no use to me any more.

Jeweler (encouragingly)—Suppose we hold it for you. You may want it made a trifle larger or smaller in a week or so.

Sad Young Man—Not much. It's been altered four times already.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Formerly jewelers sold only diamonds, rubies, sapphires, emeralds, pearls, garnets and agates, but now it is not unusual to have almost any of the mineralogical gems, such as zircon, tourmaline, spinel or titanite called for, not only by collectors, but by the public, whose taste has advanced in the matter of precious stones as well as in the fine arts.

For the cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh after all other modes of treatment have failed.

Technical Education in England.

The more energetic school boards may be trusted to take advantage of the new grant offered for manual instruction; but very few voluntary managers will be able to meet the initial expense of providing workshops and apparatus. Even a shed capable of holding eighty feet in length of bench room will involve a considerable outlay, and the grant to be earned (six shillings or seven shillings a head) will not more than cover the cost of tools and material. But the main difficulty will be found in providing the teaching. The teacher, according to the instructions, may be one of the ordinary staff if he is sufficiently instructed; otherwise he must be assisted by a skilled artisan.

None but the score or so of elementary masters who have been to Naas or Leipzig, or attended Sloyd classes at home, can possess at present the requisite qualifications, but there is no doubt that manual instruction will soon form part of the regular curriculum of a training college. The expressed object of the department is not to substitute for the last stage of schooling an apprenticeship to some trade or handicraft, but to educate the eye and hand. The ordinary blacksmith or carpenter is no more capable of imparting such education than the ordinary schoolmaster is of shoeing a horse or making a door.—St. James' Budget.

The one lawyer whom above all others the legal fledglings look up to in awe and humble admiration is Joseph Choate. Mr. Choate is the personification of the calm, insistent, relentless cross-examiner. All the arts and tricks have become second nature to him. He can cross-examine a witness without ever looking at him. He is master of enunciation. He can repeat a question upon the halting request of a witness, giving to the repetition precisely the same intonation he gave at first.

He can suavely and comfortably convey a witness through a leafy bower of apparently harmless questions only to land him in a clinging web of embarrassment and confusion. His command of the arrows of irony is superb. To hear him quietly draw out "Ah!" when a witness has contradicted himself is a revelation.

To his work was due the success of the famous contest of the Stewart will. When Judge Hilton finally compromised Mr. Choate received an enormous fee. His firm, Evarts, Choate & Beaman, has the yearly income of $200,000.—New York Press.

"Taking Interest."

"She," said the manager of a great retail establishment, pointing out the forewoman of one of the departments, "is the most successful of all the three hundred salespeople in the house. She began behind a small counter where different colored embroidering silks were sold. I observed that customers would ask for her, and if she was engaged would wait until she was ready to serve them.

"I wished to find out the reason for this, and offered to bring another saleswoman to a patient customer one day.

"'No,' she said. 'Miss Crale never forgets the kind of silk I use. She remembers the grade and even the shade which I bought before. And she takes such an interest in it!'

"These two qualities—her memory of the preferences of her customers and her interest in them—have made her the best saleswoman that we have ever had."—Youth's Companion.

The Force of Habit.

"How use doth breed a habit in a man!" Old Billy Shakespeare said that one time, and I guess he is about right. Notice that laborer there putting on his coat. Easy enough and common enough. "Aye, there's the rub." It's common. He sticks his left arm in the sleeve, hunches his shoulders till the coat is half on, and then puts his right arm in, hunches again and it's on. Bet 'leven dollars he couldn't put it on in half an hour by putting his right arm in first instead of his left arm. It would be all backward and he'd have to turn a somersault. Now, that cigar that you are holding on the right side of your mouth. 'Twouldn't seem right at all for you to smoke left handed.—Interview in Detroit News.

A Clock Two Hundred Years Old.

E. F. Clarke has a clock in his shop, the case of which he is to polish up, that has a history. The clock is the property of H. S. Beers, of Brookfield, and is probably over 200 years old. When the British went through this section in revolutionary times they took the two heavy lead weights that run the clock to use in the manufacture of bullets, and left four six pound iron shot in their place. The shot are still used as weights.—Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

Woman's Column.

A Live Rector.

Rev. Dr. Ringgold, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church at Knoxville, Tenn., preached a rousing woman suffrage sermon recently, in the course of which he said, among other pungent things:

"There never was a time, there never was a country, in which virtue and intelligence could accomplish more than at this time, in this country. And right here and now, you may double the power of virtue and intelligence by giving the best half of your population a vote in selecting the men to make the laws that govern the country. In this year of grace, 1890, these disfranchised millions of Christian women are doing more to save this country than any portion of its citizens. They are one of the chief instrumentalities by which Almighty God is saving the world. They make real and palpable to the eyes of men the spirit of the Gospel. They illustrate the world's advance by showing the rapid progress made since that very recent date when woman was man's beast of burden or his toy or plaything. They are the best teachers in your schools, and are training the minds and forming the characters of the next generation. They are writing some of your best books, and they stand at the head of your highest schools of learning. They sanctify your homes, and make life beautiful and blessed. But, with all their virtue and intelligence, they may not nullify the vote of the grog-seller, the alien or the tramp. With all their virtue and intelligence, a hundred or a hundred housand of them may not nullify the vote of the man too ignorant to read his own ballot."

The Pretty Blonde Voter.

So many ill-natured and untruthful things are said in the newspapers of the women who want to vote that the following graceful little "Kodak" sketch in the Boston Transcript of the "coming woman" is particularly gratifying. Says the Transcript:

"A pretty blonde girl in a blue gown came down Beacon Street the other day with a formidable-looking document in her hand. A friend who encountered her asked:

"'Where are you going, my prett maid?'

"'I'm going to City Hall, sir,' she said.

"'What to do there, my pretty maid?'

"'To pay for my poll,' she smiling said."

"Her friend went with her. Her formidable-looking document set forth her name and residence. 'I believe in patriotism,' said the girl of the blonde poll that was shortly to be taxed, 'and I was twenty-one the other day, so I bought I'd lose no time in being registered.' It was worth while to go to City Hall with her. She was beckoned to a corner by an uplifted finger; she handed her document over a rail. 'Hold up your hand,' said the official who took her name, and she bowed with solemnity as the oath was administered. She was told that she must pay her tax later, and she was quickly in the street again with her friend. One of the women at a table near the door had given her a circular and told her eight thousand women of Boston have registered to vote on school questions. 'We girls must be assessed every time,' said the blonde votary of patriotism. 'Then you don't do it because you think it's your duty?' 'Why, no; I like to. I'm twenty-one, you know,'—with a joyful smile. She was plainly rejoicing in reaching her majority. Well, why not, since she mends her small brother's clothes, and paints charmingly, and combines domestic and artistic virtues with her civic ones?"

Between Two Fires.

"Oh! how I hate these horrid old women's rights women!" thundered Tax-collector Dufferin Jones, throwing his hat on the dining-room sideboard instead of hanging it up on the hall rack. "They're always scolding about paying their miserable little taxes, and about not being represented. I never saw such a stingy, chattering old lot!"

His wife seemed to be in a brown study all during dinner-time.

"What is she thinking about?" inquired Jones pleasantly, after he had allayed his irritation with a good dinner. "The ways and means of getting a new fall bonnet?"

"No, Duffy," replied Mrs. Jones; "I was trying to think what it was Edmund Burke said about John Hampden."

"It's too deep for her, isn't it?" said Jones.

"Oh! I remember the gist of it, Duffy. Old Burke stood up for old Hampden because old Hampden bolted on paying a 'miserable little tax' of twenty shillings and chattered about not being represented; but then old Burke was a horrid men's rights man, you know, dear Duffy, and old Hampden was another."

Dufferin Jones plunged into the hall, and then into the sitting-room, and then into the hall again, and then he clapped his hands to his head.

"Is it his new fall hat he's looking for, dear Duffy?" inquired Mrs. Jones sweetly. "Here it is, right side up in this plate of salad oil and mustard."—Aseuth C. Coolidge, Pacific Rural Press.

THE CHEMIST'S STORY.

I am a chemist. I am the occupant of this responsible and important position in the medical college of P—.

It was about 1 o'clock on a stormy evening that I bade good night to my student, Tom Richards, at the door of my laboratory, at the south end of the college buildings.

Tom was very anxious to know what would keep me up after 12 o'clock, so I told him I was about to commence analyzing the stomach of a Mrs. Johnson, whose husband lay in P—— jail, just across the road from the college, on suspicion that he was the murderer.

As Tom was passing out of the college yard through the gate, his head turned, and bidding me good night, he brushed against a man standing with his back to the college and his face to the prison. The street lamp showed me that the man was in police uniform.

Re-entering my laboratory I took down a glass jar from the shelf and sat down behind my sink to examine it. An hour had passed since the departure of young Richards. I had labored hard to discover traces of the poison in all this, but had been unsuccessful. Joe Johnson, the suspected man, had been a student of mine a few years before. I thought him a good hearted, intelligent fellow, only a little wild, and really began to hope that he might prove innocent, when, among the macerated food, I came upon a small, infinitesimal white grain. By careful manipulation and the use of my magnifying glass I managed to get this upon a piece of smoked glass and examined it.

I was then certain I had discovered arsenic, but to make assurance doubly sure I determined to apply a well known test for that poison.

"Yes," I exclaimed, as I saw the fatal blazon, "Joe Johnson is the murderer of his wife! With the evidence of that mark to back me no power can save him."

"Do you really think so?" said a calm voice behind me.

I turned quickly and discovered a tall, lank policeman, having red, watery eyes, standing at my office door and staring in. His body looked as if it had been rolled out long before his hands like a molasses candy stick. He had no expression at all in his face, and his policeman's hat was so large that it threatened to settle down on his shoulders. His uniform reassured me and I addressed him with some impatience.

"My friend, I suppose I am wanted to attend an inquest, or what is your purpose?"

I was police surgeon as well as coroner.

"Don't bother, professor; the man ain't dead yet, but they say he will be before morning."

"What's the matter with him?"

"Brain disorder, I mean something wrong here."

I touched my forehead, and so did he as he said: "Ay, as I thought I'd drop in and tell you if you were going to the station to-morrow to take a look and see if it is post mortem or not. Besides I wanted to see where I could always find you in case of need."

I bowed, and attributed his visit to a feeling of curiosity. He sat on the sink, and while his eyes wandered about like one who felt himself called upon to say something, he said:

"Professor, there has been an accident this afternoon—terrible, too."

"What was it?"

"Nitro glycerine explosion up in the iron mills—a hundred fellow mortals busted."

"Sad!"

"Affecting, very." Here he rubbed his mouth with the back of his hand. "Professor, what is that nitro glycerine?"

"It's a very dangerous article," I answered, happy to display my knowledge. "It has nearly twice the destructiveness of gunpowder, but, unlike it, does not explode on the application of heat. A red hot coal dropped into it will not explode it. It will freeze. It is yellow and greasy."

"You don't mean to say so," said the officer, interrupting me in disagreeable tones in the middle of a choice extract from one of my lectures. "Why, but you haven't told me how it goes off. If the fire won't burst it, what in—(hem)—will?"

I told him if it were pressed, or anything fell on it, it would explode.

"Place it under the crusher of a cider mill, strike it with a hammer, let a weight fall on it from a height"—

"Yes," said the man, "and that rouses its volcaner, does it?"

"I suppose, professor, that ere can would make a mighty big noise if allowed to explode here all at once?"

"It would blow the entire building to atoms," said I, resuming the analysis of Mrs. Johnson's stomach.

"No?" I heard the policeman remark in deliberate Yankee tones, "you don't say so?"

The next moment I lay on my back, a gag in my mouth, terribly frightened and sick at heart. Over me stood the policeman and the first thing that functionary did was—looking me straight in the face—to take off his nose. He then rid himself of his eyebrows, hair and cap, and became a determined looking fellow, with the eyes of a fiend and the nose of a Roman.

"So you think," said the metamorphosed, in the tones of a gentleman, "that nothing can save Joe Johnson from the rope? Poor fellow! It does look like it! But, my dear professor, Joe Johnson is fortunate enough to have in me a devoted friend as well as brother. I have undertaken to save him, and he shall be saved. In order to accomplish this end it will be necessary to remove from the face of the earth not only the stomach of his miserable wife yonder, but also, my dear professor—I am sorry to be obliged to say it, for I believe you were my brother's teacher and friend—yourself as well." I saw that he was in deadly earnest.

"Your death must apparently result from accident—at least so it must seem to the authorities. My brother is in jail and they will not suspect him, and they certainly will not suspect me."

What terrible deed was in this brain hatching—was he going to murder me? Was it myself who was to hang, instead of Johnson?

No; yes. He placed the line pulley like over an arm of a hanging chandelier. This was altogether too slight a support even for one of my tender frame. It was not to be hanging then. Under the weight on the floor he placed a can of nitro-glycerine; I recognized the yellow string; it was a fuse, and it would burn in sixty minutes. It would run across the marble slab; there was no hope of igniting any substance that would warn my friends.

"Do you begin to see through it?" asked Johnson's brother.

I believe I cursed him with my eyes. I could only breathe through my nostrils, and great veins were swelling and growing hot in my forehead. Drawing a match from his pocket he lighted and applied it to the fuse; that little tyrant that gave a man an hour to live, to kill him at the end of it—that little irresponsible terror that, less merciful than Providence, told a man the second he was to die, if fright and horror spared him to himself. Slowly the flames crept snake like around the twine.

"In one hour," said the prisoner's brother, "you will be in heaven or hell. I will watch with you for half an hour, and the other half you will spend alone."

He sat down some minutes in a chair watching the flame. Then he arose and took a piece of porcelain, with the murderer's name thereon, from the table, and shook his head gloomily.

"I am chemist enough to know it is arsenic," he said. "Yes, those bright, metalic eyes, a betrayal of the guilty! Science, thou wouldst kill my brother—thou shalt save him. Let me see in whose hands thou art the most powerful."

The half hour wore slowly away. Oh, heavens! What agony did I suffer! Not for myself, but for my child. The fuse burned on—on. The half hour is up. The brother of the murderer rises to go. Joy.

"Commit your soul to God's keeping," he said. "You hold the evidence of my brother's guilt—nothing can save you now."

With that he turned to take his hat from off the table covered with the crimson cloth beneath which hid my priceless boy. Something attracted his attention. He held out his hands and reached forward. I thought he had discovered my boy. No; he was lifting something in either hand—the wires of the electric battery. In another instant my boy had leaped from under the table, and was turning the crank fast and furiously.

The murderer's brother was in the power of my boy. He could not drop the wires; he was helpless. How my boy cried for help! The old college rang with his voice. The prisoner's brother added his voice to my boy's in his agony. In an instant a great length burned away. It would just last five minutes and no more.

"Father!" shouted my boy, "it no assistance comes this villian must die with us. I dare not free him. Help! help! help!"

Alas! I could not answer him.

Thank God! But some one else did. The fuse is burned up. The rope is on fire—the nitro-glycerine! The door opens; Tom Richards, on a midnight visit to the sick, has heard the cry; he comprehend all; seizes the can in his hand, the weight descends indeed, but not on the death dealing oil. No; down it goes through the office floor—down, down, like an evil spirit, to give back a dull metallic echo from the stones of the cellar beneath.

We are saved.

Joe Johnson, the prisoner, was hanged, but his brother remains unpunished by the law, for he stabbed himself with a knife and thus escaped the hangman's rope.—H. H. in Atlanta Constitution.

Economical Living.

One of the subjects talked and written about a good deal at the present time is how to live cheaply. Prices of all the great staples of life are high. Rents are enormous. Fashions are exacting. Wants multiply while resources diminish. How to make strap and buckle meet is the problem which presses on hundreds of housekeepers. It is what is done to keep up appearances that destroys the equilibrium, outgo and income, and makes life a drudgery and vexation. How to live cheaply is a question easy enough to answer if one will be content with a cheap living. Substitute comfort for show. Put convenience in the place of fashion. Study simplicity. Refuse to be beguiled into a style of living above what is required by your position in society and is justified by your resources. Set a fashion of simplicity, neatness, prudence and inexpensiveness, which others will be glad to follow, and thank you for introducing. Teach yourself to do without a thousand and one pretty and showy things which wealthy people purchase, and pride yourself on being just as happy without them as your rich neighbors are with them. Put so much dignity, sincerity, kindness, virtue, and love into your simple and inexpensive home that its members will never miss the costly fripperies and showy adornments, and be happier in the cosy and comfortable apartments than most of their wealthy neighbors are in their splendid establishments. It does not follow that in order to live cheaply one must live meanly. The best comforts of life are not costly. Taste, refinement, good cheer, wit, and even elegance, are not expensive. There is no trouble about young people marrying with no outfit but health and love and an honest purpose, provided they will practice the thrift and prudence to which their grandparents owed all their success, and make their thought and love supply what they lack in the means of display. Those who begin life at the top of the ladder generally tumble off, while those who begin at the foot acquire steadiness, courage and strength of arm and will as they rise.—Anon.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, N. Y.

The silk trade of Bengal has declined steadily since 1876, and never before were prices as low as now. The revival of the silk trade in Europe is the reason for the falling off.

Oliver Wendell Holmes on Death.

No human being can rest for any time in a state of equilibrium, where the desire to live and that to depart, just balance each other. If one has a house, which he has lived and always means to live in, he pleases himself with the thought of all the conveniences it offers him, and thinks little of its wants and imperfections. But once having made up his mind to move to a better, every incommodity starts out upon him, until the very ground-plan of it seems to have changed in his mind; and his thoughts and affections each one of them packing up its little bundle of circumstances, have quitted their several chambers and nooks, and migrated to the new home, long before its apartments are ready to receive their bodily tenant. It is so with the body. Most persons have died before they expire—died to all earthly longings, so that the last breath is only, as it were, the locking of the door of the already deserted mansion. The fact of the tranquility with which the great majority of dying persons await this locking of those gates of life through which its airy angels have been going and coming, from the moment of the first cry, is familiar to those who have been often called upon to witness the last period of life. Almost always there is a preparation made by Nature for unearthing a soul, just as on a smaller scale there is for the removal of a milk-tooth. The roots which hold human life to earth are absorbed before it is lifted from its place. Some of the dying are weary and want rest, the idea of which is almost inseparable in the universal mind from death. Some are in pain, and want to be rid of it, even though the anodyne be dropped, as in the legend, from the sword of the Death-Angel. Some are strong in faith and hope, so that, as they draw near the next world, they would fain hurry, as the caravan moves faster over the sands when the foremost travellers send word along the file that water is in sight. Though each little party that follows in a foot-track of its own will have it that the water to which others think they are hastening is a mirage, not the less has it been true in all ages and for human beings of every creed which recognized a future, that those who have fallen worn out by their march through the desert, have dreamed at last of a River of Life, and thought they heard its murmurs as they lay dying.

Capital Punishment in Different Lands.

Excepting perhaps the Russian plan of execution by the knout—beating the life out of the victim with a loaded lash—the dreadful element of pain to the individual is hardly worthy of consideration. The guillotine is certainly very rapid in its action, and, as far as can be judged by analogy with similar phenomena, all sensation is abolished on the instant of the stroke. The communication with the pain centres is once cut off, and the sensation current is instantly interrupted. The only revolting part of the preceding is the necessary shedding of blood; but this, scriptually speaking, should render the killing contract more valid. As to rapidity and effectiveness the same thing is done with the heavy Japanese sword, and with scarcely less precision. The Spanish garrotte crushes the cervical spine and upper spinal cord by means of a screw, quickly working through the back of an iron collar. Death here is practically instantaneous. The same may be said also of hanging. The instant the noose tightens its choking grip, consciousness is gone. The contorting spasms of the larger muscles are merely involuntary movements that have no connection with appreciable pain. At least, this is the testimony of men who have been cut down while insensible from attempted suicide by such means, or who have been similarly rescued from accidental hanging. When there has been bungling, the rope should not be blamed.—Dr. Geo. F. Shrady, in Arena for October.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try try it. They've Lost Millions.

A thief undiscovered belongs as much to the outfit of a phenomenally famous singer as her indispensable rouge pot. The lack of a perfect shape does not signify, but the lack of a thief would be ruin. Adelina Patti has been robbed by night and by day, in Europe and America, on shore and at sea, in hotels and on railway trains. Carlotta Patti and Christine Nilsson and —but why mention names.

An incredible amount of diamonds and jewels have disappeared in this way without ever turning up again. But the lady artists are forgiving. They do not prosecute the thieves. They do not go to the police. They do not offer rewards. Perhaps they know that the gold in their throats can easily be coined, and that their rippling notes can soon be changed into rows of pearls. They are easy going and soon forget their loss. A royal present to a lady artist which does not get stolen has missed its object, and cases have indeed occurred where presents which were never given were stolen.

One reason why many people always have such great burdens, is because they are not standing in the right place to lift much.

Woman's Column.

Three thousand women voted in Binghamton alone, at the recent school elections in New York.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, it is understood, will be made President of the Lady Managers of the Chicago World's Fair, if she will accept the office; otherwise, Mrs. John A. Logan is likely to be elected.

The group in marble called "The Struggle for Liberty," now on exhibition in New York City, is the work of two Danish sculptors, Prof. Didierichsen and his daughter, of Copenhagen.

The movement by women of New York to aid in securing a better city government began with the members of St. George's Episcopal Church. The appeal sent out by the women was read in churches of all denominations in New York.

At the annual meeting of the New England Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools, held in Boston, last week, Miss Helen A. Shafer, president of Wellesley College, was elected a member of the executive committee, the only woman on the list of officers.

Miss Forsyth, of the Forsyth Technical School for Women, London, proposes, should funds be forthcoming, to open a branch for the special training of girls for colonial life, teaching particularly dairy work, gardening, poultry and bee-keeping upon an actual farm.

Belfast is the only municipal borough in Ireland in which women have full municipal suffrage. The same qualifications are required as for men, and the act defining these qualifications says: "For all purposes connected with and having reference to the right to vote in municipal elections, the word person in this act includes women." Four thousand seven hundred and fifty-six women were found qualified to vote for city councillors.

Miss Harriet Colfax, a cousin of the late Vice-President Colfax, has had charge for nearly thirty years of the lighthouse at Nichigan City, one of the most important beacons on that sea of storms, Lake Michigan. At the time of her appointment lard-oil lamps were used, and it was her nightly duty to make her way along a slippery breakwater, often in the teeth of a gale, and climb an icy ladder, to set her light at dusk and replace it at midnight. Of late years gasoline has been substituted. Miss Colfax's helper is an old school friend, Miss Ann Hartwell, and the mutual affection of these two isolated workers might furnish a new chapter for The Friendships of Women.

Mrs. Lucinda H. Stone, of Kalamazoo, Mich., was present during a part of the annual meeting of the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ, held last week in Chicago. Mrs. Stone, though not a college graduate, is a woman of high educational attainments, and has rendered distinguished services to the cause of education. It was chiefly through her efforts that the doors of Michigan University were open to women twenty years ago. The honorary degree of Ph. D., recently conferred upon Mrs. Stone by the University of Michigan, makes her eligible to membership in the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ, and the Association last week, by a unanimous vote, invited her to honor them by becoming a member.

A Fortunate Woman.

Mrs. Mary L. Baker, of Ovid, Mich., has reason to be very thankful. She was a great sufferer from heart disease for years. Was short of breath, had hungry spells, pain in her side, fluttering, faintness, etc. After taking two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, she says, "I am better than for 20 years. My mind and eyesight have improved wonderfully. I advise all peasons thus afflicted to use this great remedy. Sold by Charles H. Buss druggist. The Faith of the Future.

The life of men and nations has not been a floundering on through useless disorder and confusion, trial and strife, war and bloodshed; but it has been a struggling onward to an end. This, I believe, has been the story of the world from the beginning. Before the Christian, before the Hebrew system appeared, there was religion, worship, faith, morality in the world, and however erring, yet always improving from age to age. Those systems are great steps in the human progress; but they are not the only steps. Moses is venerable to me. The name of Jesus is "above every name"; but my reverence for him does not require me to lose all interest in Confucius and Zoroaster, in Socrates and Plato. In short, the world is a school; men are pupils in this school; God is its builder and ordainer. And He has raised up for its instruction sages and seers, teachers and guides; ay, martyred lives, and sacrificial toils and tears and blood have been poured out for it. The greatest teaching, the greatest life, the most affecting, heart-regenerating sacrifice, was that of the Christ. This great school of life I regard but as the infant-school of eternity. The pupils, I believe, will go on forever learning. —Orville Dewey.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Republican convention for the nomination of candidates for Mayor and members of the School Board will be held at Savings Bank Block, Pleasant street, at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening, Nov. 20. The several City Wards will elect delegates to the convention to-morrow, Saturday, evening.

SOME CENSUS FIGURES.

Every once in a while some wise old croaker "bobs serenely up" and declares that New England in point of population is going to the "demnition bow-wows" at a 2-40 gait. There are people scattered over Uncle Sam's dominions who like to hear that New England is going that way, but the Land of the Pilgrims is still alive and kicking, and is likely to remain in that hopeful condition for some time to come.

Take Massachusetts for example: According to the Federal census of 1880 this State stood 7th on the list in point of population; the census of 1890 assigns her to the 6th place, and gives her a population of 2,233,407, against 1,783,085 in 1880, a gain of 25.26 per cent. From 1860 to 1870 her gain was 18.38; from 1870 to 1880, 22.35 per cent. These figures show not only a handsome gain in population but an increased per cent rate each succeeding decade that is in the highest degree satisfactory.

In only one of the 9 States composing the North Atlantic Division was the per cent of increase from 1880 to 1890 greater than Massachusetts, and that was New Jersey — 27.40. The rate of increase in New York during that period was only 17.69, while that of Massachusetts, as stated above, was 25.26.

Leaving out the two Dakotas and Nebraska from the Northern Central Division and its per cent of increase from 1880 to 1890 will be found to be less than that of the North Atlantic Division. Indiana (in the N. C. Division) has increased only 10 65 per cent; Ohio, 14.65; Illinois, 24.06—States to which one would naturally look for a much larger gain in population than in Massachusetts.

We might take other figures from the last "Census Bulletin" kindly forwarded to this office by Supt. Porter which would go to show that New England is more than holding her own with other States in point of growth, but the above are all we have space for at this time.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES.

By referring to the business columns of the JOURNAL it will be seen that Chairman Wyer and Secretary Brown have issued official notice for holding Republican Ward Caucuses at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening, Nov. 15, at the several places designated in the call, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Aldermen and Councilmen, to select delegates to represent the Wards in the Mayoralty convention, and to transact such other business as may be required.

We need not argue the importance of these caucuses because it is easily to be comprehended by everyone who knows enough to read the notice. It is possible, and perhaps probable, that the character of our next city government may depend on the action of the Republicans to-morrow evening, therefore their deliberations should be cool, calm and collected; their motives unselfish; and their conclusions such as will recommend themselves to the good judgment and cordial approval of all the best men of the city.

Republicans, do not fail to attend the caucuses.

FOX'S BUMMERS.

The Cambridge leeches who Capt. Fox innocently thought were honestly managing his Congressional campaign did almost everything towards that gentleman's defeat. They were his friends for "boodle," and for that alone. They were "on the make," as they have been in every Congressional campaign for a dozen years or more, and Fox was an easy victim. We might call names, but the boodlers are too well known in this District to need it.

The singular part of it is that Fox, who is supposed to be a fairly intelligent man, should have been so blinded by these blood-suckers. Everybody else saw that his money was going to enrich a few private pockets in Cambridge rather than for legitimate campaign purposes but he failed to see it and so kept right on allowing them to squeeze the juice out of him until his money was all gone, and then they left him as rats leave a sinking ship.

A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

Richard Terrett, Esq., for many years a prominent and influential member of the Democratic party in this city, is a candidate for the office of Mayor and will make a bold, hard push for victory. Mr. Terrett has led the Woburn Democracy in many a tough battle in years past (some times to success and again to defeat) and it is only fair that the party should now turn to and place their old leader and honored champion at the head of our city government.

In justice to Mr. Terrett the JOURNAL would say that he is "in it" to stay.

FOR SPEAKER.

It is to be presumed that W. P. Barrett, Esq., will be elected Speaker of the Massachusetts House next January without any Republican opposition.

By the way, if Barrett is such a tough one politically how is it that he always carries Melrose along with him for everything he wants? Somehow he never slips up on making connections when he sets out for it.

NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.

President Harrison has appointed Thursday, Nov. 27, as a National Thanksgiving Day, and issued his proclamation accordingly.

☞ The defeat of Mr. Cox of the Cambridge Press for the Legislature is to be regretted about as much as anything that befel the Republicans of a local character on election day. He is a popular man in Cambridge, but the Republican day of doom had come and he had to go down with his brethren.

— The teachers of the evening school in this city are Frank Carter for Principal, and Miss Fellows and Miss Mahoney for Assistant teachers. It is generally understood that the selections are firstclass from one end to the other.

— They say that Ald. Place is not "in it" this year. He doesn't think he is well enough to make the run or perform the duties of the position if elected, so he will leave the track clear for somebody who wants to be Alderman more then he does.

— The funeral of the wife of Mr. Sidney Richardson took place at the Congregational Church yesterday afternoon and was attended by the G. A. R. and Relief Corps in a body and many relatives and friends. The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful. Mrs. Richardson was an estimable lady, and leaves a large circle of warm friends to mourn her loss.

— People who would like to have a good time should bear in mind that the annual supper and sale will be given at the Unitarian chapel at North Woburn on next Thursday evening. Those who attend from the Centre will no doubt enjoy it very much.

— Republicans who fail to attend the Ward caucuses to-morrow will do wrong. The primaries (the real business is done at them) never should be neglected but need always to be fully attended if right action would be secured. Attend the primaries!

— Mr. David Ronco has sold the house in which he resides on Sturgess street to Mr. George S. Hudson, a Boston Herald reporter, and will occupy the one next south of it owned by him. It is a pleasant place and it is understood that Mr. Ronco sold it for a good price.

— John I. Munroe has just sold a house lot, in Cummings Park, Kilby street, and all the Capt. Crane lots on Main street, near Cross street, except one. The purchasers intend building. He has also sold the Hartshorn property on Kilby street. Good prices were realized.

— The rumor that Mr. Beebe is to take the John Cummings tannery was altogether erroneous. Mr. William Ellard is carrying on the establishment and will probably do so for some time to come. He is one of the old firm and a firstclass leather maker and business man.

— To take a stroll through Fitz & Stanley's Boston Branch is almost as good as a Thanksgiving dinner. The stacks of raisens, figs and other preserved fruits (fresh and sweet), nuts, confections, all sorts of products of the oven, cheese, pickles, and other good things—they are enough to make a person's mouth water just to look at.

— Mr. Walton B. Ward of this city has been awarded the contract for changing the old M. E. meeting-house into a business block by its owners, the Mechanics Investment Company. Extensive alterations will be made, the character of which was given in the JOURNAL several weeks ago. They are expected to cost in the neighborhood of $8,000.

— For correct information respecting local affairs and correct counsel as to political matters the columns of the JOURNAL is the place to look. By the way the Woman's Club were somewhat surprised to learn that they held a meeting last week of more than ordinary interest. The facts of the case may be learned by consulting the local columns of this issue of the JOURNAL.

— Wednesday Mr. H. E. Blanchard illuminated the JOURNAL sanctum with the light of his countenance. We recollected him as the gentleman from the Hub who got up the Street Railway Guide a few years ago — a very useful suburban traveling companion; and now he is compiling a city and suburban guide to the U. S. mail business, letter-boxes, etc. He is a useful man in the community.

— Miss Mary Richardson, daughter of the late Mr. James C. Richardson, has returned to her post of duty as Librarian of Atlanta University at Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Ernest C. Richardson, a son of Mr. James C., has resumed his duties as Librarian at Princeton College where his mother will go to live with him. They are an excellent family who will be missed by many people in this city.

— Early week after next a high grade entertainment is to be given here consisting of vocal and instrumental music, readings, etc., concerning which full particulars will be given in the next issue of the JOURNAL. It will afford our people an opportunity to listen to firstclass musical and literary talent, and we have no doubt but that a hallful of people will improve it. It is to be of a high order of merit.

— The fifth season of the Friday Night Club of the Unitarian Society will begin on Friday night, Nov. 28, with a Social. The following officers have been elected for the current year: Board of Directors: President, William F. Davis; Vice Presidents, Henry M. Aldrich, Clara Parker; Secretary and Treasurer, Harry L. Brackett; Benjamin Champney, Albert Thompson, Helen C. Clewley, Emma Wright, Abbie Brackett.

— The ball given by Quealy Court, No 32, C.O.F., in Music Hall last Friday evening was a social event of more than ordinary note. A great many people were present and participated in the dance, for which the very best of music was furnished, and out of the large assembly not one could be found who did not enjoy it. Many elegant dresses were worn by the ladies, while many of the gentlemen appeared in regulation evening suits. It was a nice affair.

— Level-headed Republicans will find considerable "food for reflection" in the letter of our correspondent, "A Republican Tax-payer." The article is worth studying. It might be profitably pondered over, and then reduced to action. There is meat in it, and as we know it to be the earnest desire of all Republicans to take the right course in the Mayoralty business it would not be like them to refuse the letter referred to a careful and conscientious perusal.

— The 3d party people will run a candidate for Mayor this year. If they can find a Republican who does not drink to excess they would prefer him to a Democrat. The Prohibs are against Ald. Kenney teeth and toe-nail and will compass his defeat if possible. Some of them would rather take a boozy Republican than a sober Democrat, but it can hardly be said that that sentiment is in the majority among them. Who their candidate will be remains to be seen.

— A week ago last night the lady friends of the Hudson Associates presented them with two fine chairs and a couple of handsome pictures. Miss Hannah Flaherty made the presents and accompanied the presentation with a neat speech, to which Patrick H. Burke, President of the Associates, replied in fitting words. After this there was a ball for which Gowan's Orchestra furnished excellent music, refreshments, etc. It was a very enjoyable occasion, at which the attendance was very large.

— One of the latest fashionable things in all city houses is an English Clothes Pole, or European Clothes Tree. They are used for airing, drying and ventilating the clothing at night, and are wonderfully convenient. They cost only $2.50 at Paine's Furniture Ware-rooms, 48 Canal street, Boston.

— An alarm at 8.30 last Monday evening from box 67 was for a fire at Mr. William Beggs's on Main street by which his barn was badly burned. The firemen were promptly on the ground as usual and did some fine work, but the building was doomed and it didn't lay in the power of water to save it. The contents, including two horses, a cow, hay, grain, etc., were destroyed causing a loss of about $2,500, on which there was no insurance. Mr. Beggs's handsome residence, close to the barn, escaped uninjured.

— Charles F. Spear, Esq., (lawyer) and family have settled at Hyde Park over on the other side of Boston. He sold the old Spear homestead at Button End lately and has probably quit our city for good. Lawyer Spear is a genial, whole-souled gentleman and has many friends in Woburn who hated have him go. A year or so since he married into one of the best families in this city whose connections are numerous and highly esteemed, while Mrs. Spear, relict of the late Charles Spear, and mother of Lawyer S., is a lady whose departure from Woburn will be deeply regreted. Good fortune to all of them.

— Mr. Charles A. Taylor of Woburn, for several years employed as foreman of the splitting and finishing department at Loring & Avery's tannery in this town, has resigned his position to accept another in Woburn. Mr. Taylor is a thorough mechanic, and was highly respected by all the men working under him. Winchester Star. Mr. Taylor is considered one of the best leather makers in Woburn. Neither when it comes to drawing a bead with a kodak on a pretty face or bit of scenery is Charlie much of a slouch.

— With an assorted lot of snow flakes filling the air, a rawish sort of wind meandering hitherward from the Boreal quarter of the world, a general reappearance of ulsters redolent of camphor and cedar boughs, a superabundance of gray clouds laden with winter, and a conspicuous absence of sunbeams—these characteristics gave last Tuesday morning a wintry hue and touch that sent cold shivers chasing each other up and down ones spinal column at a great rate and reminded one that Christmas is close at hand.

— Warren C. Perrigo was arraigned again last Saturday morning in the District Court on a charge for keeping a liquor nuisance and got for a sentence $100 by way of fine and 10 months in the House of Correction. It was only a month or so ago that he was convicted in the same Court for a like offence and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 with 4 months in the House of Correction, from which sentence he appealed and the appeal is now pending. It looks as though Perrigo might gain a permanent residence in Cambridge after a while.

— The Harvest Concert of the M. E. Sunday School last Sunday was under the direction of Supt. Copeland and one of the best ever given in that church. Those who participated acquitted themselves most creditably, while the music was of the best. Much attention was paid to the addresses especially that by Rev. Mr. Briggs of Chicago who is about to become a missionary in Africa. Among the musical contributions finely rendered were — "Harvest Hymn," by Willie Heckbert; "The Wind Across the Wheat," by May Leathe; "The Seed of Song," by Gracie Heartz; "The Patchwork Window," by Daisy Dorr; "The Sowers," by Bertha Seller, and another by Wellington Cooke. Seven little girls gave "Autumn Responses," four little girls, "The Gleaners," and six little boys responded to "Has the harvest been garnered in?"

— In the matter of buying and utilizing Carter's rink for business purposes John I. Munroe, the wide-awake real estate agent of this city, isn't letting any grass grow under his sandals. For a man so quiet mannered as he is Mr. Munroe is a real estate hustler and is doing a heap towards settling up the waste places of this town with a good class of inhabitants. If the people will only take hold with him John I. will have that huge rink filled plum full of male and female shoemakers before next New Year's, while the projects which he has got in his head for next season will prove a big thing for Woburn. At the meeting of the Board of Trade the other night Major Henry C. Hall, Daniel H. Richards, Winthrop Hammond and Postmaster Lawrence Reade were added to the Business Committee which has this rink and similar projects for internal improvement in hand and they will increase the strength and momentum of the scheme. It is bound to go—at anyrate, Munroe will give no rest to the soles of their feet until something worthy of the Board of Trade is accomplished.

— Last Sunday Rev. Hugh Montgomery paid his respects to the rumsellers and discussed temperance from a home standpoint. It is surmised that the Parson will stir up the animals and make a rattling among some of the dry bones between this and election day. If he can spare time from his church-building duties to strip to the task it is more than possible that rumsellers and the candidates of rumsellers will hear something drap one of these frosty mornings. The Parson derives considerable comfort from the following figures which he gathered up and laid before his congregation Sunday evening. They show the difference between license and prohibition in this city, so he says: The number of arrests made by the Police of this city for the year ending Nov. 1, 1889, was 481. Of these 332 were for drunkeness; 46 liquor nuisances were prosecuted; 175 search warrants were served; and 60 liquor seizures were made. During the year ending Nov. 1, 1890, there were 330 arrests in all by the Police; of which 200 were for drunkeness; 26 liquor nuisances were given attention to; 210 search warrants were served; and 74 liquor seizures were made. The year 1889 was a license year in Woburn, while prohibition was voted at the last election and has been the liquor policy this year. The difference in the work of the Police in the two periods indicates the relative condition of the rum traffic under the opposing systems. Mr. Montgomery brought these facts home to the understanding in such a manner that he who runs may read.

Democratic Ward Caucuses.

There was a fight all along the line. Every caucus was full, and each showed fire in its eye. The bosses and the orators were on deck early and often and the workers were within easy hail. Beer was the prevailing perfume.

The contest was to secure the delegates to the Mayoralty convention, and it was a tug of war. Mr. Thomas Salmon marshaled his forces ably, and City Clerk Moreland showed splendid generalship in forming his line of battle. Between the contending hosts the disparity in numbers was hardly discernable with the naked eye. The Moreland faction fought to get delegates for Alderman W. C. Kenney, while Salmon and his henchmen were equally determined to clean out the "gang" and elect anti-Kenney men.

In some wards it took well into the night to settle matters. It was a fight for blood. And also for leadership — a thing more precious to a Democrat than blood.

The Moreland faction, or as it is sometimes called, the "Municipal Building Ring," won the fight and on Tuesday morning victory with a capital V. proudly perched on the Moreland-Kenney banner. The following is the outcome of the caucuses:

Ward 1.—Alderman, William F. Davis; Councilman, Jeremiah Weafer and John O'Donnell; Delegates, Thomas Salmon, Robert J. W. Phinney, Andrew Roach, John I. Munroe. Ward and City Committee, William F. Kenney, Bernard McHugh, Dr. D. F. Murphy, Thomas Salmon, John I. Munroe, Wallace T. Davis.

Ward 2.—Alderman, Jacob A. Ham; Councilmen, Thomas J. Fox, Daniel J. Murphey; Delegates, James F. McKenna, Daniel Sullivan, James Dolan, John H. Bates; Ward and City Committee, Jacob Ham, James Dolan, John C. Meehan, John G. Maguire, Clarence Littlefield, Richard Reynolds, Frank F. Dodge, Thomas Quinn, James F. McKenna, Henry M. Aldrich, James Maguire, Christopher J. Durham, Thomas J. Fox, Daniel J. Murphey.

Ward 3—Alderman, John H. Finn; Councilmen, John F. Larkin, Marcellus Littlefield; Delegates, Edward J. Gregory, John McLaughlin, P. Henry Mathews, William E. Mooney; Ward and City Committee, A. A. Doherty, John McLaughlin, P. Henry Mathews, Dr. James H. Conway, Mathew Looby, Michael Meagher, Robert H. Corry.

Ward 4—Alderman, Eliot L. Parker; Councilmen, Charles A. McDonald, Asa G. Sheldon; Delegates, Thomas H. McGovern, Peter Rafferty, David F. Moreland; Ward and City Committee, David F. Moreland, Thomas Moore, Edward T. O'Neil, Eliot L. Packard, David Condon, John P. Delany.

Ward 5—Alderman, John J. Walsh; Councilman, James McAvoy. Delegates, James Cogan, Lawrence Martin, Frank McGarry. Ward Committee, Lawrence Martin, James Cogan, Frank McGarry.

Ward 6—Alderman, Edward E. Parker. Councilman, Clarence H. Nichols. Delegates, John J. Hayden, Daniel W. Bond. Ward and City Committee, Eugene Duffy, Daniel W. Bond, Edward D. Parker, William McGrath, Henry Rooney, John J. Hayden, James Doherty.

Ward 7—Alderman, James H. Dorherty. Councilman, Fred C. Emery. Delegates, John Thornton, William Breslin. Ward and City Committee, William Breslin, Thomas Breslin, Fred M. Dorherty, Fred C. Emery, Bryan Griffin, Patrick Riley, Timothy Bowen.

How You Can Do It.

Once when in New York I heard a vender of stove polish give out this cry: "Save your money, time and labor; shine ye, hot or cold. D-i-r-t-y, g-r-e-a-s-y stoves." Very pathetically he put it, and it took, for the saving of money, time and labor is what we are all looking for. No better way can be found than to introduce and maintain in the household Brussels soap. It's economical.

The Woman's Club.

Miss O. M. E. Rowe of the Boston City Hospital lectured before the Woburn Woman's Club on Friday, Nov. 7.

Her subject, "The Heredity of Character and Ability," was treated in an able and scholarly manner, and her paper showed the result of careful research into the studies of Physiology, Biology, and Botany, and an extensive knowledge of History and Biography.

The next meeting of the Woburn Woman's Club will be held on Friday, Nov 21, at 7.30 p. m., when Mr. John Baker, an escaped Siberian Exile, will entertain the Club with autobiographical remiuiscences. Mr. Baker has been before the New England public several years, having lectured in this State as early as 1877. He is said to graphically picture the cruelties of the Russian government to its political offenders, and the horrors of Siberian dungeons.

"His father was beheaded for participating in a Polish insurrection, and he, his mother, sisters, and sweetheart were packed off to Siberia by different routes."

Baker made his escape to America, but his mother died on the way to Siberia where his sisters and sweetheart are, if living, yet in exile. Now that so much interest is being taken in the Perestchagin paintings in which the fiendish acts of the Russian nation are so daringly portrayed, the Club will be fortunate to have one Russian verify by words what another has portrayed on canvas.

That the husbands and friends of the members of the Club may attend this lecture the hour has been changed to 7.30 p. m. The admission fee to non-members will be twenty-five cents.

Men drink good, bad and indifferent liquor and never grumble about the price of it, but they growl when their wives don't economize by using Brussels soap.

The Twenty-Third.

A week ago last evening Barbank Post, No. 33, G. A. R., celebrated the 23d anniversary of their organization in a becoming manner. The ceremonies, which were very interesting, took place in G. A. R. Hall and were witnessed by a large number of Comrades and others, and were enlivened by Women's Relief Corps, No. 83, who also aided materially in carrying out the excellent programme. To the good taste and deft fingers of these was due mainly the profuse display of bunting and evergreens in the Hall and other handsome decorations. These ladies, too, provided the grand good supper that everyone enjoyed so much; indeed, the celebration would have been rather a tame and uninteresting affair (we fear) had it not been for the presence and assistance of the fair ones of the Corps.

If the supper was excellent the after-dinner exercises were a match for it. Everybody was in the best of temper, and there was no hanging back when Comrades were called on for an experience. The first to address the assembly was Commander Warren of 33, who gave a succinct but very entertaining history of the Post, in which many facts were narrated of special interest to his audience.

Commander Warren on closing named Comrade Colonel William T. Grammer, one of the charter members of the Post, as President of the evening, which honor was gracefully accepted in a brief speech. Col. Grammer then introduced Comrade Charles H. Porter, Mayor of the city of Quincy, who gave his attentive hearers an outline history of the Battle of Five Forks which all enjoyed very much. When Col Porter had finished several gentlemen and ladies responded to calls for speeches among whom were Mayor Ed. F. Johnson, City Solicitor Curran, John L. Parker, Editor of the Lynn Item, Mrs. Charles T. Wood of Lynn, Mrs. Randall, President of W. R. C. 83, and Prof. Elmore A. Pierce. Mr. Reddy and some others gave some patriotic songs.

At the close of his entertaining history of Five Forks Col. Porter, in behalf of Mrs. Emily F. Warren, widow of the late distinguised Major-General C. K. Warren, presented the Post with a splendid portrait of General Warren mounted in an elegant frame, also a topographical map of Five Forks.

Some of the prominent people present at the celebration were: Mayor E. F. Johnson and Lady, John L. Parker, Esq., Editor of the Lynn Item, Capt. Luke R. Tidd, Capt. John P. Crane, Mr. E. J. Gregory and Miss Gregory, Col. Edward Simonds, Ald. Linscott of No. Woburn, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Woodside, Capt. George W. Nichols, Lady and daughter, Col. A. P. Barrett and Lady, Mr. A. H. Richardson and Lady, Col. A. F. Atwood, Charles A. McDonald, Esq., and Lady, Col. John Connolly, Major John B. Davis and Lady, and many others.

They all said it was one of the best anniversary celebrations Post 33 ever held.

"The City Hall Ring."

To the Editor of Woburn Journal:—

Certain politicians who are striving to get into the municipal mansion and to warm their toes at the municipal hearthstone are trying to throw dust into the eyes of the citizens of Woburn, more especially into Republican optics, by talking vigorously about a "City Hall Ring," consisting of those who now hold office. They would have the people believe that Woburn has been and is now at the mercy of unscrupulous politicians and plunderers who are running the municipal machine in the interest of pelf and to the consequent detriment of good government. In fact, one of these deeriers, who has been a leader under former democratic government, has stated that those now in office form a combination worse than the Tweed Ring ever dreamt of being!

This talk is almost too absurd for serious consideration and yet there may be some who will be deceived by it. If there are any such we ask them to reflect for a moment and compare the administration of the past two years with those which preceded it, when the men who are now inveigling against the Mayor and City Council held sway in town affairs.

Have the Republicans of Woburn forgotten the time when they were practically excluded from all participation in town affairs? When a Republican in office was a curiosity? When the rate of taxation and the city debt were yearly increasing? Have they forgotten John Boyle's administration of the highways? Have they forgotten the tax rate of $19 70 of the last Town Government? Have the temperance people of Woburn who had to go down into their own pockets to secure even a semblance of the enforcement of law, forgotten former administrations of the Police Department? Are Republicans again prepared to entrust their business to the conspicuous unselfishness (sic) of S—lm—n, the fearless independence (sic) of H—m, and the (when at home) marvellous statemenship (sic) of Mc D—n—gh?

Let the Republicans scan the list of town officers under the last several years of Town Goverment and see how many of their faith held office in the days before the "City Hall Ring" came into power. Let them contrast those times with the present when the party's nominees embrace a Mayor, a majority of the City Council, City Treasurer, City Auditor, Chief of Police, Clerk of Committees, and clerk of Common Council, two out of three Water Commissioners, two out of three Assessors, and other minor offices. Let them hunt for two years under the old regime when the tax rate was reduced $3 20 and the city debt showed a net reduction (over and above all expenses and debts incurred, including a new school house, a public park and a new conduit to the reservoir) of $57,000.

Such is the financial record of the past two years, and if this be the result of "Ring Rule" the citizens of Woburn who pay taxes and believe in a business-like management of the city might well be content to be governed by "Ring". But they are not governed in that way. That an alliance between certain elements in both parties has been made in the interest of good clean government is not disputed; that it has been made to further any individual political ambitions is emphatically denied by those who are accused of being in the "Ring". All that they want is a continuance of good government and an economical administration of the city's business. If the Republicans and citizens of Woburn believe that an advance has been made in the right direction in the last two years, and want to continue the line of march thus taken up they will see to it that those in sympathy with the present administration are put at the head of affairs for the next year. If, however, they desire to "advance backwards" and re-unite the Democracy of this city they will heed the advice of Mr. Salmon, his associates and satellites, and drive the Democratic friends of the present administration back into their own party, and compel the nomination by the democratic mayoralty convention of a man for Mayor who like Thomas D. Hevey for Representative will satisfy both wings of their party and lead them on to victory.

REPUBLICAN TAXPAYER.

Two Woburn Industries.

In the last issue of The Shoe and Leather Review we find the following mention of two prosperous iron manufacturing establishments of this city which notices are accompanied by cuts of some of the machinery manufactured:

J. T. Freeman & Co., Woburn, Mass., manufacture a wide range of leather finishing machinery. These machines are made in the best possible manner and are in every way fitted for the work required of them, says the maker. The frames are of thoroughly seasoned ash timber, securely bolted, and the working parts of the very best material to be had. The manufacturers offer them with the strongest of guarantees and at prices perfectly satisfactory to the manufacturer.

Coombs & Brown, of Woburn, Mass., make a leather dressing Jack that possesses several features of undoubted merit, for which letters patent have been granted. The machine has been in use in many tanneries for about two years, and is said to have given great satisfaction.

The press is the watch-dog that guards the hen-house of our liberty and protects the clothes-line of our rights—and it also advises you to use the economical Brussels soap.

Mrs. C. PACKARD, 419 Main St., Woburn.

The New Assistant U. S. District Attorney.

Henry A. Wyman, Esq, who for several years past has filled the office of Second Assistant Attorney General of this Commonwealth with credit to himself and profit to the people, has been appointed Assistant U. S. District Attorney for the District of Massachusetts by Attorney Allen and will enter on the discharge of his duties on Dec. 1, prox.

The appointment will meet with a cordial public endorsement, for besides being a lawyer of more than ordinary learning and ability, Mr. Wyman is a young gentleman of sterling personal worth in whose hands any public trust would be sure to be safe. He comes from good legal stock. His father, until failing health overtook him and prostrated his energies, was one of the leading legal lights of Maine. He was a lawyer of sound judgment, familiar with the books, a successful advocate, and safe counselor. And besides he was an honest man, which can't be truthfully said of every knight of the green bag. The new Assistant U. S. Attorney for Massachusetts takes after his father, which means that Attorney Allen has chosen his right-hand man with wisdom and discretion.

Here is what one or two of the leading Boston papers have to say about Mr. Wyman and his appointment, with a plenty more of the same tenor, for the publication of which we have not room:

Mr. Henry A. Wyman, the second assistant attorney-general of Massachusetts, has resigned, to take effect Dec. 1, having been appointed assistant district attorney by United States District Attorney Frank D. Allen. During Mr. Wyman's several years' service in the attorney-general's office he has made an excellent legal record by his thorough work, and frequently received the public commendation of the supreme bench of the state.—Boston Herald.

United States Dist.-Atty. Allen has appointed as his first assistant Henry A. Wyman, now the second-assistant attorney-general of the commonwealth. Mr. Wyman, although a young man, has already shown himself to be a lawyer of more than ordinary ability, and his appointment will undoubtedly be received with general satisfaction. In the office of the attorney-general he has had charge of nearly all criminal cases which have gone to the supreme court, and has done much other responsible and difficult legal work. He takes his new office in December. The salary of the new place is $2000, an increase over that of the office he now holds. Mr. Wyman succeeds Col. T. H. Talbot, who was appointed by Mr. Galvin.—Boston Globe.

Worcester's Success in Treating Sewage.

The following account of Worcester's new sewerage system will be specially interesting to the people of the territory included in the Great Metropolitan Sewerage District for which a $5,000,000 sewer is being constructed.

During the past three months the new sewerage system of the city of Worcester has been demonstrated to be an unqualified success. The system, being unique in this country, although it is not original with Worcester's city engineer, has attracted the attention it deserves, since its efficiency is unquestioned and its administration economical. The waters of the Blackstone river, which formerly were polluted with filth, are becoming once more clear and pure. The work of chemical precipitation in the great sewage tanks, in short, is so thoroughly done that Prof. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institution of Technology, who has recently inspected the plant, avers that the effluent discharge into the stream might be drunk with safety. Prof. T. M. Brown of the same Institution, and an expert in sewage matters, testifies that the results are superior to those he has observed at any chemical precipitation works in Europe. Charles A. Allen, the engineer whose monument these works are, continues to manage the sewerage system; and the case illustrates how wisely economical a municipality may be in giving a trustworthy expert authority to achieve desired results. The daily work of precipitation is being economically done. Careful observation of the sewage flow, accompanied by an intelligent use of the lime and alumina, renders it possible to estimate to a nicety the annual expense, which is not expected to be more than $15,000 when the whole of the city sewage is treated.—Somerville Citizen.

Why do not the Metropolitan Sewerage Commissioners adopt the plan of chemical precipitation for disposing of drainage which works so well in Worcester instead of conveying it out to sea and depositing it somewhere in the vicinity of Point Shirley only to be returned to and landed on the beaches at Winthrop and neighborhood every time a wind blows from the ocean?

The system also works well in taking care of the sewerage from the Woburn and Winchester tanneries. Some years ago the Boston Water Department, to prevent the pollution of their water supply from Mystic Pond, put in a large sewer pipe extending from Skinner's tannery at Woburn Centre to a point opposite the head of Upper Mystic Pond a few rods below Mystic station. Here the vast stream of drainage constantly flowing through the pipe into vats is subjected to a chemical process by which the solids it contains are precipitated and the water, which runs off through pipes to the Mystic River near the foot of Lower Mystic Pond, is as pure, clean and sweet as the best spring water that flows out of the ground. The system is a perfect success in this case as well as at Worcester.

Why then are the Metropolitan Commissioners so averse to adopting this plan of taking care of the sewerage of the great territory over which they have jurisdiction?

Will Leave His Office.

Governor Brackett will leave his office with the respect of the people, and had it not been for McKinley he would have been re-elected by the usual majority.—Newton Graphic.

Saturday evening Evangelist Smith and Gospel Singer Robson will conduct a meeting for men only.

To-night the meeting will be for all under the leadership of the Young People's Societies of the various churches.

Thursday evening the meeting was again held at the Rooms of the Association and was conducted by Mr. N. S. Greet.

The Sunday Boys Meetings are increasing every week in numbers and interest. Every boy is invited for next Sunday at 3 p. m.

This being the Week of Prayer for young men the Church prayer meetings Wednesday evening took for their subject "Our Boys."

Tuesday four students from Harvard University had charge of the meeting and despite the storm there was a good number of men present.

Last Sunday's 4 o'clock meeting under the leadership of Evangelist R. S. Smith and Gospel Singer Robert Robson was one of the largest ever held in the rooms.

Sunday, Nov. 15, will be Anniversary Sunday with the Association. The usual 4 o'clock Men's meeting and 3 o'clock Boy's meeting will be held. At 7.30 p. m. the Anniversary exercises will take place in the Congregational church, when the following programme will be given:

City Government.

ALDERMEN.

The Board held a meeting last Tuesday evening. A petition was received from ward 6 for two more fire hydrants and six electric lights; referred. A communication was received from Chelsea that Mrs. Harriet Ridlon had been on the State aid rolls there; referred. Elipaz Prior was granted permit to erect a sign over the sidewalk. John T. Trull and 10 others asked that a sidewalk be built on the westerly side of Auburn street. Parties on Broad street petitioned for edge stone. P. S. Barnard petitioned for electric light. The city ordinance relating to fire district was passed to be engrossed. Sixth class liquor licences were granted to Messrs. Lovel and Buckminster. Polling places were established as follows; Ward 1, Lyceum Hall; ward 2, Fifield building, Fowle street; ward 3, steamer house, Winn street; ward 4, Fox building; wards 5, 6 and 7 at theis respective hose houses.

Belting Middlesex Fells.

The probability is that the Fells railroad will be built, and that, too, before many months.

Recent conferences have been held between citizens of our town and officials of the Boston & Maine system, and assurances have been given by the latter that they now favor the project and are rather urgent to have it built.

What the citizens desire is that it should be made a belt line from the Fells in Melrose to Reading, and it has been suggested that it be carried to Woburn or Wilmington junction.

If built it will be double tracked.—Ex.

Of course to make it a success as a belt line it must be built to connect with the B. & L. at Woburn. In fact, any new piece of railroad around in these parts that should undertake to leave Woburn out of the reckoning would stand a mighty poor show of maintaining an existence very long.

Our good Stoneham neighbors will do well to cut this out and paste it into their hats.

North Woburn.

On Friday evening, Nov. 14, the Congregational society will hold a sociable in the vestry of their church.

The sudden death of our late resident, Mr. Prentice Barnard was a great surprise and severe shock to his friends.

Rev. Mr. Murphy will preach a sermon to young men at the Congregational church in this village next Sunday morning.

Mrs. Charles W. Greeley has had as her guests during the last few days Mrs. Fairbanks and daughter of Lewiston, Maine.

The monthly sociable of the Unitarian society which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Watson, was a charming success.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a "Mothers" meeting in the parlor of the Congregational church on Wednesday, Nov. 19, at 3 p. m. Mothers are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. B. F. Kimball, since Ald. Linscott refuses to accept a re-nomination from the Republicans of Ward 6, will probably be nominated for the place and elected, if he will accept.

The ladies connected with the Unitarian Society will hold a Fair in the chapel on next Thursday evening, Nov. 20. Preparations are being made to make this occasion rank even higher than the excellent standof those held during the past years.

The annual sale and supper at the Unitarian Chapel will be held on Thursday evening, Nov. 20, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance. Provisions have been made for a candy table, a fishing pond, and other attractions, besides a grand good supper. The admission will be only 10 cents, and the supper only 25 cents. The supper will be served at 6.30 o'clock, p. m. sharp.

The sudden death of Mr. Prentiss S. Barnard last Sunday came in the nature of a shock to this community. He had injured himself considerably by falling down a flight of stairs the day before but he was not considered in a dangerous condition and his speedy recovery was confidently looked for. His age nearly 74 years. In his prime he was considered one of the smartest commercial salesmen in Boston. Many years ago he was in business with his brother-in-law, Dr. S. G. Richardson of Wakefield, and accumulated considerable property. During this period he lived in Woburn, but went away and was gone more than 20 years, returning about eight years ago, when he purchased an estate in Ward 6, where he died. His widow survives. He had many warm friends.

Some one has said that the Kitchen is the heart of the home, and we all know it plays an important part in the household economy. To make the work easy there clears the whole atmosphere of the home, and we therefore with pleasure call attention to the advertisement headed "Kitchen Essentials," in this paper, wherein Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom give extremely low prices for many articles needed in every kitchen.

Burlington.

A new barn is being built on Mr. Abel Harrington's place.

A meeting of the Agricultural Society will be held at the Town Hall Saturday evening.

Rev. W. Murphy of Middleton preached at the church Sunday morning. The evening service was omitted.

Mr. Joshua Reed and Mr. Samuel Gowing have both been seriously ill this week. Mr. Reed is eighty-nine years old and Mr. Gowing's years number more than ninety.

The work of building the new barn on the Town Farm was begun this week. Messrs. H. H. Nichols, E. A. Bennett and G. L. Tebbetts are the building committee. The dimensions of the barn are to be forty by fifty feet with sixteen feet posts.

Mrs. Harriet Conery, one of the oldest inhabitants of the town, died Nov. 11, at the residence of Abner Shedd, Esq., where she had made her home for several years. Until a short time ago she retained the use of her faculties in a remarkable degree although over ninety years of age. She was highly esteemed for her benevolence and charity. Her funeral will be held Friday afternoon. The services will be conducted by Rev. C. H. Washburn.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free.

VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich.

"To say that I am pleased with Mellen's Food is not to speak the entire truth. I am delighted with the way my little patients take it, and with the complete manner in which it fulfills indications as a food for invalids," writes a physician.

"Chipman's Liver Pills the best in the world. Never gripe or make you sick. They are purely vegetable, and will sure cure your bilious trouble. All who use them speak well of them. Sold by all druggists."

Boston Theatres.

Next Monday evening, Nov. 17, Francis Wilson and company will begin an engagement at the Globe Theatre, presenting "The Merry Monarch," which was called in New York the most successful lyric production of the past 10 years. The book of the opera, although derived from a French source, is, in the main part, the work of J. Cheever Goodwin, author of "Evangeline" and adapter of all the operas once so successfully performed by Alice Oates in the days of her greatest popularity, described as one of the brightest and wittiest ever contributed to the stage. Francis Wilson's entrance is made in great state in a gorgeous palanquin borne by black slaves. He gets down to the foot-lights in a fashion that sets everybody shrieking with laughter, and then sings "I'm a King with a Capital K."

The scenery and spectacular beauty of "The Merry Monarch" has been the theme of great praise. Henry E. Hoyt of the Mettropolitan Opera House, New York, painted all the scenery. The costumes are by Dazian and Charles Hawthorne, and were executed from designs especially painted for Mr. Wilson by Percy Anderson of London, who is celebrated as one of England's most noted portrait painters. The company includes Marie Jansen, Laura Moore, Nettie Leyford, Cecile Eissing, Belle Hariz, Charles Plunkett, Gilbert Clayton, Willet Seaman, Harry Macdonough and B. F. Joselyn. The orchestra is under the direction of Signor A. De Novellis.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

Mrs. Ellen L. Rider.

Many of the readers of the Republic will be grieved to learn of the death of this estimable lady. She died at her father's old homestead on the 7th of October at the age of fifty-one years. She was the daughter of the late Maynard King; was born in Worcester County, Massachusetts, and came to Geneseo, with her parents, in 1834. For more than a third of a century she has been a resident of Geneseo. She was married to Wilson J. Rider, Esq., in 1861. Her only child died in infancy, but her husband and an adopted daughter survive her. They do not mourn alone for Mrs. Rider left a host of friends to cherish her memory. They will remember much that was lovely during all her residence here; her quiet, but always cheerful, disposition, her earnest effort to make everybody happy in her presence, and her Christian character exemplified in the patience with which she bore her physical sufferings during the last four years of her life. The sympathy of this entire community is with Mr. Rider in his affliction.—Geneseo (Ill.) Republic.

A few years ago Mrs. Rider, the subject of the above obituary, visited Woburn and made some warm friends among our people, one whom sends to the JOURNAL the following tribute to her memory:

TO MY FRIEND NELLIE.

Farewell, dear friend, thy work is done,
Thy sufferings now are o'er;
Thy voice is hushed, those eyes are dimmed,
That smile we see no more.

Thy home, once bright and cheery,
Is filled with sadness now;
The world seems dark and dreary,
Yet to Thy will we bow.

God comfort the bereaved ones;
Thy loss they deeply feel;
God's ways are all mysterious,
He can our sorrows heal. [H.

WINCHESTER.

Mr. George Dunham is mending in health in a satisfactory manner.

Material improvements in the M. E. Church are contemplated. Subscriptions for them come in quite liberally.

Brer Johnson don't know how much he is losing every week by refusing to read the local newspapers. Brer J. is popularly supposed to be one of those what-ye-call-'ems that we turn a grin'stone with.

Editor and Editress Wilson appear to be taking solid comfort in their pleasant quarters. Added to a well equipped newspaper and job printing establishment they have a book, news, paper and periodical store, where everything is just as handy as a pocket in a shirt, and if those two people can't make money and take comfort at the same time they ought to be ashamed of themselves.

An Endowment Policy in this Company, issued under the new perfected non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts, provides for three most important things.

1st. It is a security to the beneficiaries in case of the early death of the assured.

2d. It makes a certain provision for the wants of one's older years.

3d. It provides a sum of money continually increasing in amount, that the policy-holder may at any time receive, should he be overtaken by misfortune and lose his property.

No business man can afford to do without the advantage that such a policy may be to himself if unfortunate in business; to his family in case of his early decease or as an endowment to himself at a time in life when, if he has no property, he will be poor indeed.

JESUS CONDEMNED.

LESSON VII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 16.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiii, 13-25. Commit Verses 20, 21—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 8—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

13. "And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people." Pilate has not escaped from his dilemma. Although he has made friends with Herod, through Jesus rejected, he has not yet made friends with the Jews, and Jesus is again before him to be disposed of. There is a greater question than that of friendship or enmity with people either in high or low places on this earth, and that question, "What shall I do with Jesus," Pilate must now attend to and settle forever. The same matter is before every one who has heard the Gospel, and while it may be postponed, and God in great mercy continue His long suffering, yet the time will come when it must be settled in one way or the other.

14. "Ye have brought this man unto me as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I, having examined Him before you, have found no fault in this man, touching those things whereof ye accuse Him." This is Pilate's second testimony to His innocence (see vs. 5), and hard on His accusers, who have plainly failed in their case against Jesus; for Pilate insists that their accusations against this man are unfounded, and that He is innocent of the things laid to His charge. What a record this is in favor of Jesus, and it stands in the eternal word of God.

15. "No, nor yet Herod, for I sent you to him; and lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto Him." Here is the strong testimony of two Roman governors against the accusations of the Jews and in favor of Jesus. Even though it had been otherwise, and both had thought to have found some cure of death in Him, while that would have made these governors to be on the side of the Jews, it would have proved nothing against Jesus, for no man knoweth the Son save the Father. No Roman governor, or even emperor, or Jewish council was capable of sitting in judgment on Him. Earth never saw such a sight before: God standing at the bar of man to be judged. With what astonishment and horror must the holy angels have looked upon these things.

16. "I will therefore chastise Him and release Him." Insisting that He was innocent, and yet ready to chastise Him, even though he should the next moment release him. How strange and inexplainable it all seems! And yet they treated the apostles thus a little later, when, being able to prove nothing against them, and being advised by Gamaliel to let them alone, before they let them go they took them and beat them (Acts v, 40).

17. "For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast." And gladly would he improve this opportunity to set Jesus free.

18. "And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas." In Matt. xxvii, 20, it is said that this was by the advice of the chief priests and elders.

19. "Who for a certain sedition made in the city and for murder was cast into prison." And this is the man of their choice. A robber (John xviii, 40) and a murderer. If like attracts like, then we see how it was. They were all robbers in the highest degree, for they were guilty of robbing God (Mal. iii, 8, 9), and had even made His temple a den of thieves or robbers (Luke xix, 46). And as to their being murderers, "he that hateth his brother is a murderer" (I John iii, 15), and they were not only hating Jesus their brother, but Jesus their king and their God.

20. "Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them." It may have been just here that they said, "We have a law, and by our law He ought to die, because He made Himself the Son of God." For when Pilate heard that saying he was the more afraid (John xix, 7, 8). And as he talked with Jesus privately Jesus said: "Thou couldst have no power against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin." It is said that from thenceforth Pilate sought to release Him (John xix, 11, 12).

21. "But they cried, saying, Crucify Him, Crucify Him," or they continued crying "Crucify Him." They had but one desire concerning Him, and to all else they were deaf and blind. Die He must, and they would not cease till it was accomplished. Oh, that the followers of Jesus had in His cause the persistence and zeal which the followers of the devil have in his service.

22. "And he said unto them the third time, Why what evil hath He done? I have found no cause of death in Him. I will therefore chastise Him and let Him go." Well, Pilate, what does your threefold testimony to His innocence and your twofold threat to chastise Him and let Him go amount to if you do not let Him go? In the name of all that is right, let Him go without chastisement, since you are sure that He is innocent, or else cease your efforts, confess yourself a coward and gratify quickly these bloodthirsty dogs.

23. "And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that He might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed." John gives some additional arguments which the Jews used, probably about this time. "The Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend. Whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar." When Pilate heard that he brought Jesus forth. And when they added, "We have no king but Cæsar," that settled it (John xix, 12, 15).

24. "And Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required." He knew no higher power than Cæsar, and him he will honor but only for the sake of his position, let who may go to the wall. This is not strange when we consider that even ministers of the gospel have been known to please some man or men (because of their salary) rather than God. But Pilate has not an easy conscience about it yet, for "he took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it."

25. "And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will." Read Matt. xxvii, 26-31; and see your Jesus, your Saviour, who loves you as father or mother never did nor could; see Him scourged (mark its meaning), crowned with thorns, spit upon, smitten, mocked; and say do you care? is it anything to you? And if so, how much? How much can you meekly bear of the unkind or even cruel will of others? And are you so glad of the redemption which He thus purchased for you that you never cease telling of it from day to day?

ACROSS THE WAY.

Across the way there is a window lattice
That peeps out shyly through the city trees,
All fluttering with lacy curtains, that is,
Susceptible to summer's scented breeze.
And as I gazed without one morning early
And of the sunrise sweetness drank my fill
I saw, as in a mist of dew, all pearly,
A yellow bowl of daisies on the sill

I pictured to myself my pretty neighbor,
Who placed with gentle hands the flowrets there,
Who smoothed each stem in shape with loving labor,
To flourish in the balmy morning air;
I wondered was she small—or tall or slender,
And did she boast of brown or golden curls;
Her heart I knew was kind and good and tender
A queen of all, the daisy wreath of girls!

I fancied her sweet face within a bonnet,
Dressed her in dainty muslin gown of white,
With sprigs of lilac scattered all upon it,
And knots upon her breast of ribbon bright.
"Her eyes," I thought, "are like the sky above me;
Her voice just like a rippling summer rill;
How nice 'twould be if she would learn to love me,
Just as she does the daisies on the sill!"

Just then the lazy ribboned curtain parted,
And Jones—you know him—forty if a day!
Looked out and grinned, while I smiled back, half hearted,
To think 'twas Jones who lived across the way:
To make my vision bright so sad and solemn,
And all my mellow morning dream to kill,
A man who writes jokes at so much a column,
Who'd think that he'd have daisies on the sill?
—Kate Masterson in New York Herald.

Superiority of American Humor.

A contributor to one of the leading English magazines describes American humor as "the result of shrewd and for the most part half educated minds acting upon matters of every day interest," and speaks of American humorists generally in a somewhat disparaging vein, and of their productions as inferior to the "pure humor" of English scholars.

Now we understand legitimate humor to be that which compels men to laugh without causing women to blush; and no people on earth are so prolific of such humor as Americans.

Highly refined facetiousness, which the English too often mistake for humor, is not side shaking. It does not make people roar or endanger the integrity of their blood vessels. It is rather wit than humor. A pun that satisfies the taste may not tickle the fancy. An epigram that is a model of completeness may nevertheless fail to provoke a smile.

The most irresistible jokes we have ever heard have been perpetrated by Americans of ordinary education. There is hardly a village in the union that has not its genuine humorists, who can easily "set the table in a roar." The truth of the matter is, American humor is seldom finical and never stupid, but always humorous.—New York Ledger.

Wrong or at Least Annoying.

The abominations in human conversation are many, but one has come in of late that is peculiarly tiresome. Whenever you say anything that agrees with the opinions of the person with whom you are talking he answers, "That's right." When anything is explained to him he says, "That's right." In fact, on the slightest opportunity, he will say, "That's right." In every conversation of twenty minutes there will be fifty "That's rights." It would be just as well if he would occasionally say, "That's true," or "That's so," or "I think so, too," or "I agree with you," or even "You're mighty accurate." Anything would be better than the "nauseous iteration" of "That's right." The constitution cannot provide against such outrages, but every man with the good of his fellow citizens at heart can avoid using one expression incessantly.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Remedy for the Smoke Nuisance.

A correspondent of Indian Engineering suggests an original scheme for smoke abatement by asking whether it has ever been proposed to have a smoke duct running through a town connected with the different furnaces. He suggests that such a duct might be carried outside of the city to a condensing station, an exhaust machine being employed to force the draught. At the condensing station the soot laden air might be made to pass through water, and thus deposit the solid matter, the air passing away comparatively pure, while the soot thus deposited might easily be collected, caked and sold as fuel. The size of the duct would have to vary, as in water and other mains, according to the work to be performed.

The California way of disbarring a shyster lawyer is to take him out on the commons and tar and feather him, and then tell him in vigorous English that if he doesn't hunt some other locality the next performance will be a hanging. It isn't legal, but it is very effective.—Detroit Free Press.

Very Odd.

"Here's a paragraph about 'striking coat makers.'"

"No."

"That's odd; there are more striking trousers made than striking coats."—Munsey's Weekly.

The call "Boss, boss," to cattle is pure Latin apparently, since the Latin word for a "beef creature" is "bos." It seems to have been in use among English speaking people for several generations, though "boss" and "bossy" are more often heard in America than in England.

It is now more than 500 years since a handful of patriots in the Alps established the Swiss league of free republics, and founded a government that was destined to reach the climax of democracy in the Nineteenth century.

They All Failed.

The following letter from Mr. W. A. Thomsom, of Columbus, Wis., is peculiarly interesting: "My wife," says he, "has been treated for her head, stomach and nervous prostration by three doctors in New York, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, one in Cincinnati, and at the large institute in Buffalo for 16 months. They all failed. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine helped her wonderfully." This should be used in all headaches, backaches, changes of life, nervous disturbances, fits, rheumatism, etc. Ask at Charles H. Buss drug store for a free trial bottle and Dr. Miles' new book on the Nerves and Heart.

Capt. Wissman, the African explorer, says the paradise of birds has been found on the shores of a lagoon on the eastern extremity of Lake Nyanza.

Catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease, and requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla to effect a cure.

JUSTICE TO THE SNAKES.

Eyewitnesses of Things That Are Denied by the Flippant and Ignorant.

Two popular beliefs concerning the behavior of certain snakes under certain circumstances have been very positively met by some persons with a very flat and absolute denial that any snake ever did anything of the kind.

One thing largely believed and frequently reported on the testimony of somebody else is the alleged fact that some snakes at times exercise the power of "charming" or drawing toward them by the fixed power of the serpent's eye small birds or squirrels, the purpose being to make a meal of the victim. This belief has been vehemently maintained and as vehemently denied, the denials being accompanied by the sneer, "You didn't see this yourself." It would seem that those who firmly believe the report—generally speaking, on the strength of the testimony of some absent friend in whose word they have implicit trust—largely outnumber those who deny; but among the latter are a few who profess to speak as scientists.

The other popular snake story is that in moments of danger the mother snake of some species will open her mouth and her brood of babies will run head first down her throat. This, too, has been dismissed as an idle tale.

Now it so happens that there are at present living in Hartford two eminently trustworthy men who can by personal experience confirm the actual truth of both these two stories, one having witnessed the performance first named, and the other seeing the second.

Mr. Samuel Taylor, of Charter Oak place, when a boy of 16, lived in Glastonbury. There, when out in the fields one day, his attention was attracted by the strange actions of a small bird—probably some ground sparrow or perhaps a "chippy." The bird paid no attention to him as he came near it, but fluttered in a wild and peculiar way on the path, sometimes fluttering up to a low twig a foot or so above the path, and again fluttering down, seemingly in great distress, and then flapping up and down, but all the while slowly getting along in one direction.

As the bird paid no attention to the boy, and did nothing to get away from him, the lad began to investigate things in the direction the bird seemed to be aiming at, and he soon discovered a black snake. The reptile was coiled, and its head was lifted somewhat above the coil. His gaze was fastened upon the fluttering bird, and his eyes were bright and glittering. The spectator of this remarkable scene waited until the reluctant and distressed bird had advanced so near that he was not over a yard from the serpent. Then he interfered. Picking up a stone he hurled it at the snake and killed him. The bird then seemed dazed, confused and helpless. Gradually it recovered, and finally flew out of sight.

It is needless to add that nobody who knows Mr. Taylor will for a moment question the truth of his statement. He is one of our best and most respected citizens.

The other witness is Col. F. W. Prince, of the Gatling Gun company. Col. Prince was a good deal of a fisherman before he went into the war. Once, he says, while fishing on a stream not many miles from Auburn, N. Y., he went to a half hollow stump near by to deposit his box of bait. In doing so he disturbed a good sized snake in the stump, apparently an adder, about whose head and body her young brood were disporting themselves. Instantly the mother snake opened wide her mouth, and down her throat ran the baby brood, one on the heels (or perhaps we should say the tail) of the other.

Being confronted by a flat denial of this statement by Mr. N. Starkweather, of this city, Col. Prince indignantly and firmly held his ground. "It may do to deny what other people have reported," he hotly replied, "but what I have seen myself I am sure of."—Hartford Times.

Close of a Famous Parisian Cafe.

The Cafe Procope, which, with hardly a sigh from the Parisian press, has closed its doors for good, was at one time the center of literary France. It was founded by one Procope, a Sicilian, in the year 1689. At this cafe Diderot, Marmontel, Freron and Mercier met. Voltaire sat here often from 10 in the morning till midnight, during which time he quaffed his coffee—indulging sometimes in twenty cups—on levee days with the aristocracy and at other times with the bourgeoisie.

Then the first revolution swept its horrors around the place. It stood throughout the empire and the restoration. The old tables were allowed to remain, and it was considered sacrilegious to call in the aid of the carpenter. Gambetta met his legal friends here. Here sat Gustave Flourens, Pascal Grousset and Raoul Rigault. Then came the fall of the Commune, the cafe became deserted, and now it is no more.—London News.

He Got Posted.

"What on earth is that vehicle galloping in that fashion for?" he asked of a pedestrian on Clifford street.

"That is the ambulance."

"Oh, something connected with the doctors?"

"Yes."

"Well, they are in an awful hurry to collect their bills to drive that way."

"Some one has been hurt, and the ambulance will take him to the hospital for treatment."

"Oh, that's it! Well, that's more sensible. I thought it queer if they galloped around after a debtor in that fashion."—Detroit Free Press.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. DEATH OF THE MASCOT.

Comedian Goodwin's Pathetic Story of Little Jack, the Lucky Pup.

"Years ago," said Nat Goodwin, "when I was a member of the old 'Evangeline' company, one night there was a great grievance among the members of the big company. The cause of this wholesale sorrow was the death of Little Jack, the pet of all the company. The sadness permeated the soul of every one connected with the company and made life a mere nothing to them. Ed Rice, erstwhile rosy in face and jovial in manner, was pale faced and melancholic, and George Fortescue lost his customary buoyancy and talkativeness and instead became spiritless and pauciloquent.

"'Little Jack' became a member of the company one cold, blizzardly night as we were about to take a train to make a jump. He ran into our car in quest of refuge from the wintry blasts, and found things so much to his liking that he sought out a snug little corner and built himself a suitable home near the stove. He remained steadily with us until his death. He would go into a town, go away in the morning and somehow find the theatre in the evening, always at the same hour. He attracted little or no attention. I was playing 'La Blanch, the Secretary,' and saw genius in the youngster. So he acted every night after that but one, the particular night of which I speak. 'Evangeline's' receipts dropped off.

"All hands, true to the instinct of show people in such cases, began a search for the 'Jonah.' After various and fruitless explorations into the subject the discovery was made that 'Little Jack' was not in his accustomed place, and straightway the falling off of business was attributed to his absence. The next night the little fellow was on hand, and the receipts jumped to normal size as suddenly as they had fallen off. This was conclusive evidence to all concerned that Little Jack was a mascot. It was then that his pethood began. He was looked upon as an idol, and honors untold were heaped upon him, including the high one of being named 'Jack,' after Jack Richardson, our treasurer. To speak lightly of him meant a fight, and to harm him meant utter annihilation.

"'Little Jack' was the tiniest specimen of a Scotch terrier you ever saw. After the night I discovered his talents I used to tie a big three-inch rope, which was about thirty feet long, to the little collar on his neck, and tug him out on the stage as though trying to pull an elephant. After I had pulled thirty feet of the rope 'Little Jack' would toddle out with this big rope tied to him, which would set the audience into convulsions. The night that such a gloom was cast over the company 'Jack' had been found dead on the stage behind a big property trunk, and the next night forty members of our company stood silently by while Ed Rice, with a spade and his own hands, dug a little grave a little ways from the theatre, in which 'Little Jack' was cuddled down in his last resting place."—Minneapolis Journal.

The Water Wheel at Night.

For years the question as to whether water wheels ran faster at night than during the day has been catalogued among "the things that will never be settled." Surely the answer is: They do; that is, if they are so geared as to be affected by the varying fullness and speed of the current in which they are set. There is no doubt that all springs are fuller and all streams carry more water at midnight than they do at noon. In the first place, the increased coolness of the air prevents evaporation and drying up of the small tributaries; and in the second place, the condensation of the moisture in the air, in the shape of dew, is always sufficient to add something to the stream and its branches; heavy dews are often so copious as to be equal to a slight shower.

We often hear dew drops falling from overloaded leaves, and find every exposed object loaded with drops of water. A large part of this gets into the minute channels, which conduct it to the streams. Often the effect upon a shallow river is very noticeable indeed, and therefore a wheel turned by such a river would go appreciably faster by night than by day.—St. Louis Republic.

What Are National Airs.

There seems to be a rather mixed idea with the average American as to what particular pieces of music are national airs. The majority of them are familiar with "God Save the Queen," set to the words of "My Country, 'tis of Thee," and "The Red, White and Blue," which is an English air, but when an original American air is reached there are many who fail to recognize it. When the Strauss orchestra reached that stirring national hymn, "The Star Spangled Banner," a rather pretty lady in the audience nodded her head with a smile of appreciation and said: "I do think those Strausses compose such pretty music. I think that last piece was the best of the lot." It looks very much as if "Yankee Doodle" would remain the national air for some time to come in the face of such convincing evidence.—Minneapolis Tribune.

For the cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh after all other modes of treatment have failed.

History of Pen Making.

A Roman metal pen is said to have been found at Aosta—not a mere stylus, but a bronze pen, slit, and there is evidence of a pen or reed of bronze nearly as late as the invention of printing, in the Fifteenth century.

A hundred years ago some steel pens were made in Birmingham, England, by Mr. Harrison for Dr. Priestly, and some of these passed into the hands of Sir Joseph Mason in his early days with Mr. Harrison, but all of them have been lost. The first pen of metal, of a date beyond all question, is one in a Dutch patent book of 1717. At the same time a polite ode by Pope refers to a "steel and gold pen," but these were evidently luxuries only.

It was about 1823 or 1824 that the great revolution in making pens by a cheaper process—the hand screw press, which pierced the pens from sheet steel—began. Previously pens had been made from steel or gold rolled into tubes and with a joint forming the slit. These required considerable labor to shape them into pen form.

The use of the screw press belongs to the period of John Mitchell, Joseph Gillott and Joseph Mason, but on a careful review of the facts it seems to be clear that John Mitchell has the best claim to be considered as the introducer of press made pens. Skinner, of Sheffield, England, was apparently one of the first to cheapen the production of pens, but his manufactures were surpassed when the screw press was introduced.—Exchange.

A Dog's Hard Life.

There are a great many touching sights in a great city, but none much more so than to watch a lost dog. At first there is a look of startled surprise on his face when he loses the scent, quickly followed by a grim sort of humor, as though pretending his bewilderment is but a joke. He circles round and round, and his face grows thin and his eye almost human in its anxious pleading. He starts off in one direction, sure that he has found the trail. He is baffled, turned back. He looks in the face of all who pass, as if questioning to know his way. He thinks he recognizes his master, and is off like a flash, only to return more anxious and eager than before.

He gives himself no rest, but doubles and pursues and turns back until all hope is dead in his faithful canine breast, and he starts off with a long lope down the street. Then it is that some demoniac boy or some detestable man flings a stone at him or kicks him as he flies by, and the cry is raised: "Mad dog! Kill him!" So the great host of idlers in ambush, who wait the opportunity for mischief as bees await the blossom of the buckwheat, are turned loose upon his track and his doom is sealed. From a lost dog to a hunted and dead cur is an easy transition.—Chicago Herald.

The Destroying Sand Wave.

Born of the wind and the sea, on the sandy beaches of Capes Hatteras and Henlopen, is a curious natural phenomenon. A mammoth wave of sand, that towers aloft like a sea wave, even curling over in places like a huge breaker, is rolling inland irresistibly, and lacking only the element of speed in its career to carry such terror to the hearts of the inhabitants as is inspired by the sea waves that follow an earthquake, for the destructiveness of the sand wave is limited only by its scope.

Though similar in origin, substance and motive power, there is yet so much difference between the two waves in form, extent and speed of travel, and in the actual destruction of property, that each is a study in itself. Especially noticeable is the difference in the devastation wrought, for while one is laying waste a forest of small value the other is burying inexorably a hundred lowly homes.—John R. Spears in Scribner's.

Leaning on Others.

Many times have I smiled at the story of the man who, in town meeting, when they "divided the house" to vote, ran back and forth and up and down both sides, inquiring where Deacon —— was, and I am always reminded of it when I hear of people pinning their faith upon other's coat sleeves, yet how many do this; how comparatively few do real, honest, independent thinking for themselves. "We have been taught to believe," was the excuse given for every doctrine and action otherwise unexplainable by a hill town pundit once, and it tallied with the practice of a man who, when asked what he thought about the revised Bible, said he didn't know; he paid his minister to do his thinking for him!—Hampshire County (Mass.) Gazette.

Success at Last.

First Actor—Did you hear about De Rante? He was playing in Kansas a few nights ago, and the house fell upon him.

Second Actor—How fortunate! That is the first house he ever brought down. I hope it was a big one.—Epoch.

A Lapsus.

Teacher—How does the earth absorb water?

Pupil—Same as a dog does.

Teacher—How's that?

Pupil—Haven't you heard of a lap of earth? What do you suppose it laps with?—Texas Siftings.

The Wild Horse of Dzungaria.

The wild horse of Dzungaria is an animal the size of the hemione and more robust in its proportions, in which it resembles the pony. Its head is large, with ears smaller than those of the hemione, the shoulders thick, especially in the male; the limbs robust and stubbier than those of the hemiones and asses. The mane is short and straight, and the moderately long tail is terminated by a tuft of long hairs in much more abundant supply than in the tail of the hemione. It has warts on the hind legs as well as on the fore legs—a peculiarity of the horse, distinguishing it from the other species of the genus, which have warts only on the fore legs.

The hoofs are full like those of a horse, and not compressed as in the other species, and the lower parts of the legs are furnished with long hairs falling to the crown of the hoof, a feature which the hemiones lack. Likewise characteristic is the color of the pelage, a pale gray, almost white, passing into dun on the head and neck, and blending insensibly on the flanks with the pure white of the belly and limbs. The mane, the brush of the tail and the long hairs of the lower legs and hoofs are black. There is no trace of the dark dorsal stripe running from the mane to the tail which is characteristic of the hemione. The hairy covering is long and undulating, especially in the rigorous winter of that northern region.—Montreal Star.

Fire Escape Drills in Schools.

The practicing of pupils in the fire drill, in order to prevent accidents from the alarm of fire, is now regarded as a most important part of school training. In the schools of Vienna the fire escape drill is executed in three different ways. In the case of a fire in the neighborhood (signal No. 1) the pupils place their books in their satchels, put on their outer garments, and leave the class room in groups of four. If the danger is imminent (signal No. 2) the books are left, the outer garments rapidly put on and the class room is vacated. In case of extreme peril (signal No. 3) the books and clothing are left, and the exit is made immediately in groups.

In the fire drill at Hamilton, Ont., arrangements are also made for each class to keep its own side of the stairway and move on independently of other classes preceding or following. In this school 600 pupils have vacated their class room in less than two minutes. The fire drill is not only an effective safeguard against the danger of panics, but is also a good gymnastic exercise.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Queer Sort of Newspaper.

Newspapers are always vaunting themselves as having the "largest circulation" in the world. Here is a new idea for them. The Austrian emperor's morning paper, which his imperial majesty cons daily and consults over occasionally, has the smallest circulation in the world; in fact its circulation is limited to the august Francis Joseph himself. This Chronicle—I believe that is the name—is the most curious publication imaginable. Its proprietor is the emperor, it is published for the emperor, and so far as I can learn it is only read by the emperor.

It is at any rate issued for his sole benefit, and the imperial news bureau brings it out at a cost of 200,000 guldens yearly. It contains, in a condensed form, all the articles in foreign papers which refer to Austria. Surely this is true wisdom—I mean this desire of becoming acquainted with all that is publicly said or written about one's self, when that self is set in high place. Many a word which no courtier nor subject would venture to speak direct may thus find its way to the imperial ear.—London Cor. Critic.

A Remarkable Accident.

A remarkable accident occurred at the Penryn quarry Monday morning by which John E. Owens lost a foot. Mr. Owens was engaged with others in hoisting rock from the quarry with a derrick. An immense load was swinging out of the pit when the derrick cable broke and the granite fell back with a crash. The stone did not hit any one, but the broken rope went hissing through the air like a shot, and the flying end caught Mr. Owens around the left leg at the ankle joint. The force of the blow must have been extreme, for the foot was severed from the leg by the stroke as completely as if it had been cut off with a broad ax. Dr. Todd was sent for, and he amputated the leg just above the cut made by the rope, and Mr. Owens is doing well under the circumstances. The accident is an odd one.—Placer Republican.

Did Job Use Slang?

Job has usually been considered a pure and godly man, untainted by anything but boils throughout his whole existence. Job, however, must have been somewhat of a sport, else he never would have been guilty of using some of the slang phrases accredited to him. For instance, when his three friends, Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar, came to visit him at the time of his sore affliction, Job opened his mouth and said: "Ye are the people." Job could never have learned that phrase at any other place than at a baseball game or horse trot.—Buffalo Express.

There are never less than 60,000 able bodied, willing, unemployed men in New York. These are the disappointed. Of women the surplus is simply frightful, for there are 80,000 more women than men in New York, according to the last estimate.

That Little Tickling

In your throat, which makes you cough once in awhile and keeps you constantly clearing your throat, arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many people who have taken this medicine for scrofula, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and other troubles, have been surprised that it should cure this troublesome cough. But to know the actual cause of the cough is to solve the mystery. Many cases of consumption can be traced back to the neglect of some such slight affection as this. Consumption can be controlled in its early stages, and the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom this dreaded disease seemed to have a firm hold.

The wisest men have never in any age been best men.

It isn't hard to be anything. It is the seeming to be that is hard.

Literary Notices.

The November ARENA is brainy without being too heavy. Probably the most striking paper is on The Future American Drama, completed by Mr. Boucicault a few days before his death. A paragraph of Mr. Boucicault's writing penned a few days before his death accompanies the article. Cyrus A. Bartol, whose strong yet benign face forms the frontispiece of this issue, writes on the Sex in Mind, a paper displaying the mental vigor which made Dr. Bartol one of the ablest representatives of New England thought. Prof. N. S. Shaler contributes an able philosophical paper on the African element in America. Rev. Minot J. Savage in a Glance at the Good Old Times, gives a contrast between the past and the present. Nathan Haskell Dole contributes a paper on Turgenief as a poet, giving liberal translations from the great Russian author. A magnificent full-page picture of Turgenief, with his autograph in Russian, accompanies this paper. A New Basis of Church Life is the title of a thoughtful essay. The heavy papers of this issue are enlivened by a charming paper entitled Fiddling His Way to Fame. It is a sketch of Governor Taylor's life, supposed to be given by the governor in the dialect of his early home—East Tennessee. Sunset on the Mississippi, by Virginia Frazer Boyle, follows. One of the most interest features of this number is a symposium on Destitution in Boston. Edward Hamilton, Rev. Edward Everett Hale, Rabbi Solomon Schlindler, Rev. O. P. Gifford, Rev. W. D. P. Bliss, editor of the Dawn, contribute to this symposium. The moral force evinced in THE ARENA is noticeable in these days of characterless publications. Its instincts are decidedly reformative. This power has undoubtedly contributed largely to the remarkable success of THE ARENA. The departments on Notes of Living Problems contain contributions by Francis E. Willard, Gen. Marcus J. Wright, and Rev. Forrest A. March. The usual interesting editorial notes complete this excellent issue. THE ARENA has become a popular review among those who think broadly and are brave enough to hear all sides.

TWO FACES.

"Come," on his face I see engraven,
"Come," in your woes will he;
Here you shall find a restful haven,
You who have comfort missed;
Though I am busy I will hear you,
I will your troubles aid,
Through all your trials will be near you,
Come, and be not afraid."

"Go," on this face I see as plainly
As if the word were there,
"You, who may plead, are pleading vainly,
Naught for your woes I care;
I know you not, you only vex me,
What is to me your need?
And why should your troubles perplex me,
Go, my way you impede!"

Two in the Master's likeness living,
Two, but yet so unlike,
One kindly looks and comfort giving,
One with dark frowns to strike;
Two, but one loving as a brother.
Ready always to aid,
Bring all your prayers for the other,
Two in His likeness made.

Drama of Dunstable Farm.

BY DORA REED GOODALE.

Having no special interests of my own, and being of a somewhat observant habit of mind, I was last summer a sympathetic spectator of the little domestic experience which I have called here the drama of Dunstable Farms. I may even say that I was a humble participant in it.

The heroine—but stop! the minor characters should appear first. Now Patty, it must be confessed, is a minor character. Enter Patty, then, first, with her apron on, and her hair rolled up smoothly under a round white cap—not pretty at all, but wholesome and pleasant to look on, and as satisfying for a long journey as a lot of brown bread.

Dunstable Farms; you may have heard of the place, where the family has flourished and spread like a banyan grove since William Dunstable planted himself here in, I don't know what, year of grace. All the land hereabout was bought of the Indian tribes, the old deeds signed with their "marks" being still in the family archives, so that it is the Dunstable boast that their acres have never been owned by any white man bearing another name.

Hither, to "recruit," on a notable morning in May, when the roads had recovered from the prolonged state of prostration which afflicts them in early spring, came I—a spinster, reader, but not too old a one to find young people congenial.

Patty met me at the station. Patty drove me home and unharnessed the horse, and afterward set the table and brought out the sweetmeats for supper. Then she superintended the carrying of my trunks up a flight of back stairs which seemed designed for the shaft of an elevator. Patty was the active, the serviceable, the delightful; there were five in the family now, she said—her father, her mother, herself, Norah the cook, and Stephen the hired man. I was to be the only boarder.

This Stephen I immediately seized upon as the villain of my piece, chiefly because of his rough, shaggy head and his solemn, inscrutable visage, which looked as if he were revolving the darkest designs, although I could hear of none worse than a great thirst for learning. It was a democratic household, and Stephen had his seat at the lower end of the table. He and Mr. Dunstable often paused to discuss the care of the live stock and methods of tilling.

But I soon learned that there was another daughter, Eunice, the sixteen-year-old, and the clever one of the family. There was always one headpiece among the Dunstable kin, said Patty, ingenuously, and she further informed me that it was odd that Eunice should have come into this family inheritance, because their own father was not the bright one of his generation; but Eunice took after her Uncle Erastus, she s'posed, who studied at Middlefield College and went into the ministry.

It was an understood thing that the most intelligent one, boy or girl, should have good advantages, and Eunice carried off the prize at a spelling-match, while still a small creature in pinafores, and in the district school outstripped all the cousins growing up at Dunstable Farms, a family conclave was held. One uncle contributed a heifer, another a sheep,—they were land-poor, these Dunstables, and saw very few present dollars in the course of a year,—and the girl was sent fifty miles away to the Young Ladies' Seminary. This was two years ago, and next year she would graduate.

I must own that my feelings received a shock on first seeing this bright one, this Eunice, some three weeks later, when Stephen lifted her and her trunks from the ample farm-wagon. Whatever the original material might be, the veneer of boarding-school life was displayed to perfection. She wore a white hat with some "style" about it, indeed, but a very objectionable style, as it seemed to me, and a pair of kid gloves at least two sizes too small. She could not have handled a fork in those gloves, nor have held up her skirt, much less her umbrella. Now Patty's best gloves were of gray cotton, with lace-work wrists, and sometimes, I ought to add, she wore them when she saddled the horse.

It was hard to understand how any girl could be at once so keen and so contradictory as Miss Eunice. She did not seem to despise the farm, but professed an ignorance of things pertaining to it which, it seemed to me, could not be genuine. She would dislike Stephen, I supposed, as a common farm laborer, and he would find her fine-lady airs ridiculous.

Alas, that even at thirty our wisdom is baffled by these young folks at every turn! Miss Eunice treated Stephen with good-natured indifference, while he, like the perverse fellow he was, chose to treat her from the first as a kind of divinity.

She was given to studying geometry, and biology, too; she spent whole forenoons over the microscope, dissecting not only plants but fishes and mice, although Patty on no account would have permitted her to joint up the chickens for dinner. She was not an idle girl, but full of activities rather, and yet she did nothing at all to help in the house, except to trim over Patty's hats and remodel most of her dresses.

Stephen spent his evenings, alone and remorse, in the kitchen, for Norah usually sat in the porch; he was working at his books, they said, though how he could study after from ten to fourteen hours in the field was a mystery to me.

One evening, when the lamps had been lighted, Norah came in, a sheet of brown paper, covered with diagrams, in her hand, to say that Stephen was "wantin' to know if Miss Eunice wouldn't just cast an eye over that, for he couldn't mek out the throuble at all, at all."

Patty looked up apprehensively. I thought, for Stephen's requests sometimes verged on the audacious, except that they were made with so much solemn unconsciousness; but Eunice took the paper obligingly.

When she saw what it was, her face lighted up. She bit her lip over it a few moments in silence, and then rushed out to the kitchen.

When I followed a little later—to get a glass of new milk—they were sitting at the well-scrubbed table, with a battered geometry between them, both heads bent, both faces shining with eagerness, and both tongues murmuring something about the maximum of isoperimetrical polygons.

That was the beginning of Eunice's interest in Stephen. The girl thought so highly of intellectual force that all her good will was gained when she found some one who had, alone and unaided, almost overtaken her in her favorite study. Every night afterward she insisted on helping him, and did it with only a trace in her air of the beautiful patroness.

Certainly a teacher like Eunice must have put a new meaning into the dog-eared volumes. She found a place for Stephen now at our picnics and other frolics, planning things so gracefully that her father never seemed to miss the time of his foreman, and leading Stephen to talk of himself with the kindest maternal sympathy; he was only two years older than she!

Nor was this all. Early and late, in season and out of season, Eunice urged on us all that the boy should have better opportunities. He was ten times as clever as she, she declared, though nobody believed it; it was a pity and a shame that he did not go to school, and something ought to be done about it. Mr. Dunstable told her that Stephen's father had been the skipper of a sailing vessel, and was lost, I believe, on the high seas somewhere between here and China.

"Haven't you ever seen those outlandish knives of Stephen's, with the queer figgers on 'em? That's about all he left him, I reckon," said good Mr. Dunstable.

The next time Stephen passed, he was called up to display these wonderful weapons, which he brought forth directly from an inside pocket, thereby reviving my theory as to his dangerous character, which was beginning to waver.

We were sitting at the time out under the copper-leaved birches with a young heiress, who was boarding down in the village. She was a collector of curios, and took a great fancy to these knives, which were beautiful little toys of Indian or Chinese workmanship. The delicately-curved two-edged blades were thrust into short leather sheaths, and the round handles of ivory carved over with dragons. Afterward, and certainly not without a mental reservation for the owner's own benefit, she offered Stephen twenty-five dollars apiece for the two; but Stephen, to our surprise, refused to sell them, saying that his father had given them to him and he would never part with them. Eunice was at no pains to conceal her vexation.

Meanwhile I began to suspect that all was not right with Mr. Dunstable's own financial affairs. He had always been the unthrifty one of his family, with an unfortunate tendency toward "spekilation." He was an old man now, and somewhat broken down, so that the management of the place was left more and more in the hands of Patty and Stephen. Patty, indeed, was quite competent to assume the whole charge; but her father looked so anxious and worried that I guessed, as I fancy she did, that some bad news was coming.

At last the blow fell. Of the purse which the brothers had made up to pay for Eunice's schooling, one hundred dollars had been reserved to cover the tuition fees in the coming September. This Mr. Dunstable had risked—invested, or what you will, and lost it.

Now to go in debt is to go branded, in the eye of a Dunstable. One resource, however, remained for Eunice. Mr. Dunstable had a colt, raised on the farm, and dear as the apple of his eye because of a fond belief which he entertained that it was destined one day to develop "speed." It was in truth a fine colt, though a little long in the legs and lean in the neck, and given to sundry very lively tricks and deversions.

This colt Mr. Dunstable determined to sell. He was young, recently broken, and useless for heavy farm labor. Having raised by the sale of this animal the formidable sum, Eunice's other expenses would doubtless be gradually forthcoming. When Eunice protested, her father sternly silenced her, declaring that the money he had lost was given in trust for her schooling.

Presently Mr. Chichester, a farmer from under the mountain who had long had a covetous eye upon the colt, came up to Dunstable Farms one bright afternoon. He looked the animal over, got Stephen to show off his paces—how pretty and docile he was that day to be sure!—examined his teeth and his hoofs, and partly concluded a bargain. He was to take him home for a week, at the end of which time, if the animal proved sound and steady, he would pay down the $100.

Honest Mr. Dunstable made no objection to such an arrangement. He was as blind where the faults of his favorite were concerned as the most partial of parents. Exit Mr. Chichester—exit the colt, quite sedate, at the tail of his wagon.

We all lived that week in a vague atmosphere of suspense. I could not but think it ill-judged when, at the expiration of the time, Mr. Dunstable announced his intention of sending Stephen after the money, especially as I heard him say, as the lad was preparing to set off:

"Now, if he should think we was askin' a leetle too much, if the colt's be'n up to his games and he wants ye should knock a bit off from the price, I wouldn't stick out for a few dollars—not for a few dollars, Stephen. We could make it up somehow—so see ye don't bring back the creatur'"

This was putting too much responsibility on such a young lad. I, for one, was greatly relieved when Stephen returned at dusk, and much to his own satisfaction and the general rejoicing unrolled from his wallet and placed in his employer's hands one hundred dollars. Mr. Chichester, he said, was satisfied with his bargain; he thought the colt a fine fellow, although fractious at times.

Matters now seemed to settle back into the old grooves, and Eunice began to make preparations for school. But several days later she came in from a round of calls looking flushed and disturbed, and asked if her father could lend a horse the next day. After much wrinkling of eyebrows and twisting of fingers the farmer concluded that the sorrel mare could be spared, and Eunice invited me to accompany her, on some sort of a drive, the purpose of which she did not announce. I accepted, because I was quite willing to study the girl.

Our drive took us through a part of the region unknown to me hitherto, and brought us at last to the gate of a farmhouse of prosperous appearance when Eunice drew up and asked me to hold the reins while she went in.

A few moments later she came down the gravel walk in a somewhat agitated way and with eyes sparkling. As soon as we were fairly started she turned to me, saying abruptly, "Mr. Chichester gave only fifty dollars for that colt!"

"Only fifty dollars?" I echoed, astonished.

"Yes. And Stephen sold his knives to make it up to a hundred."

"What? Oh, I see! But how did you know?"

"Why, when I called on Miss Willoughby yesterday, she said something about her good fortune in securing those Chinese daggers. A sort of suspicion passed over me. I asked her when Stephen had sold them, and she said it was Tuesday, she believed. He came in just at dark, looking 'pale and odd,' and told her he had reconsidered. She gave him the money."

"Yes, but about the colt? Did she know about that?"

"Of course not. I came here to see Mr. Chichester. I looked him straight in the eye and asked what he paid for it. He said 'Fifty dollars' before he thought, and then clapped his hand upon his mouth. 'Hold on!' he said; 'I promised the young fellow not to mention the price.' It is not so strange that Stephen had to come down. Mr. Chichester says the colt can jump any fence on the place, and made kindling wood of his best phaeton the first time he drove him. He will have to be put in the hands of a regular trainer."

"But I think it was very unwarrantable in Stephen," I protested.

"It was certainly unwarrantable in him to put me under such obligations, I think," said Eunice. The tears which ran down her pretty cheeks were tears of mortified pride.

I was not surprised that the girl should take it in this way, knowing that it often requires a more generous nature to accept a favor than to render one. Eunice had played the part of the fair benefactress so well that her self-love was naturally wounded. Therefore, I was scarcely less astonished than was Stephen when, on reaching home, she walked straight up to him in the yard, with both hands held out, and said, simply, "O Stephen, I know all about it."

The school-books rested that night while the boy and girl sat on the door-step outside, and snatches of their conversation came in through my open window.

"But I wanted to do it," I heard Stephen say in his serious way. "Why, Miss Eunice, what did I care about them?"

Afterward came Eunice's fresh, unmistakable voice, "Yes, Stephen, I will accept it—that is, for the present."

This seemed to be satisfactory, and concluded the interview.

Last week I received the following characteristic letter from Patty:

"DUNSTABLE FARMS, January 12th.

"MY DEAR MISS FULTON: You asked me to write to you after the holidays were over. We all spent Christmas Day at the homestead and had a real family party. Eunice was at home, of course, and what do you think? She had actually been teaching in the night schools and brought back that fifty dollars that Stephen lent her. Stephen is going to take it and go in the high school this term. Eunice likes teaching so much, and says she intends to devote her life to it—but she may change her mind. I think it wonderful, though, how much good she did Stephen. I never saw any one improve as he has.

"By the way, we hear now that the colt is going to be a great troter. [Patty's orthography was not always faultless.] However, perhaps it is just as well that we've got him off from our minds. And you know he did act awfully.

"Father and mother send their respects. We hope you will come here next summer.

"Affectionately yours,

PATTY DUNSTABLE."

So ends the drama. Patty is not yet promoted from the farm-house kitchen. The heroine was not miraculously cured of her follies; and the villain turned out to be the hero.—Youth's Companion.

Woman's Column.

The vote in the Methodist churches, so far as taken, stands about five to one in favor of women as lay delegates.

Mlle. Augusta Holmes, who wrote the "Ode Triomphale" in honor of the centenary of 1889, has been elected a member of the Musical Institute at Florence, Italy.

Miss Harriet McEwen Kimball, of Portsmouth, N. H., has received the first prize of $100 for a hymn to be sung on hospital days in the churches and aynagogues of New York.

Dr. Garrett Anderson (a sister of Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett) declares that ladies of thirty, forty and fifty years of age would be greatly benefited if they would play at ball half an hour daily.

Senorita Clotilde Casteneda recently won the title of surgeon dentist in the national school of medicine of the city of Mexico, after a long and severe examination which demonstrated her talent and extensive study.

The woman suffrage amendment in South Dakota is defeated. No suffragist who knows the situation in that State, the attitude of political parties, and the peculiar difficulties the amendment has had to contend with, will be discouraged by the result.—Woman's Journal.

You ask my reasons for believing in women's suffrage. It seems to me almost self-evident, an axiom, that every house-holder and tax-payer ought to have a voice in the expenditure of the money we pay, including, as this does, interests the most vital to a human being.—Florence Nightingale.

Miss Sadie Elliot, daughter of the late Bishop of Georgia, is the author of "Jerry," the anonymous story that appeared as a serial in Scribner's Magazine and was attributed to Charles Egbert Craddock and other distinguished writers. During the past twelve years Miss Elliot has published many stories, essays and novels under her own name.

"The Training of a Nurse," by Mrs. Frederick Rhinelander Jones, in the November Scribner, describes the education for what has been called the new profession for women. Mrs. Jones has given sketches written by several pupils of the New York Training-School, describing their actual experiences during a day or night of work in a hospital.

Mrs. B. D. Locke, of Haverhill, N. H., has given her beautiful residence, valued at $25,000, to the New Hampshire Orphans' Home. It has been decided to accept the generous offer, provided an enabling act can be procured from the Legislature, which is necessary, owing to the charter of the institution. The buildings will be devoted to a nursery accomodating thirty-five to fifty, and will constitute a branch of the New Hampshire Orphans' Home.

Attorney-General Tabor, of New York, has given an opinion that "physical disability" does not apply to people who cannot read or write from want of education, or who cannot prepare their ballots because of being drunk. Such people, the opinion states, will not be allowed, there-fore, to take anyone with them when they enter the polling booth to show them how to vote. What a shame it is that such men are the political superiors of women.

Miss Anna L. Gorman, a Boston artist in water color and an occasional writer, who patented a faience a few years ago and had much success with it, has invented an easel writing-desk which is ingenious, convenient and beautiful. It appears first as an oaken easel with a water color picture resting upon it. The picture is then turned down and its back forms a writing-desk, which is furnished with drawers, rests and places for everything. Finally this pretty and useful contrivance can be folded up into a square parcel which will go into any trunk. A large concern has purchased the right of manufacture, and it is expected that the inventor will receive much more than "pin money."

The Boston Transcript, quoted on election day the words of the New York Evening Post, that "as a matter of fact, the interest of women in municipal reform is much greater than that of men. To women far more than to most men, the objects of municipal administration, the condition of the streets, of the sewers, of the school-houses, of the hospitals and almshouses, and the police, are of daily and absorbing interest. In capacity for dealing with municipal matters, as really household matters, the educated women of the community are as competent as the great bulk of the men." And the Transcript sensibly adds: "Why not, then, have their assistance in securing good municipal government as a regular, instead of an extra-ordinary, thing? There is no reason why, except habits and prejudices which have no sound, respectable basis."

About It.

The Millions of Money and thousands of men now going from all parts of the North to all parts of the South, from Virginia and North Carolina to Texas, are, every man and dollar of them, most solicitously opposed to the federal election bill; and not only that, but investors are disgusted with the spirit behind it—the purpose to keep the South an issue. The new South, as every investor in it knows, is no more deserving of being treated differently from the rest of the country than is the new West. There is no telling how much of the popular revulsion against Republicanism attributed to the McKinley, is really due to the Lodge bill; but it is no small proportion.

Failures in Life.

People fail in many ways. In business, in morality, in religion, in happiness, and in health. A weak heart is often an unsuspected cause of failure in life. If the blood does not circulate properly in the lungs, there is shortness of breath, asthma, etc.; in the brain, dizziness, headache, etc.; in the stomach, wind, pain, indigestion, faint spells, etc.; in the liver, torpidity, congestion, etc. Paine in the left side, shoulder and stomach is caused by heart strain. For all these maladies Dr. Miles' New Cure for the heart and lungs is the best remedy. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

When a wise man said, "Discretion is the better part of valor," all the cowards in the world found a motto for their caps.

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, NOV. 21, 1890.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE NOMINATIONS.

Last evening the Republicans and Democrats of this city nominated Ald. W. C. Kenney for Mayor.

A MISTAKE.

The opinion prevails among Republicans in this city that a grave mistake was made at the Republican caucus in Ward 4 last Saturday evening by not nominating E. E. Thompson, Esq., President of the present Common Council, for Alderman. Before the caucus convened his nomination by a unanimous vote was considered a foregone conclusion, and when it was learned that different action had been taken the surprise was great in all quarters.

Mr. Thompson was not, it is understood, refused a place in the list of Aldermanic nominations because he has failed to fill an honorable position in the City Council with dignity and ability, but he was left out solely because some people were foolish enough to believe that he had allied himself with "the ring," as it is called, at the Municipal Building and had joined his political fortunes with the alleged "Junto" who fly their flag from that edifice.

It was a great error. Mr. Thompson is not a spoilsman and therefore nobody should have been deceived into the belief that he was a "ring" man, or that he would countenance any course either in politics or in public business that was not honest and above board.

In leaving Mr. Thompson out Ward 4 did a very foolish thing, neither could it have been accomplished had his friends suspected that there was a move on foot to beat him.

A FEW FIGURES.

During the two years that Mr. Johnson has been Mayor of this city the gross reduction of our permanent debt has been $117,000; the shrinkage of the Sinking Fund has been, in the same time, $60,000; this makes the net reduction of the debt $57,000. In the mean time the rate of taxation has decreased about $3 on $1000. Such little sums in arithmetic as these are worth more than volumes of argument when brought to bear on the question of the success of Mr. Johnson's administration.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES.

A careful survey of the list of Republican candidates for Aldermen and Councilmen is enough to convince any candid man that it is infinitely better than the Democratic list and that each man on it deserves to be elected by a handsome majority. They are people of clean moral character and good business habits, and would govern the city in good shape.

Republicans, it is your duty to go to work and elect the ticket you have nominated for City Council.

KENNEY TO BE MAYOR.

There is no longer any doubt but that Ald. W. C. Kenney is to be the next Mayor of this city. The business is as good as settled.

The JOURNAL believes that Ald. Kenney will fill the office with credit to himself and the city.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus." Dec. 4.

— Miss Ellis has lost an onyx earring. See ad.

— It rained all day Monday and about all of the following night.

— Read what Fitz & Stanley say about "Thanksgiving Goods" in this paper to-day.

— Come to the JOURNAL office anyone who wants to hire furnished rooms with furnace heat.

— Rhoderick, son of the late Major J. W. McDonald, has been visiting his family in this city.

— Comrade A. P. Barrett went over to Lexington and inspected Post 119 G. A. R. last week.

— Read the notice in this paper of a dramatic entertainment to be given in this city on Dec. 10.

— Post 161. G.A.R., was duly inspected by Comrade Waterman of Post 66, Medford, with the customary et ceteras, last week.

— The carnival at Carter's rink last Wednesday evening was a big thing. A large crowd was present, and the music was very fine.

— Chester Cotton and Chester Smith won prizes at the Bonnet Party of the Charitable Society of the Congregational Church last week.

— Mr. Sparrow Horton has the "Old Farmers Almanac" for 1891. He also keeps all the magazines and Boston daily papers.

— We call attention to the change of the Commonwealth Clothing Co's advertisement this week. The house is one of the largest in Boston.

— Fred K. Reade, formerly foreman in the Advertiser office, became the happy parient of a bouncing boy on Nov. 15. Congratulations, Fred.

— At its regular meeting last week the Woburn Co-operative Bank sold $3,200, and might have sold as much more had the amount been in the treasury to sell.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus." Dec. 4.

— The late Mrs. Celene T. Dow left in her will $2000 to the Woburn Home for Aged Women, and $500 to the Ladies Charitable Society of the Congregational Church.

— A prominent Democrat in Ward 7 said a day or two since that Messrs. Pushee and Hanson are certain to be elected. The Democrats over there are disgusted with their candidates.

— We should hardly think of keeping house these days without an "Old Farmer's Almanac" hanging on the wall, therefore we thank William Ware & Co. of Boston for an 1891 copy.

— The Order of Red Men will give a dance on the evening before Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26. Sachem O. J. Hart is interested in the affair, which means that it will be a large sized time.

— Several Woburn people went into Boston last Tuesday evening to hear Stanley, the great African Explorer, lecture. They said they were more than paid for the expense and trouble.

— Messrs. W. H. Smith & Co., Boston real estate dealers and auctioneers, advertise a large amount of household goods and other personal property for sale at auction, to which advertisement we direct especial attention.

— Big plate-glass windows have been put into Mrs. Packard's elegant millinery store in Mechanic's Block, nearly opposite the JOURNAL establishment, which improve the premises very much. Mrs. Packard is doing a thriving business.

— Mr. C. M. Munroe calls attention to matters concerning the clothing business in his card this week which is of interest to every man in the community. Mr. Munroe's trade has increased very much this fall and is growing larger every week.

— Winslow, Cooper, Harrington and Sutherland are four of the old Boston & Lowell Railroad employees who have died within a year. They were locomotive engineers in the beginning of the life of the road, and were all rising 80 years old when they died.

— Don't you need something for the Dining Room before Thanksgiving? How about a new Dinner Table? This is the best time to buy, as great bargains are offered in Dining Room furniture for the next ten days, at Paine's Murniture Warerooms, 48 Canal street, Boston.

— Mrs. Pindar, formerly of Woburn but for some years of Boston Highlands, is a lady of good taste and judgment. She writes us that THE WOBURN JOURNAL is one of the good things of life and without it she wouldn't think of trying to keep house. Thanks.

— Mr. Anthony A. Dorherty and Miss Josephine Carroll were married last Thursday evening by Rev. Fr. Quealy at the Parsonage, after which a very large reception was held at his residence, where a royal wedding feast, music, etc., were furnished. It was a society event.

— Mr. Samuel W. Mendum, sub-Master of the Woburn High School, attended the dinner of the New England Tariff Reform League at the American House, Boston, last Wednesday evening, and made a speech which the papers say "was frequently interrupted by applause."

— The Y. M. Club held a very interesting monthly meeting last evening. President Clough presided and the attendance was large. Rev. Mr. Porter of Lexington was booked for an address, and Mr. Winthrop Hammond read a very interesting and valuable paper on "Roads," etc.

— The workmen are just more than going for the old Methodist meeting-house. Mr. B. F. Waldron superintends the changes and improvements for the Mechanic Association (the owners), under whose directions and the hands of the carpenters the old building won't hardly know itself.

— Mrs. O. B. Darling, President of the Lexington Relief Corps, inspected Relief Corps 84 last week at Grand Army Hall, 33. Several Lexington ladies came over with Mrs. Darling who were given a handsome reception and fine supper by the ladies of No. 84. They all had a very pleasant time.

— Remember, voters, that an opportunity to register for the coming city election will be given you to-morrow afternoon, also this and to-morrow evenings, Nov. 21, 22, at 7 o'clock, and close on Saturday evening, Nov. 22, at 10 o'clock. See notice of Registrars of Voters in another column.

— Lovers of the dance should bear in mind the grand sunlight ball to be given at Amory Hall in Stoneham on the afternoon of Nov. 27 — Thanksgiving day — from 2 to 6 o'clock. The very best of music has been engaged for the occasion, and the affair is going to be the best of the season. The tickets are placed at 50 cents.

— Dr. J. P. Shields proudly occupies the handsomest drugstore in Woburn. It is the neatest and pleasantest thing of the kind out of jail. The location (old postoffice in Methodist Block) is the best in the city, and it would be no easy matter to make a drugstore more inviting than is Dr. Shields's new one. It is a beauty.

— Mr. John Baker, an escaped Siberian exile, will address the Woburn Woman's Club in Concert Hall on Friday, Nov. 21, at 7.30 p. m. The subject of his lecture will be, "A Trip Toward Siberia," including life in a Russian dungeon and an account of his sufferings in behalf of Polish freedom. Admission to those not members twenty-five cents.

— Mr. Waterman Brown, employee of the B. & L. RR. Co. from the foundation of the same, and an enthusiastic admirer of elephants, felt very sad last Monday morning when he read of the serious illness of P. T. Barnum. Barnum is Mr. Brown's beauideal of a man, and as a showman there are none who can approach him. Next to an elephant Mr. Barnum occupies the warmest place in Mr. Brown's heart.

— The fifth season of the Friday Night Club begins Friday, Nov. 28. The evening will consist of a social with vocal and instrumental music and readings. An invitation is extended to all persons interested. The Board of Directors have arranged for ten evenings social, literary, lecture, musical, art and dramatic, the season closing in May.

— Dr. March's son William who has been a missionary in Syria for the last ten years, and whose family returned to this country some months ago, will not go back to his post of duty until next summer or fall. He and his family will stay in America long enough to recuperate from the debilitating effects of the Syrian climate and freshen up for future work.

— The resignation of City Auditor Mr. William E. Blodgett is a matter of regret. He has filled the position admirably and to everybody's satisfaction. Mr. Blodgett is an excellent and capable business young man. He resigned the office on account of new business arrangements that will require his presence in N. Y. city a considerable part of the time.

— Mr. John R. Carter returned from Bathurst, N. B., last Monday evening after an absence of a fortnight or more. When he got there he found a plenty of snow for sleighing, and a week before he left the waters were solidly frozen over and his saw and shingle mills were shut down for the season. The weather is evidently somewhat different at Bathurst from what it is here.

— At 7 o'clock next Sunday evening Dr. March will deliver a lecture in the Congregational church entitled, "Forty Scenes in the Last Days of Jesus," which he will illustrate with stereopticon views with calcium light, which cannot but prove very interesting. The subject is entirely familiar to Dr. March, as those who have read his work, "Days of the Son of Man," must know, and the pictures will add to the pleasure to be derived from the lecture.

— Woman's Relief Corps No. 83 will give an entertainment in Concert Hall on Friday evening, Nov. 28 (day after Thanksgiving), to consist of vocal and instrumental music, dialogues, readings, etc., which the public will do well to patronize for their own good and that of the Corps. The tickets will be only 15 cents each, and only 10 cents each for children under 12 years of age. It will be a real nice entertrinment and we have no doubt Concert Hall will be filled.

— George A. Bean, Esq., a bright and successful Boston lawyer and respected citizen of Woburn, a Democrat of the Jacksonian school having imbibed his politics from old timers among the granite hills of N. H.—he, our esteemed friend, is a regularly nominated candidate for Mayor of this city by grace of the People's Movement. There is no doubt that Bro. Bean would fill the chair of Mayor admirably if he only had a better grade of politics, but as it is, it would not be safe to gamble on his chances.

— It is the record of all new cities to double their population in the first ten years. J. I. Munroe invites you to secure a choice house-lot before the rise. He has them in the following locations, viz: Cummings Park, Montvale Park, Fowle St. extension, Cross St., Green St., Vernon St., Salem St., N. Woburn, Hart Estate, (1-2 minute to depot) Lowell St., a few valuable ones on Capt. Crane's land, junction of Main and Warren St., adjoining the Cummings School: also great numbers of residences and farms, small and large, all prices and easy terms.

— Barely possible, if alive and well, we might be able to get through our Thanksgiving dinner all right without a bottle of New England Table Sauce made at 36 Beach street, Boston, by the N. E. S. Company, tho' we doubt it. But a bottle of this very fine and popular appetizer dropped down on to our table from the hands of the Company's manager the other day and now all misgivings about the toothsomeness of the roast turkey are removed or that the meat part of the feast will be O. K. The sauce is said to be the best made in the world; but whether that is true or not, there is nothing like it for tickling an epicurian Editor's palate, and that is all we care about.

— Next Sabbath morning Rev. Hugh Montgomery will preach on temperance in the M. E. Church, confining himself more particularly to the history of the cause in this city during the past year under the rule of prohibition. He will submit for the consideration of his hearers the great array of facts and figures bearing on the execution of the liquor laws by our Police officers which he has gathered up at the expense of much time and trouble. This announcement will doubtless attract a large audience, for the interest of our people in temperance just now, in view of the approaching charter election, is quite lively, and Mr. Montgomery always in his public discussions of it makes the subject interesting.

— We are glad to see H. P. Holdsworth back here in the confectionery business again—it seems like old times and very pleasant ones. We all remember the kind of ice cream, confections, sweetmeats, etc., the Holdsworth's gave the public when they carried on business here before, and how popular they were! A better location has been obtained by these worthy people, namely, the Barter store in Fox Block—just a few doors west of the JOURNAL office, and a finer, nicer, more varied or attractive stock of choice goods in the confectionery line can't be scared up in Middlesex county. Every thing is just as neat as a pin, and it is an establishment worthy of the largest patronage of the best people in town.

— The New England Souvenir Company advertise (see card) to give the old fashioned version of Uncle Tom's Cabin at Lyceum Hall on next Monday and Tuesday evenings with one of the most competent set of actors that travel. There are 12 of them who have parts in the play and they are all good ones. One of the very commendable features about this Uncle Tom is the entire absence of dogs, donkeys and street parades—a feature which everybody will appreciate—while the real merits of the entertainment is to be looked for on the stage instead of on the streets with a big retinue of hilarious urchins. The press of the country pronounce the Company a good one and their performance meritorious.

— We call especial attention to the advertisement of THE COTTAGE HEARTH in to-day's JOURNAL and ask the reader to note our offer connected therewith. We have a large number of subscribers to COTTAGE HEARTH in Woburn and elsewhere, for our terms are very liberal, and an additional inducement is the excellent character and real worth of the magazine. For $2 (the price of a single subscription to the JOURNAL) we give our paper and THE COTTAGE HEARTH one year, which brings both publications lower in price (considering their value) than any others that can be named. Our list for the magazine is composed of educated, cultivated ladies, lovers of clean, high-toned literature, and we have never heard one of them say, in the four or five years the JOURNAL and COTTAGE HEARTH have been furnished by us for $2 per annum, but what she valued the monthly visits of the magazine, supplemented by the weekly visits of the JOURNAL, above all price. As a family and fireside paper the JOURNAL has no superior anywhere, while as a chronicler of local events and a society organ it is ahead of all others.

— When Mr. Waterman Brown, gateman, saw a large white dog with yellow spots all over him tearing along the Church Avenue concrete the other day with a view of crossing the track, and quickly turning his eye saw the 5 P. M. train forging towards the station at a 30-knot pace, he instantly made up his mind that there was going to be a collision. He ran into the gate-house for a basket to carry off the sausage meat in, for of course there could be but one conclusion to such a meeting, namely, a dead dog promiscuously scattered about the premises. He wasn't gone hardly ten seconds but when he came out with the basket the collision had occurred per programme, only the effect of it was not just what Mr. Brown thought it would be. Instead of the tracks and a part of the locomotive being covered with sausage meat Brown saw fifty pounds of it fairly intact about 20 feet above the engine, making, as near as he could calculate, 1000 revolutions a second, and sending forth yells which, Brown said, beat anything he ever heard or read about in all his life. If Brown was ever astonished it was then, and even the engineer and firemen were about as badly off as he was. To see that rapidly revolving object high up above the smokestack emiting howls so unearthly, with a multitude of tails on both ends of it, and heads thicker than spatters in fly-time, and the noises so blended that it was impossible to determine whether it was a single effort long drawn out, or 100 individual yells chasing each other and the revolving dog all at once—when Mr. Brown saw and heard these things he dropped the basket, sat down on the door-sill, and acknowledged that he had to "give it up." The dog finally landed all in a heap near the express building, and after lying and apparently meditating on the strange occurrance for about 10 minutes, he leisurely arose, pulled himself together, and left in the direction of Academy Hill, which performance amazed Mr. Brown more than anything that had taken place during the whole entertainment.

— The guitar, mandolin and banjo concert] given at Lyceum Hall last Wednesday evening was a splendid musical treat. The performers were greeted by a full house.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus." Dec. 4.

The Size of It.

This headline has no reference to the dimensions of the cake but to the length, breadth and depth of the principle He who builds on principle hath a foundation as solid as the Rock of Ages and as lasting. And this is why the men who make that household blessing — Brussels soap— find a great demand, for they make on principle, and its lasting qualities puffeth out the pocket-book with savings.

City Government.

ALDERMEN.

At the Board of Aldermen last Tuesday evening President Kenney presided in the absence of the Mayor. A hearing was granted residents of Auburn street, who asked for the building of a sidewalk on the westerly side of that street, and complain that Caleb H. Jaquith obstructs the sidewalk with his wagons. Thomas J. Callahan and Rufus Smith appeared for petitioners. There were no remonstrants at hand, and the Board took the matter under advisement. Petitions were received from Rev. Hugh Montgomery for a street opposite the Methodist church, and from John Johnson, for laying out and acceptance of a new street from Main to Church street. Both referred to Highway Committee. The amendment to the city ordinances establishing a fire building limit was passed to be enrolled and ordained. William E. Blodgett resigned as Auditor. Accepted. The Overseers of the Poor reported as follows for the month of October: Families assisted, 42; persons, 155; amount, $314.65. Placed on file. Adjourned.

No one can read the advertisement entitled "Thanksgiving," in our paper this week, without wondering how Standard Crockery and Table Ware can be sold at such wonderfully low prices. But it's a fact. Messrs. Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom are prepared to back every statement they make, and have a stock of the finest goods on their counters, as they have the benefit of doing a large importing and wholesale business in connection with their retail store.

Next Sunday.

Next Sunday at 10.30, a. m. in the M. E. Church, the subject of the Woburn liquor traffic will be presented. Facts will be given relating to the results of a High and limited license for 1889, also facts pertaining to No License from May to Oct. 1890, both bearing on the Liquor Question. References will be made to the efforts and success of the City Government during the time above mentioned. Names of law Breakers under No License both seller and drinker will be given. (Detectives have been employed to obtain facts.) Your opinion is desired relative to what may be said, therefore you are cordially invited to be present at this service.

Yours Truly,
HUGH MONTGOMERY.
Woburn, Nov. 18, 1890.

Y. M. C. A.

Last Sunday evening the Woburn Young Men's Christian Association celebrated the 12th anniversary of their organization in the First Congregational church in this city in the presence of a large concourse of people of all religious denominations, sects and creeds. The order of exercises comprised a multitude of good things in the shape of music, addresses and reports, and is fair to presume that the people present passed a pleasant evening.

The business opened with a stirring organ voluntary by Prof. W. H. Clarke, whose playing, it seemed to the reporter, like wine, grows better with the flight of time (if possible), after which the congregation sang a sacred song from hymn book No. 783, in which there was a general participation by the people. Rev. D. D. Winn, pastor of the First Baptist church, read passages of scripture appropriate to the occasion and then prayed.

The Ladies Schumann Quartette sang beautifully "Come Unto Him" from Handel, and then the report of President John R. Carter was read by Vice-President Dimmick because the President was unavoidably absent. The report was entirely satisfactory and showed great progress in the good work during the past year.

A pleasing feature of the interesting programme was a solo, "But the Lord is Mindful," from Mendlessohn, by Miss Katherine Spear of Chicago, whose rendering of the piece was very fine indeed. This young lady has a highly cultivated voice of more than ordinary compass, very sweet and bell-like in tone, and her vocal efforts are in the highest degree pleasing to the educated ear.

The report of Mr. J. P. Bailey, the General Superintendent, was interesting. It demonstrated conclusively that the Association is making progress in the right direction. Mr. Bailey gave a great many important facts such as an interested people would be glad to hear.

The Schumann Quartette contributed largely to the enjoyment of the audience, the solo and chorus, "Now I lay me down to sleep," being very fine. The congregation also enlivened the exercises with good singing and when Mr Moore of Somerville asked the audience to unite and roll out one verse of old "Coronation" the welkin rang indeed.

In the way of speaking the address of Mr. H. M. Monroe of Somerville was the principal feature of the celebration and it was a rouser—literally a rouser. His whole soul is in the work of the Y. M. C. A., in which, as a leader, he is accomplishing great things for the Lord. The account which Mr. Moore gave of the growth of the Y. M. C. A. in America and other countries brought out many facts not before generally known, especially in relation to the erection of Association buildings—the number, their cost, the manner in which the work had been done, etc.—and it was evident his statements set some people to thinking.

The great need of the Woburn Association is a home of their own, built with an eye single to their comfort, accommodation and pleasures. They need it, and Mr. Moore told how the thing could be accomplished—that is to say, he told how others had done it, and why not Woburn do it too? The address, a ringing appeal for material aid for the institution which is doing so much for the young men in all Christain countries, not only set people to thinking but is likely to set them doing, for a movement was launched by a goodly company of young men who met in the parlors of Mrs. Emma T. Dow on Court street a few evenings since, which is bound to evenuate in the erection of just such a home as the Association stands so greatly in need of. The young men (old ones too) have taken hold of the enterprise with a determination to push it to a successful issue and it is sure to go.

Here is an opportunity for some of the rich men of this city to erect for themselves a monument that will shine brighter than shafts of polished marble, and outlive the most enduring granite. Where could a rich man put some of his wealth that would do more good?

With the close of Mr. Moore's stirring address more music equally stirring, and benediction by Rev. Hugh Montgomery, a deeply interesting and enjoyable anniversary occasion closed.

Saturday, 8 o'clock, Young Men's prayer meeting.

The meetings of the Week of Prayer were well attended.

Tuesday afternoon the regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, 3p. m.

Have you got your ticket for the "Wreck of the Hesperus?" On sale at Smith's dry goods store.

Sunday at 3 p. m. Boys meeting. At 3.30 p. m. consecration, men's, meeting. At 4 p. m. Men's meeting. Monday 7.30 p. m. Singing class.

In regard the Singing Class: There must be 25 persons over 15 years signed before we shall open and if before or on next Monday evening there are not 25 persons who signify their intention to be a member there will be no class. Both sexes can join: members of Association or Auxiliary, free: others: men $1.00; Ladies, 50 cents.

A parlor conference of young men of the city was held at Mrs. Emma T. Dow's, 12 Court street, in the interest of the Young Men's Christian Association of Woburn. Mr. Torrey of the Harvard College Y. M. C. A. was present and spoke. Short speeches were also made by several others, including one from Mr. Chester Cotton, Mr. Chester R. Smith, Mr. Charles French, in regard to the needs of the Association in Woburn. A nice collation was provided by the kind hostess, who takes a lively interest in the Y. M. C. A. After which the following Resolutions were passed by a unanimous vote all subscribing thereto;

We, the undersigned young men of Woburn, at a meeting held at the residence of Miss Emma T. Dow, 12 Court street, petition the Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association that they provide us with a building suitable for Association work, with a full equipped gymnasium.

We are desirous of assisting you in the work.

Signed by 29 persons.

At the meeting of the Directors Tuesday this reply was returned to the petitioners: We, the Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association thank you for the interest you take in the Association. Your petition lies before us and we desire to meet all the young men whose signatures are attached thereto at a conference the date and place to be named by us in a few days through our Chairman, Mr. C. E. Richardson, to consider the best means to raise the necessary amount for the building asked for. Signed

C. E. Richardson, Chairman,
For the Directors. Nov. 18, 1890.

The Mysterious Burglar.

A LEGEND OF THE "BLACK HOUSE," WOBURN.

BY F. L. CONVERSE.

Away back in the latter part of the last century there stood, and until within a comparatively few years ago still stood, on the site of the homestead of the late John P. Kimball, Esq., Main street, above Central Square, in Woburn, a house always known by the name of the "Black House" on account of its color, which at the time first named was occupied by JOSEPH BARTLETT, Esq.

BARTLETT was an excentric and talented lawyer, much given to saying and doing uncommon things, cracking jokes, etc. and so fertile in resources was he that he often gained difficult cases which people said he won only by the assistance of a certain mysterious old gentleman in black who always acted with him as invisible Senior Counsel.

Let that be as it may, he had just won a suit which it seemed almost impossible to gain, where a large lot of cloth, clothing and especially pantaloons, was at stake, and had pocketed the money for his client.

Now it so happened that a fellow who had knowledge of his having the money conceived the idea of breaking in and stealing the rhino, so that night he proceeded to the rear of the house and began operations by prying open a window which having done he entered, but hearing a noise of footsteps on the back stairs accompanied by snorting, groaning and scratching as if some unearthly being was coming he jumped out of the window and retreated to a safe distance; but what was his astonishment when he perceived issuing from the back door a gigantic ghost (so it seemed to him) in white, with immense black wings by the aid of which it rapidly flew toward him. Terrified beyond measure, with a howl he fled leaving his tools behind him.

Sometime after a merry party returning on foot late at night from the "Centre" Village to "New Bridge" saw the same ghost at the front of the house apparently in the air, its great black wings carrying it rapidly to the rear of the mansion, while several of the party declared they distinctly saw three smaller ones higher up following after.

The next day all Woburn was in a ferment and all sorts of stories prevailed. The house had been entered by burglars, the marks of whose "kit" could be seen on the back window. Four pairs of BARTLETT'S pants had been stolen therefrom on different nights with lots of other property, and that it must have been done by experts as the pants each time had been taken from his own chamber, in fact from right under his very nose, without waking him; and stranger still, that the door was bolted inside when he awoke in the morning, and the windows were all fast. Ghosts had repeatedly been seen in and about the house; or perhaps they were the thieves themselves dressed up for effect; and yet that could not be, for the ghosts had large black wings and flew in the air. Horrible noises according to popular rumor had been heard, and streams of fire had been seen issuing from the attic windows; in fact, some even went so far as to say, with a knowing wink that BARTLETT had been engaged in some questionable transactions, and the cause of all this was, that the "Old Scratch" himself had been there advising him how to act in order to be successful in some tough suits in which he was counsel, and especially that he had assisted him in his late suit about the clothing.

In the meantime BARTLETT himself had really had a strange experience inside the house, for on awaking one morning he discovered that his pants were gone, while the rest of his clothing remained untouched, there being no evidence that his room or the building had been entered by any one, but the affair soon ceased to be talked about, till one morning a week later when another pair had mysteriously disappeared.

BARTLETT now put a bolt on the inside of his chamber door and a bell at each window in such a manner that the least movement would cause a bell to ring, but notwithstanding all these precautions still another pair of his unmentionables went the way of the rest and yet the door remained bolted, and the bells did not ring.

BARTLETT, now thoroughly astonished at the audacity and adroitness of the thief, determined at all hazards and expense to ferret out the mystery and capture the rascal, so he hired a man to sit all night in the closet of his room with the door open, armed with a gun and watch; when a little past midnight, just as the man was a little dosy, of a sudden he saw the dreaded ghost with its great black wings in the chamber, when he dropped his gun, and with a bound or two cleared the space between himself and the door, which he unbolted, and escaped from the house as quick as possible almost scared to death at the sight of so terrible a figure. The next morning the fourth pair of pantaloons were gone but the door was bolted and everything else was right except that the watchman was non est inventus.

BARTLETT was now at his wits end, but after taking the matter into serious consideration he, like a sensible man, concluded that there must be a reasonable explanation to the affair however dark and blind it might then seem. So he procured the services of a thoroughly cool and steady man of good judgment to come and occupy the place in the closet. On the first and second nights nothing occurred, but on the third soon after midnight the watch saw BARTLETT himself slowly and quietly get up, go in his night shirt to the chair on which his clothing lay, take his pants therefrom and place than around his neck with the legs dangling on either side, then proceed to the door which he unbolted, then down stairs, out of the back door, to the haystack in the yard, where having dug a hole therein he deposited the pants, replaced the hay, and returned to his chamber, preceded by his watcher, when having bolted the door he went to bed and was soon executing a bass solo in A flat, much to the amusement of his employe who felt a great satisfaction in having successfully done his duty and discovered the thief.

BARTLETT, on being awakened, much commended his watcher and laughed heartily at the story he related to him and how he had acted in his state of somnambulism. The next morning the haystack was searched and all five pairs of pantaloons were found snugly stowed therein. The story soon spread abroad and for many years "Bartlett's pants" were a standing joke. BARTLETT himself being fond of good stories even if told at his own expense, and withal a good poet, composed some lines suited to the occasion which were as follows:

Bartlett, his Ghost and the Burglar.

A ghost I was, and yet alive;
From me, my ghost good breeches five
Did steal and purloin in the night.
Yet stay! reflect! Can that be right?
Can one's one ghost, from its own body
S'eal their own pants? it surely can't be?
Not so! we both, my ghost and I,
Together, each not knowing why,
Did take our own; we had the rights;
No larceny occurred those nights.
Yet good from unseen sources springs,
And aid may come from ghosts with wings.
So in my sleep, a helpless elf,
Unknown to me, I helped myself.
But for my ghost, that burglar, vile,
Had surely captured all my pile;
So I rejoice, break into verse,
And thank the Lord it is no worse.

"My husband is the salt of the earth," said a grocer's wife. "Yes, I know he is, for he 'salted' me the other day when he sold me some soap and told me it was as good and economical as Brussels," replied the customer.

Republican Caucuses.

Last Saturday evening the Republicans in this city met in places and for purposes duly set forth in their advertisement in the JOURNAL, and although the night was a tempestuous one the meetings were fairly well attended and harmony was the ruling characteristic of them.

With here and there an exception the caucuses did their work in an acceptable manner—so well, indeed, was it done that their nominees deserve to be elected by large majorities. Grant's promotion was in order, but dropping President E. E Thompson was not wise. Other things of less importance might have been done differently with profit, but on the whole the nominations made were above an average on the score of intelligence and good character. The Republicans generally do their public business after that style.

Without elaboration and free from unnecessary particulars the following is given as the real results of the several Ward caucuses:

Ward 1—Alderman, Thomas G. Beggs; Councilman, Patrick McGowan, Edward J. Phillips; Delegates, Edward D. Hayden, William T. Grammer, Benjamin Hinckley, Joseph Buck, Elwyn G. Preston, Joseph F. DeLorica.

Ward 2—Alderman, Marcus M. Shaw; Councilmen, George A. Simonds, William H. Bowers; Delegates, George A. Day, William P. Cutler, Edmund C. Cottle, Charles M. Strout, Herbert Riley, William H. Ward, George E. Fowle, Albert J. Haynes.

Ward 3—Alderman, Alexander Grant; Councilmen, Frank C. Nichols, James F. McGovern; Delegates, William R. Putnam, Seth W. Kelley, Fred H. Lewis, Francis A. Buckman, Harry G. Marion, Philip K. Richardson, Milton Moore.

Ward 4—Alderman, W. Frank Fowle; Councilmen, Simeon E. Kendrick, Benjamin F. Waldron; Delegates, Dr. John M. Harlow, Elisha F. Hayward, John R Carter, J. Fred Leslie, James L. Pinkham, Henry C. Hall, Marcellus H. Allen, Edward E. Thompson, Samuel H. Patten.

Ward 5—Alderman, David T. Strange; Councilmen, George F. Hosmer; Delegates, John L. Fowle, James R. Wood.

Ward 7—Alderman, Frank M. Pushee; Councilman, Phineas G. Hanson; Delegates, George Russell, James Given, Alvah B. Heald.

Republicans, let every man of you put shoulders to the wheel and elect the above ticket slick and smooth.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

A Flagellation.

Mrs. Haggerty, wife of Timothy Haggerty, a Boston letter carrier who lives on Pleasant street, this city, cowhided Dr. J. H. Conway in his office last Tuesday evening, and thereby raised a deuce of an excitement. Accompanied by Ald. Kenney and a Mr. Hyde, the former of whom didn't know what was wanted of him, the irate dame entered Dr. Conway's office and after a few angry words pulled a rawhide and at once proceeded to belabor the man of boluses and blisters at a great rate. She is quite an athlete and could probably handle the mild-mannered son of Esculapeus any way he might tackle her.

Timothy stood outside and waited for results. He said he gloried in his wife's spunk. He couldn't have had much of that article himself else he would have gone in and whipped the Doctor instead of sending his wife to do it.

Ald. Kenney, when the rawhide appeared on the scene, was about as scared a man as they make them.

Haggerty told the Record folks about it, and in less than two shakes of a lamb's narrative after the Record's story came out the Herald and Globe had reporters here, and right away the "Old Harry was to pay and no pitch hot."

Dr. Conway got a licking, Mrs. Haggerty got a not very enviable notoriety, some other folks got smirched and all on account of a piece of gossip that was retailed out to the public here more than a year ago, and was never worth minding.

There will be no legal proceedings in the matter.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Mrs. Stowe's powerful story, dramatized years ago, has probably drawn more people to the theatres of America than any other story or play written by an American. It apparently possesses perennial youth for as each succeeding generation comes to the front it is desirous of seeing the play that created such a sensation among its grandparents and parents. The New England Souvenir Company that presented the play at Portland theatre last evening resorts to none of the sensational features employed in recent years, but gives a legitimate presentation. There are no bloodhounds nor donkeys and but one Marks the lawyer and one Topsy. The people who assume the different roles are very capable and their version one of the most pleasing yet given. The company includes George H. Coes, Frankie Carpenter, Mabel Carpenter, Raymond Rogers, "Yankee Boody," Nellie Brown, Frank D. Smith, Miss Ella Bryant, C. De Nudde and other good artists. One of the best features is the singing by a quartette. Quantities of excellent sheet music are given away at each performance as souvenirs.—Portland (Me) Press, Nov. 4.

This popular performance will be given at Lyceum Hall in this city on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Nov. 24 and 25. See advertisement in another column.

IN MEMORIAM.

MISS ABBY MEAD died at her residence on Pleasant St., Sabbath evening, Nov. 16, after years of protracted suffering. Miss Mead was born in Amesbury, Mass., March, 1806. In her childhood her widowed mother with her family removed to Woburn. In 1827, then in her early womanhood, she united with the First Congregational Church and during her long life was ever the exemplary, consistent Christian. When still quite young, she developed remarkable aptitude to teach, and for many years was a very successful teacher, securing both the love and respect of her pupils. During the years of her "shut in" life she frequently received gratifying testimonials of their high appreciation of her valuable instruction. She was a lady of rare excellence of character, of refined taste, cultured mind united with great equanimity of disposition, possessing strong convictions but liberal views, a genial companion, a faithful friend, a judicious counselor. For the last fifteen years she has been unable to leave the house, and for the last four, her room. With her books and her pen she beguiled many a wearisome, suffering hour. For all who visited her she had a cordial greeting: her cheerful resignation, her heartfelt gratitude that her mind was still unimpaired was a sermon and an inspiration to all who had the privilege of her acquaintance. She "being dead yet speaketh,"—speaketh in the example she has left of faith, patience and Christian consecration.—COM.

Miss Abby Mead, daughter of the late Rev. Samuel Mead of Middleboro, Mass., whose recent death in this city leaves a void in the more elderly social circles, was born at Amesbury, Mass., on March 6, 1806. At the age of 17 she began teaching school in the Bennett house at Central Square, Woburn; she afterwards taught at Charlestown several years, and while there harbored in her schoolroom some of the nuns during the burning of the Nunnery on Mt. Benedict; she was also Principal of the Fairhaven Seminary, and continued the profession with great success until she was 60 years of age, except during 5 years of sickness. For some 16 years past she has mingled but little in society, having been compelled to keep her room a principal part of that time by illness.

Miss Mead's mother was the daughter of Major Earl Clapp of Middleboro, who served in the Revolutionary War. The family, being bereft of husband and father, came to Woburn when the subject of this notice was very young.

Miss Mead united with the First Congregational Church of Woburn in 1827, and became a member of the Charitable Reading Society connected with that church in January, 1831. At the semi-centennial celebration of the organization of the society held June 31, 1865, she furnished a poem "Memories of Other Days," which may be found in the published proceedings of that occasion. She had fine literary tastes and good ability as a writer, and was often called on for prose and poetical contributions for special occasions.

Miss Mead had many warm friends who will miss her. Mrs. Dwight Eager, with whom she lived and died, was her only sister, but other relatives are left to mourn her death.

A large number of old friends attended the funeral on Wednesday, and the floral tributes were beautiful.—X.

For real comfort the good old times we hear so much about are "not in it" with the present order of things. It is but a few years, for instance, since the pulling of a tooth was an act of remorseless savagery; now we sink into a luxurious chair, take a little gas, a little peaceful slumber, awake and go about our business entirely relieved from the ache, yet unconscious of the operation. This gas is given free at the Globe Dental Parlors, 227 Tremont St., Boston, which are a fair example of the modern dentist's office; in the reception rooms rich and elegant furniture, carpets and pictures, and everything that can conduce to the comfort of the waiting patients, while in the operating rooms are all the latest perfected appliances of the profession for rapid, painless and thorough work. All those whose teeth need attention will find in the established reputation of Drs. Bills and Crossman for excellent work at moderate prices an additional incentive to visit these handsome rooms; and as all work is warranted, they cannot fail to receive satisfaction.

North Woburn.

Miss Gertrude Anderson of Malden is visiting some of her friends of this village.

The sociable held at the Congregational church on last Friday evening was well attended and also a decided success.

An entertainment will be given under the auspices of The Wide Awake Club at the Congregational church on Tuesday evening, Nov. 25, at seven forty-five.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Charles W. Newton was surprised at his home by a large number of his friends. A fine collation was served and a very pleasant evening was passed.

Mr. Henry G. Fuller passed a few days at South Framingham where he was born and lived for a number of years before coming to this village. He met many of his old schoolmates and came home well pleased with his visit.

"Yes," he said, "my system is soaked with gin and sorrow, put there's hope for me yet, for I've heard of Brussels soap."

THE KING OF FRIEZE

— FOR —

Drivers, Conductors, Railroad-Men, Milk-Men and all whose business is out of doors and who wish a warm and strong ULSTER, we recommend and guarantee ours.

It is absolutely storm and wind proof, as will be seen by the following letter:—

To Whom it May Concern:

In February, 1889, the STANDARD CLOTHING COMPANY sent me a Dark Oxford Mix Freize Ulster, which they call their "King of Freize," with the request to give it the hardest possible wear during the balance of the winter.

Although there was no snow of any amount, it was a very wet season, and I wore the coat daily in my business, and found it exactly as they represented, impervious to water and snow. I have the ulster in use now, and confidently recommend it as the most desirable, strongest, warmest ulster that I have ever owned.

The price of the "King of Freize," $12, brings it within the reach of every hack driver, herdic driver, car driver, or any one whose business is out of doors, and who needs a coat that will shed water or snow.

An Endowment Policy in this Company, issued under the new perfected non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts, provides for three most important things.

1st. It is a security to the beneficiaries in case of the early death of the assured.

2d. It makes a certain provision for the wants of one's older years.

3d. It provides a sum of money continually increasing in amount, that the policy-holder may at any time receive, should he be overtaken by misfortune and lose his property.

No business man can afford to do without the advantage that such a policy may be to himself if unfortunate in business; to his family in case of his early decease or as an endowment to himself at a time in life when, if he has no property, he will be poor indeed.

All classes Policies for any amount issued on this principle.

JESUS IS CRUCIFIED.

LESSON VIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 23.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiii, 33, 47. Commit Verses 33, 34—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 6—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

33. "And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left." Our last lesson left Him in their hands to do their pleasure with Him; and after the scourging and mocking we see the cross laid brutally on that torn and bleeding back, and He goes forth bearing His cross (John xix, 17). While it is not said that He fainted under it, the fact that they turned Simon the Cyrenian about, and compelled him to bear it after Jesus (verse 26), looks as if He may have sunk beneath it, or perhaps stumbled through weakness or loss of blood. Then hear Him as He says to the women who follow, "Weep not for me, but for yourselves and your children" (verse 28). And see the two malefactors each bearing his cross. Thus follow to Calvary or Golgotha, the place of a skull (Matt. xxvii, 33). And now see the three crosses each bearing its living, dying, agonizing burden; on either side an evil doer suffering justly, but in the midst the Holy Jesus suffering the just for the unjust.

34. "Then said Jesus, 'Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted His raiment and cast lots." Can you see Him stripped of his raiment, laid down upon the cross, the nails driven through His quivering flesh, and then hear Him pray, "Father, forgive them."

35. "And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided Him, saying, He saved others, let Him save Himself, if He be Christ, the chosen of God." Their cruelty knows no bounds; they have now done their worst; they have crucified Him, but they cannot cease; and as He hangs in greatest physical agony upon the cruel cross they deride Him. He could have saved Himself if He had wished. Not all the power of men or devils could have harmed Him unless He had permitted it. Hear His own words: "I lay down my life that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father" (John x, 17, 18).

36. "And the soldiers also mocked Him, coming to Him and offering Him vinegar." The sufferings and death of Christ tell out the hearts of all classes of men—the true children of God who in trial forsake Him; the professor only, who, being tempted, sells Him; those highest in religious things, who, being only hypocrites, hate reality; those highest in temporal power, who know nothing of eternal realities and care only to please people; the irreligious (as these soldiers), who care for none of these things, and the offscouring of the earth suffering just punishment for their crimes—all have their hearts revealed by the cross of Christ.

37. "And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews save thyself." They could not understand a king who had no followers and seemed to have no power.

38. "And a superscription also was written over Him, in letters of Greek and Latin and Hebrew, This is the King of the Jews." The chief priests objected to this, and wished Pilate to write, "He said, I am King of the Jews" (John xix, 21); but Pilate insisted on keeping it as he had written it.

39. "And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on Him, saying, If thou be Christ save thyself and us." Rulers, soldiers and malefactors all utter the same taunt, "Save thyself."

40. "But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?" Hardened, indeed, must have been the heart of this condemned man, who, knowing that he must very soon meet God in the spirit world, railed even to the last.

41. "And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss." Another testimony to the innocence of "This Man." We have heard it from Judas, from Pilate, from Pilate's wife, indirectly from Herod, and now from this thief on the cross.

42. "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom." This is grand. Not only does he confess himself a justly punished wicked man, but he confesses that the man at his side is an innocent man suffering unjustly; that notwithstanding all that has been done to Him and said to Him He is really a king and has a kingdom; and he humbly asks to be remembered in that kingdom.

43. "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." What a trophy for Christ to display among the redeemed!

44. "And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour." He was crucified at the third hour (Mark xv, 25), which would be about 9 o'clock. At the sixth hour or 12 o'clock this darkness set in, which continued till He died at 3 o'clock. The sun refused to shine longer upon such a scene; earth put on mourning.

45. "And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst." The veil was a symbol of His body or flesh. As in tabernacle and temple, the veil concealed the glory of God; so during all His stay on earth the mortal body of Christ concealed within it the glory of God.

46. "And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, He said, Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit: and having said thus He gave up the ghost." This is the last of His seven sayings on the cross. For the others in the order of utterance see verses 34, 43; John xix, 25-27; Matt. xxvii, 46; John xix, 28, 30. They tell of forgiveness, Paradise, provision for our need while here and the infinite cost at which all has been purchased. This last confirms the fact of life apart from the body or conscious existence after death. Compare Stephen's "Lord Jesus receive my spirit" (Acts vii, 59), and by the word of God become so fully persuaded of these things that you can almost see yourself apart from your body enjoying the riches of God's glory.

47. "Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man." Yet another testimony to the innocence of the Lord Jesus Christ in addition to those mentioned under verse 41. We hope the centurion truly believed on Him, but we are not told. If he should turn out to be the Cornelius of Acts x that would explain how Cornelius came to be so devout. But we must wait. For the record of the earthquake, and the opened graves, and the incidents of His burial by Joseph and Nicodemus, as well as the piercing of His side, see Matt. xxvii, 51, 52; John xix, 34-42, and the remaining verses of this chapter. How often we have read the story, but how little we understand or appreciate it! God give us opened eyes and tender hearts.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at H. L. Flanders & Co. Drug Store.

As long as there are more men in the world than there are offices the devil will always reap an abundant harvest at election time.

THE LITTLE TIN CUP.

Whoa, Betty! How do, sir? Is this here the 'sylum for folk as is mad?
It ain't Wal, my Lucy's to hum, sir; not ravin'; oh, no—jist a fad—
And ef I'd my own way I wouldn't be thinkin' o' fetchin' her here;
But it ain't no use argyin' matters when sister-in-laws interfere.

You see, it were this how: last harvest we parted with baby—with Chick;
The pootiest child in the kentry; the rompinest, 'fore he got sick;
And his mother, poor gal, took it badly when we telled her as baby was dead,
For she didn't shed tears like she'd orter, but set thar a-shakin' her head.

And when baby was put in the parlor she crep' sof'ly up to the box,
And we heerd her say, "Go to sleep, darlin'," as she brushed back his bootiful locks.
But nex' day she was sleepin' herself, sir, when they come from the taown with the hearse,
So we went to the graveyard without her, and saved her the 'sterics, or worse.

Wal, when we got back from the fun'ral thar was Lucy a-gettin' the tea;
On the table was three cups and saucers, for her and the sister and me;
But I can't tell the turn as it gives me to see on the cloth, polished up,
Jist as bright as it shined on his birthday, our poor Chickey's little tin cup.

Then the sister she starts in a-cryin', and says she, with her face very white,
"Lucy, dear, don't you know that the baby won't want any supper to-night?"
Then, poor gal, she jist lifts up her finger and she points it at baby's old place,
And she says, "Don't the tin cup look dirty along o' that dazzlin' face?"

Ev'ry morning she's up with the daybreak, a-scrubbin' that poor bit o' tin;
And she's still at it, scourin' and rubbin', when the shadders of evenin' comes in;
But its black, sir—as black as the kittle—compared with the child as sits there,
Shinin' bright with the glory o' heaven; still as death in his little high chair!

So I've come, sir, to ask you to take her, and larn her that Chick's gone away
To a place whar no sufferin' kin enter; no rust, nor disease, nor decay;
But ef God sent this stroke as a mercy—et the doctors all gives Lucy up—
She will bring back a heart that ain't broken, and polish the little tin cup.

—Thomas Frost in New York Herald.

"A Just Beast."

The London correspondent of The Manchester Courier says he heard rather an amusing story the other day about the bishop of London which has not, he believes, appeared in print. When Dr. Temple held the head mastership of Rugby a boy in the school came up before him for some breach of discipline. Facts seemed rather against the boy, who was in imminent danger of being expelled. He had a defense, but being neither clear headed nor fluent in the presence of the head master he could not make it clear.

He therefore wrote home to his father detailing at length his position and his explanation. His father very wisely thought the best thing he could do was to send the boy's letter as it stood to Dr. Temple, merely asking him to overlook any familiarity of expression. Apparently the father had not turned over the page and seen his son's postscript, for there Dr. Temple found the following words: "If I could explain it would be all right, for though Temple is a beast he is a just beast." The bishop in telling the story is accustomed to say it was the greatest compliment he has ever received in his life.

Pipes Coming Into Use.

The return to the pipe is a comparatively new fad. Until six months ago I never had a pipe in my store. My trade called for nothing but cigars, cigarettes and chewing tobaccos. The French started it. Of course your English tourist always has his pipe, and he thinks no more of starting it up on the street or in the smokers' room of the sleeper than you would of taking out the most fragrant cigar. But the French have started this fad of several pipes with various stems, and the custom is taking it up.

The meerschaum pipe craze died out several years ago. It is a wonder it ever came in. You can buy a meerschaum pipe cheaper than you can a French sweet briar. I don't mean to say that the American smoker will ever go so far as to smoke a pipe on the street, but for home and office comfort he has already taken up the pipe.—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

Abraham Lincoln's Father.

Within seven miles of Mattoon is the farm which Abraham Lincoln's father used to own, and where he lived. Abe was of age then, and he didn't live on the farm, but he visited his father once a year and always brought him presents. Thomas Lincoln died on his farm and is buried in Gordon's graveyard, near by. Beside his grave is that of his second wife. For many years the graves were unmarked. Later on Mr. Dunlap, of this city, brought the matter to the attention of several leading citizens of Mattoon and Coles county. The result was that a plain monument marks the place. Robert Lincoln, hearing of the subscription, sent Mr. Dunlap a check for $100.—Chicago Tribune.

Quarts of Diamonds or Diamonds of Quartz

"I tell you, Knowles, the dressing at Saratoga surpassed the wildest dreams of Monte Cristo. I never saw anything like the ostentatious display of diamonds. Every one had them, and collected they could have been measured by quarts."

Knowles—Crystalline quartz?—Jewelers' Circular.

There Are Plenty of Them.

Totting—The government wants a new design for the silver dollar.

Dimling—That ought not to be hard to get. Everybody I know has designs on the dollar.—Munsey's Weekly.

Repeating Orders.

Waitress (to cook)—Oysters, two.—Good News.

An Important Matter.

Druggists everywhere report that the sales of the Restorative Nervine—a nerve food and mecicine—are astonishing; exceeding anything they ever had, while it gives universal satisfaction in headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, sexual debility, backache, poor memory, fits, dizziness, etc. L. Burton & Co., Troy, N. Y.; Ambery & Murphy, of Battle Creek, Mich.; C. B. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., and hundreds of others state that they never handled any medicine which sold so rapidly, or gave such satisfaction. Trial bottles of this great medicine and book on Nervous Diseases, free at Charles H. Buss.

A woman with children is very much in the same position as the Lord; though her children say they love her, they very seldom offer her anything but complaints.

To enjoy good health aim to always have abundant sleep; this can generally be secured by management, unless you have a crying baby, in which case Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will greatly assist.

A very good recommendation:—I used Old Saul's Catarrh Cure for influenza and was cured.

SLEEPING ON FEATHER BEDS.

It Is Nice and Easy, but It Makes One Lazy and Is Not Conducive to Health.

"Do you sleep on feathers?" asked a reporter of a professor of the Ohio Medical college.

"I did when I was a boy," replied the solemn M. D., "but I haven't done it since."

"Why not?"

"Well, I do not think it is conducive to health to do so. You see, there are apt to be so many bumps and depressions in the surface of a feather tick, and that alone is enough to condemn it. Through the day the body is in so many positions and the joints are bended so often that at night one's limbs should be perfectly straight, so as to give the blood a chance to circulate freely. The body cannot lie perfectly straight on a feather bed, and, besides, the soft, downy couch enervates one and tends to make one yawn, stretch and lie with doubled up limbs.

"Thus he gets too warm, and soon a coverlet is thrown back and very likely a cold results. Then the head sinks into the feather pillow, and often the side buried thus will perspire. This is uncomfortable, and the sleeper turns over. The moist skin is exposed to the night air and a cold results. Then it is so hard to wake up when sleeping on feathers. It makes one lazy. Sleep seems to be the chief end of existence, and when one is forced to leave the bed by the cares of the day he leaves it with a yawn. He yawns and stretches himself for hours afterward, and the ennui follows him all day, and when at evening he retires to his chamber filled with the determination to study or read, the sight of the billowy bed tempts him to stretch upon it at full length for a moment, and before he knows it he is too drowsy for anything but sleep.

"A person does not need as much sleep as people who use feather beds generally take, and the same persons when they lie on a spring mattress or a straw tick for a few weeks are surprised at their own freshness and vigor. The Germans use feathers almost universally, and they claim to be a hardy race, but any one with ordinary observant powers can see that Germans age much earlier in life than other people."

"Yes," said a Walnut street mattress maker, when the reporter informed him of the doctor's opinion, "and we sell very few feathers to any but Germans. I agree with the doctor in every particular, and, speaking of beds, you would be surprised to see what I do every day in the houses of wealthy people. They may have magnificent residences, fitted up with sumptuous furniture and costly bedsteads, but the beds are shocking as a rule. These are made of topsy turvey mattresses; they are not level, and probably they smell badly. The proper way to have a bed is with a padded spring mattress for a foundation, and a sheet over this is all that need be under the body, then coverlids to suit the occupant and weather.

"Of all the people, and I have customers among all classes, the Hebrews have the most comfortable beds. I advertise extensively in a Jewish paper, because I know they of all people like a good bed. And really this careful attention to the beds is a great gain, for with how much more vigor could a man go forth to his daily work if he has enjoyed a good night's rest."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

An Anthem Described.

Two old British sailors were talking over their shore experience. One had been in a cathedral, and had heard some very fine music, and was descanting particularly upon an anthem which gave him much pleasure. His shipmate listened for a while, and then said:

"I say, Bill, what's a hanthem?"

"What!" replied Bill, "do you mean to say you don't know what a hanthem is?"

"Not me."

"Well, then, I'll tell yer. If I was ter tell yer, 'Ere, Bill, give me that 'andspike,' that wouldn't be a hanthem, but was I to say, 'Bill, Bill, giv, giv, giv' me, give me that, Bill, give me, give me that 'and, 'andspike, 'and, 'andspike, spike, spike, spike, ahmen, ahmen; Bill, give me that 'andspike, spike, spike, spike, ahmen, ahmen!' why, that would be a hanthem."—Exchange.

A Woman's Reason.

A woman got on a crowded cable car a few days ago, and before she got into a seat the train started up with a jerk and she almost lost her footing. The bag of eggs she had in her hand slipped, and but for the timely extension of a gentleman's hands would have fallen to the floor. As it was only two or three eggs escaped.

"Plague take it," said the woman impatiently.

"Sorry I couldn't have saved them all," said the gentleman, seeing that he was not going to be thanked; "too bad."

"Indeed!" returned the woman. "Saved them all, eh? If you'd kept your hands away there'd been no trouble. You men are always"——

But the poor fellow had escaped.—Chicago Special Press Bureau.

Sunday observance is steadily gaining ground in Paris. In the West End the great majority of the shops are closed, and the railway companies have lately agreed not to reckon Sundays in charging for the warehousing of goods. The postoffices, too, are to close in future at 6 p. m. instead of 8, and the two evening letter deliveries are to be abolished.

Hold It To The Light.

The man who tells you confidentially just what will cure your cold is prescribing Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.

It very often happens that if the money put in a monument had been put in a rest for the man under it, the building of the monument would have been delayed several years.—Atchison Globe.

How Repulsive

Is bad breath, and yet how many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends with the foul odor of their breath. If there was no remedy for this it might excite our sympathy, but as there is no need of having a foul breath, it is an unpardonable breach of good manners to obtrude such an offence on good society.

HIS NOSE WAS SCRATCHED.

But He Did Not Enjoy the Muzzle of a Double Barreled Gun So Close.

"One night," said Ben Holladay, the pioneer of stage coaching west of the Missouri river, "I was bouncing over the plains in one of my overland coaches.

"Mrs. Holladay and myself were the only passengers. Several stages had been robbed within two months, and the driver was ripping along as though a gang of prairie wolves were after him. Suddenly the horses were thrown on their haunches and the stage stopped.

"I was heaved forward, but quickly recovered, and found myself gazing at the muzzles of a double barreled shotgun.

"'Throw up your hands and don't stir!' shouted the owner in a gruff voice.

"Up went my hands and I began to commune with myself. The fellow then coolly asked for my money. I saw that he did not know who I was, and I was afraid that my sick wife might awake and call my name.

"My coat was buttoned over my bosom, but scarcely high enough to hide a magnificent emerald that cost me over $8,000 a few weeks before in San Francisco.

"I scarcely breathed through fear that light might strike the stone, and its sparkling brilliancy attract the attention of the robber. I had about $40,000 in a money belt, and several hundred dollars in my pockets.

"Suddenly my friend shouted, 'Come, shell out—quick, or I'll send the old 'un a free lunch.'

"I passed out the few hundreds loose in my pockets, and handed him my gold watch and chain. They were heavy. I think the chain alone would weigh five pounds at least.

"'There,' said I—'there's every cent I've got! Take it, and let me go on. My wife is very ill, and I don't know what would happen to her if she knew what was going on.'

"'Keep your hands up!' was the reply, while a second robber received my watch and money.

"Then a search was made for the express company's box, but the double barreled shotgun did not move. Its muzzles were within a foot of my nose. For my life I did not dare to stir.

"My nose began to itch. The stiff hairs of my mustache got up one after another, and tickled it until the sensation was intolerable. I could stand it no longer.

"'Stranger,' I cried, 'I must scratch my nose. It itches so that I am almost crazy!'

"'Move your hands,' he shouted, 'and I'll blow a hole through your head big enough for a jack rabbit to jump through!'

"I appealed once more.

"'Well,' he answered, 'keep your hands still and I'll scratch it for you!'

"Did he scratch it?" asked one of Ben's interested listeners.

"Sure!" said Mr. Holladay.

"How?" asked the breathless listener.

"With the muzzles of a cocked gun!" said the great overlander. "He rubbed the muzzle around my mustache, and raked it over the end of my nose until I thanked him and said that it itched no longer."

The robbers soon afterward took their leave with many apologies, and Ben continued his journey to the Missouri with the big emerald and $40,000.—New York World.

Famous Gems.

The most famous extant gems are perhaps the Gemma Augustea, in Vienna, a sardonyx nearly a quarter of a yard long, on which the triumph of Augustus is cut in the rarest workmanship by Dioscorides, of Rome. There are magnificently cut antique amethysts, though rock crystal was and is mainly used for vases and cups. I saw a beautiful modern vase at Oberstein in the shape of a shell twelve or fourteen inches long—chiefly, however, filling me with regret for the vanished beauty of the one perfect crystal out of which it had been cut. The man asked £5 for it.

A much larger cameo than the Gemma Augustea was lost in the storm of the Tuileries in 1848. About the largest extant gem—a sardonyx worked in five layers, and representing Tiberius and Livia and various other personages—there is an odd story. It is called La Camee de la Sainte Chapelle, and was given to St. Louis of France, who set it up in the Ste. Chapelle as a representation of Joseph's dream.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Had the Record for Laziness.

William Holmes, of Charlotte, Vt., tells of the death at Charlotte, not long since, of an old Quaker who was the laziest man on record. His name was Nicholas Wing, and he lived with his wife and old maid daughter on the edge of Lake Champlain. The whole year round Nicholas did not a stroke of work. His wife and daughter plowed, sowed and harvested the crops, and in fact did everything that was to be done on the farm. Wing was noted far and wide for his trousers. On the outside of each leg a row of four dozen buttons was sewed in order that Mrs. Wing could put them on for him. You see all the exertion that he was put to was the stretching out of his limbs. He lived to be over 90 years of age.—Exchange.

All medical authorities agree that catarrh is no more or less than an inflamation of the lining membrane of the nasal air passages. Nasal catarrh and all catarrhal affections of the head are not diseases of the blood, and it is a serious mistake to treet them as such. No conscientious physician ever attempts to do so. It is held by eminent medical men that sooner or later a specific will be found for every disease from which humanity suffers. The facts justify us in assuming that for catarrh at least a positive cure already exists in Ely's Cream Balm.

The corners of a girl's mouth turn up until she is twenty; after that age they begin to turn steadily downward.

It is a Mistake

To try to cure catarrh by using local applications. Catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It is not a disease of the man's nose, but of the man. Therefore, to effect a cure, requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, expelling the taint which causes the disease, and imparting health.

Electrical Cranks.

"Do you see that man there who has just picked up something from the edge of the sidewalk?" asked a gentleman well posted on electrical matters. "He has the latest fool craze on the brain, for he has been following that electric light tender about for the last ten minutes, in order to gather a few of the stubs of the electric arc light carbons which are thrown away. These he will carry in his pockets under the insane impression that some of the electricity left over from last night's lighting may soak into his system and ease up a trifle on some pain or other.

"Poor fellow! He is more deluded than the man who wears a potato in the left hand pocket of his trousers to cure him of rheumatism. Why, there is no more electricity in those carbons than in the bread that fellow may have eaten for breakfast.

"It is astonishing," continued the speaker, "what queer notions some people have about wearing electrical and magnetic appliances. The theory is quite universal that magnetism attracts the iron in the blood, and thus gives rise to a better circulation. But all the iron which exists in the human system is combined with hydrochloric acid, and is in the form of the oxide of that metal, and in this state the magnet has no power over the oxide of iron."—Washington Post.

Gold in the Georgia Rivers.

One of the most promising schemes by which a fortune was not made was that of an inventor of much mechanical genius who got up a plan for getting the gold out of the Georgia rivers. Most of the streams which flow from the gold districts of Georgia have "color" in their sands, but not always in paying quantities. This man proposed to build a boat 150 feet long, and have a sluice running all the way round it, thus giving a sluice length of 300 feet. Then by a steam shovel arrangement he intended to scrape up the sand out of the bottom of the river and drop it in the sluice, through which a stream of water would always be running.

The gold would collect in the bottom, as in any other sluice, and at intervals there would be a "cleaning up," which he expected would be highly profitable. As soon as one locality was exhausted the boat would move on to another, and, to use a common expression, he thought there were millions in it. The scheme was never tried, for before he was ready to put it into operation he found an opening in Colorado and went out there, but a great many people in Georgia believed it to be perfectly practicable, and regretted that the experiment was not made.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mr. Hornet Was Not Fooled.

A gentleman was relating a recent Sunday incident in which figured a farmer, a colored farm hand, a hornets' nest, some hornets and a bull, though the last took small part. A bull was standing in the orchard under a tree on which was a hornets' nest. The colored man concluded he would have some fun. The farmer was a quiet onlooker. The colored man got some stones, stood off at what seemed a safe distance, and proceeded to stir up those hornets and get them to light on the bull.

Mr. Hornet appeared to be of a discerning mind, took in the situation, found the bull on his good behavior, and struck out for the thrower of those stones. Probably the reader may have monkeyed with a hornet, and knows from experience how straight he shoots. He shot that colored man over the eye, and then the fun began at the wrong end of the line. Such running and yelling were never before heard or seen. Everybody laughed but the colored man, and even the bull appeared to grin.—West Chester (Pa.) Republican.

A Lawyer with an Eye to Business.

Belfast has a lawyer who deserves success. He not only has an eye to present business, but one for the future. He does considerable marrying, and was heard the other day to say to a young couple whom he had just married: "Married life in the best regulated families has its troubles, and should either of you come to the conclusion that you have made a mistake don't forget to call on me, and I'll get you a divorce cheaper than any other lawyer in town. That balance of seventy-five cents you owe me for marrying you you can hand in any time." The young couple departed in a doubtful manner, as if they were half inclined to be divorced at once and save costs.—Belfast Age.

Those Well to Do Beggars.

Never mind the beggars in Rome who accost you on your way to the eating house. They are stout, hearty rogues as a rule, with a rare trick of groaning afflictingly at sight of a stranger. Not so long ago one of them used to ride daily into Rome on his own cob from his country seat. He amassed a respectable fortune by sitting with outstretched palms on the stone steps which ascend from the Piazza di Spagna, and gave his daughter a dowry of 1,000 crowns. That, however, was in the days of the popes, when mendacity was a recognized profession, quite as reputable as law or medicine.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Band Saw.

English mechanics are said to depend much upon a tool which is but little used in America, namely, a band saw for metals. Its construction, as described, is similar to that of a heavy band saw, with a third carrying wheel for the saw, the object of this being to remove the up moving side of the blade from the vicinity of the table, and thus leave a deep throat through which a large piece of work can be passed or a wide plate turned. This third wheel is placed at the back of the machine, about midway in the vertical height of the saw blade. The temper of the saw is slightly harder than that of those used for wood, and the teeth are sharpened straight across the blade by a cutter with its teeth at the right height to suit the teeth of the saw blade.

This tool is used for cutting off the spines from steel castings, the ends of bolts, to saw up steel, iron and copper plates to any form, and to rough out the jaw sof eccentric rods and other forgings which would require the use of slotting machines, and it cuts as well on a circle as upon a straight line. The blade is lubricated with soap and water, and in a cut six inches long through a steel connecting rod jaw it works freely and satisfactorily. Not infrequently circular saws of large dimensions are used for the same purpose, and, being mounted on heavy frames and fed carefully up to their work, cut off large pieces of steel, leaving nearly a smooth surface on the face of the cut.—New Orleans Picayune.

Cement Under Water.

The use under water of sacks of cement mortar is in certain cases of the greatest service. It is probable that no other process will permit work under water which will secure so perfect a contact with old masonry. A notable example of this may be cited in the viaduct which is now being built across the Loire for the railroad from Bourges to Glen, France, which has the foundations of its piers dug through a water bearing sand to the marly limestone which forms the subsoil of the valley.

In some of these excavations the bottom is disturbed by violent currents of water coming either from the water bearing sand into the pit, or from cracks which are frequently met with in the limestone and the waters of which spout out in the bottom of the excavation. This water could not be carried away by masonry channels or drains, since the mortar would be at once washed out. The use of cement in sacks allows the engineers to obtain a pavement or foundation for the bottom of the pit almost solid and fitting itself perfectly to all the irregularities of the bottom, thus allowing the concrete to be set with perfect security.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Truly a Railway Hero.

In the evidence taken in case of John W. Winn, freight conductor on the Richmond division of the Atlantic Coast line, who was killed at Redfield station, on the Petersburg railroad, one Thursday morning, in attempting to get on the caboose while the train was in motion, it is shown that Winn fell and the wheels of the caboose passed over him, cutting his right leg off between the ankle and knee, his left leg off between the knee and hip, his left arm off between the elbow and shoulder. When he was missed the train was backed and he was found conscious.

Before he would allow anything to be done for him he directed the brakeman who came to his assistance to take charge of his train and put it on the siding, so as to prevent collision with a passenger train. He then made this brakeman examine the switches used so as to make sure that all was safe. He then remarked that he had performed his last duty, as he would never be able to work again.—Richmond Times.

A Forcible Reminder.

A wife recently gave her husband a sealed letter, begging him not to read it till he got to his place of business. When he did so he read:

"I am forced to tell you something that I know will trouble you, but it is my duty to do so. I am determined you shall know it, let the result be what it may. I have known for a week that it was coming, but kept it to myself until today, when it has reached a crisis, and I cannot keep it any longer. You must not censure too harshly, for you must reap the results as well as myself. I do hope it won't crush you."

Here he turned the page, his hair slowly rising.

"The coal is all used up! Please call and ask for some to be sent this afternoon. I thought by this method you would not forget it."

He didn't.—London Tit-Bits.

Descendants of Pontius Pilate.

It may be known to only few people that direct descendants of Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor, are living in this country. The ancient archives of Vienna, Austria and Pesth, Hungary, show that a grandson of Pontius Pilate, Caius Flavius Pilate, was made proctor of the Roman province of Dacia, on the lower Danube. Later on we find a descendant of his governor of Panonia, the present kingdom of Hungary, and married with one of the Byzantine Greek princesses. Still later the family moved into Austria. Some forty years ago two members of the family moved to this country and gained reputations as florists and landscape gardeners. One of the brothers laid out the Central Park of New York, and soon after died. The other is carrying on with his son the florist business in Sing Sing, N. Y.—Chicago Tribune.

A GREAT LITERRARY BARGAIN.

Five Famous Romances of the American Forest.

The Leatherstocking Tales.

By JAMES FENIMORE COOPER.

An entirely new edition of the Leatherstocking Tales has just been published, in one large and handsome volume of over three hundred large quarto pages, containing all of these famous romances, complete, unchanged and unabridged, viz:—

THE DEERSLAYER, THE PATHFINDER,
THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS,
THE PIONEERS, THE PRAIRIE.

This edition is printed on good paper from large type. It is a delightful book, and one which should have a place in every American home. It contains five of the most charming romances that the mind of man has ever conceived. A whole Winter's reading is comprised in this mammoth volume. All who have not read Cooper's stories have in store for themselves a rich literary treat. Every member of the family circle will be delighted with them. We have made an arrangement with the publisher of this excellent edition of the Leatherstocking Tales whereby we are enabled to offer this large and beautiful book almost as a free gift to our subscribers. Such an offer as we make would not have been possible a few years ago, but the lightning printing press, low prices of paper and great competition in the book trade have done wonders for the reading public, and this is the most marvellous of all.

THE GOBLIN FROG.

Peter O'Reilly was a pioneer miner of Nevada and one of the discoverers of the great Comstock silver lode—one of the two men who turned to the light of day that glittering ore which was the first of over $300,000,000 since taken from the wonderful vein then lit upon.

For years before he made the great discovery O'Reilly had been working among the gold placers of Gold canyon a wet weather tributary of the Carson creek, in which gold was discovered as early as 1852. In this canyon he wrought with pan and rocker, and at times with much success, sometimes taking out several hundred dollars in a few days, the ground was very rich in spots.

"Pete" was fond of rambling away alone along the meandering of the canyon in search of the rich spots that were to be found by those who diligently sought for them. He liked to be by himself and to mine in his own way. Provided he could find a few "colors" (small particles of gold) he would dig and pan away for days, quite confident that his luck would at last lead him into the right and his labors be richly rewarded.

Peter O'Reilly was not only a spiritualist, but also a firm believer in all manner of signs and omens. He heard voices, as did the heroes of Ossian, in the sighing breeze and extracted a meaning from all sounds of hill and vale that reached his ears. The end of this was (a few years after the discovery of the Comstock lode) that he become insane, and finally died in a private asylum at Walbridge, Cal.

It appears that the last mining O'Reilly ever did in Gold canyon was when he started in to prospect a bar on which he found a previous locator in the person of a frog, which held a "squatter's" right to the place, and which frog almost immediately began to give him trouble.

Pete began his mining operations by constructing a small dam to turn the rill flowing in the canyon into a little ditch that led to his "panning hole" at the lower end of the bar.

The little reservoir formed by the dam held only about a dozen hogsheads of water. It was soon after this reservoir filled that Pete first had notice of the presence on his claim of the frog. He had sunk a pit in the gravel of the bar almost down to the bed rock, and washed out two or three pans of dirt that yielded well. He was down in this prospect hole filling his pan with some particularly promising gravel, when he heard a small, squeaky voice sing out; "Struck it?"

Pete was at the moment deeply absorbed in the work in which he was engaged, and the shrill, shrieking voice ringing out so near at hand and asking a question that so exactly chimed in with the train of thought running through his head so startled him that his pick almost fell from his hands. He pricked up his ears and looked about in all directions to see whence proceeded the cheery little voice. Almost he expected to discover a little red mantled fairy peering out at him from some neighboring clump of willows or some tall tuft of grass. As he stood thus gazing about in open mouthed amazement the little voice again piped out: "Struck it? Struck it? Struck it?"

Turning his eyes in the direction whence proceeded the inquiring voice, Pete presently descried a small green frog mounted upon a stick that projected an inch of two above the surface of the water in his reservoir. The frog was but a rod or two away, and seemed, as Pete thought, to be looking inquiringly into his eyes.

"Struck it? Struck it? Struck it?" again said the frog.

"Are ye schpakin' to me, sor?" said Pete.

"Struck it!" says the frog.

"It's a good omen," said Pete. "The little feller says I've struck it. Thought he's no countryman of mine, I believe in me sowl he means well by me, and that I have sthruck it in this very hole."

So saying Pete carried the pan of dirt he had dug to his panning place, panned it out, and did not get a "color." He was not a little astonished at this result, and was much inclined to call the frog a liar, but on turning to look for him the little fellow was gone. He went to his pit and dug another pan of dirt, listening all the time to hear what the frog would have to say about it. Not a word did the frog say, however.

Pete washed out the pan of dirt and got gold to the value of nearly a dollar. "Aha! ye little devil!" cried he; "where are ye now? Ye didn't have a word to say this time."

Well pleased with his luck, Pete began digging another pan of gravel from the place where he had got the last, expecting another rich result. He had been at work only half a minute before the little voice rang out sharp and clear: "Struck it? Struck it? Struck it?"

"Oh, yes, you little fool!" cried Pete; "it's aisy for you to say 'Sthruck it! Sthruck it! Sthruck it!' after ye've seen what I've got in my pan."

"Struck it! Struck it! Struck it!" cried the frog in what seemed to Pete a triumphant tone.

"All right, me bye!" cheerily assented Pete, nodding his head toward the little fellow that sat winking and blinking on the end of the stick. "All right, me bye; av coorse I've struck it."

Pete then picked up his pan of gravel, carried it to the water hole, washed it out and did not find a speck of gold. "You're the worst liar I ever saw!" cried Pete, rising up from his work and shaking his fist in the direction of the frog. Not a sign of the frog did he see, however, the little fellow having very prudently retired to the bottom of the pond.

Pete grumbled for a time, then went and dug another pan of gravel. As he was carrying the dirt to his panning place the frog stuck his head above the water and called out, "Struck it?' and again no gold was found. Thus it went. When the frog said nothing he got a good yield of gold, but when he made his usual inquiry—sneering inquiry, Pete now considered it to be—no gold was found.

At last Pete had washed so many pans of dirt out of which the frog had charmed all the gold that began to grow very angry. He was also not a little discouraged. Finally, just as he began to scrape the gravel out of a very promising crevice, and just as he was beginning to think the frog would this time hold his tongue, out came the little fellow with his "Struck it? Struck it?"

Pete quietly laid down his crevicing spoon, slyly gathered two or three big rocks, then softly, on tiptoe, began stealing toward his little persecutor, and just as the frog cried out, "Struck it? Struck it?" the irate O'Reilly let drive at him with a rock so huge that it could have been hurled by no lesser Ajax. The rock missed its mark, but raised a great commotion in the little pond.

Thinking he had given his bad angel a fright that would last him a fortnight, Pete returned to his work. He had almost filled his pan with very rich looking dirt, when up popped the frog's head and out came the tantalizing "Struck it? Struck it?"

Pete threw the pan of gravel as far as he could send it and made for the frog, determined on its destruction. He would stand no more of its infernal deviltry.

Shovel in hand, he waded out into the middle of the little reservoir and scooped and tore about in it with a vigor and venom of a mad bull. Once or twice he saw, or imagined he saw, the frog dart through the discolored water, and brought down the back of the shovel on the spot with such a "spat" that the blow might have been heard a mile away.

At last, not seeing any more of the frog, Pete concluded that he had killed him. He gave the little animal a parting curse, and being wrought up to such a pitch of excitement and nervousness that he could work no more that afternoon, strode away, put on his coat and went home.

The next morning he returned to his claim and his work. He washed out several pans of dirt, and was getting good pay out of all he washed, when suddenly there fell upon his ear the shrill cry of "Struck it?"

The first note sent a thrill through Pete's stalwart frame like the sharp shock of an electrical battery; then a chill fell upon his heart, and his hair almost rose on end. His evil genius, as he now firmly believed the little green frog to be, was still there, alive and at his old tricks.

"May the curse of holy St. Patrick light on ye!" cried Pete. Then he kicked over the pan of dirt he dug and made a rush for the reservoir, the frog "plumping" under the water with a little chirp at his approach. Again Pete went into the reservoir with his long handled shovel. He charged about, but could see nothing of the frog nor anything that looked like it. Being determined to do his enemy this time, Pete went for his pan and began trying to bail out the reservoir. Finding this too great a task, he got his pick, dug down the embankment of rocks and earth forming the little dam, and eagerly watched, with uplifted shovel, for the frog as the water ran off. The water all ran out of the reservoir, but his little tormentor was nowhere to be seen.

Pete waded out into the oozy bed of the pond, digging and plowing about with his shovel, but he failed to start the goblin frog. He then arrived at the very reasonable conclusion that the little imp had gone down the stream with the body of water that rushed out of the reservoir when it was opened. He cruised about the spot for an hour or more, going down the channel of the canyon, turning over rocks and beating tufts of grass with his shovel, but saw nothing of the frog. Thinking his evil genius had been washed down through the canyon into the Carson river, Pete rebuilt his dam in order that he might have water ready for use in the morning. This job done, he went home, feeling quite sure that he had either killed or permanently ousted his little enemy.

The next day he returned to his work. Before starting in, however, he walked around the reservoir several times, peering keenly into the water and kicking every bunch of grass about its margin. The frog was nowhere to be seen or started.

Pete then went to his prospect hole and began digging, stopping occasionally, however, to cock an eye toward the pond and listen for the frog. There was no sign of the little imp, and Pete's heart grew lighter. He had dug a pan of dirt without the usual hated interruption, and was on his way to wash it out when—"Struck it? Struck it?" was squeaked from the pond by the goblin frog.

This was too much for Pete. The pan dropped from his hands, his under jaw fell, and he sank down upon the nearest bowlders. As he was wondering if it was possible for him ever in any way to rid himself of the evil thing that destroyed his luck the frog again called out as cheerily as ever: "Struck it? Struck it?

"May the devil burn ye!" cried Pete. "No, I haven't struck it, and, what's more, I never will strike it wid ye there, ye dirty little blackguard! Must I be comin' afther ye again, ye unclean baste o' the devil?"

"Struck it!" said the frog.

"Ye think so?" cried Pete, sarcastically, and catching up a pick he ran to the reservoir and began digging down the embankment.

Soon, however, he paused in this work, and, throwing down his pick, said: "No, its of no use. Haven't I thried to get him in all manner o' ways! No, when I get the wather off he'll be gone. He's no human frog. I'll jist let him howld possession and I'll hunt me another place. Divil a lick will I ever sthrike here again; it's the divil's own child he is. I've heard birds talk and bastes talk, but niver wan o' thim all that could schpake so plain as this little green divil that's widout either feathers or hair—he's not human."

Pete began gathering up his tools and clothes with the intention of vacating the place, when he stopped and gazed wistfully at his prospect hole. "A promising place it was, too, in the main," said he. "Howly Mother! Shall I, a Christian and a good Catholic, be tormented away by a dirty little heretic baste you? No. I'll give him a warmin' yit, and all the likes of him. I'll pepper him tomorrow!" So saying, Pete put on his coat and struck out for home, turning to shake his fist toward the pond as he departed.

The next morning Pete went up toward Johntown, a little trading post about a mile above his claim, and borrowed a shot gun; then he bought a quantity of powder and shot, and returned toward his mine in a vengeful mood. Again and again he said as he strode along: "I'll kill that frog if it's among the possibilities!"

On reaching his claim Pete crawled to a big rock near the pond, and seating himself upon it, watched patiently for over an hour, but the frog was neither to be seen nor heard.

"He has run away," said Pete, "but I'll kill him if he's anywhere on the face of the green earth!"

He then moved cautiously along down the canyon. Although frogs were quite common on the Carson river, they were seldom seen in Gold canyon. At last, however, Pete saw what he thought might be his tormentor. He blazed away with his gun and stretched the creature lifeless on the margin of the rail. He was beginning to rejoice over the victory he had gained when up from the spot leaped another frog, the very picture of that he had killed. Pete looked at this new apparition, then turned and gazed on the slaughtered animal, to be sure he was dead. Finding it still stretched on the ground, he went after the second frog, which he finally succeeded in killing. All that day he hunted up and down the canyon, blazing away at everything that moved. He slaughtered many toads and lizards, but only one other frog.

The next day he was again out with his gun, and every day for about a week, extending his hunt as far as the Carson river, and firing away many pounds of shot to little effect. He talked of little but frogs, and the miners along the canyon, who always found great sport in his eccentricities and in his superstitious notions, "stuffed" him with many stories of the baleful influences of frogs and toads.

One morning to the surprise of the jocular miners of the camp, for whom his insane warfare on the frogs had afforded great sport, instead of starting out with his gun, Pete took his pan and crevicing spoon and departed down the canyon in the direction of his claim. An hour later Pete came tearing up the canyon to the camp wild eyed. "I'll niver sthrike pick intil this canyon again?" cried he. That imp o' the devil is still there on me claim! I was but jist listin' me second pan of dirt whin he raised his head from the water and says: 'Pate, have ye struck it?' says he. 'May the divil bless me,' says I, 'if ye can't have the whole bloody canyon; I'll niver strike pick intil it again.' No more I will. That frog is no human frog—it's a child o' hell."

Pete O' Reilly kept his word; he at once "pulled up stakes" in Gold canyon. He struck for Six Mile canyon, five miles to the northward. Taking Pat McLaughlin for a partner, the two began mining at the head of the canyon, where Virginia City now stands, and there the pair presently "struck it"—struck the great Comstock silver lode, the hidden treasure house of the gnomes and wonder of the whole mining world. But for the "goblin frog" O'Reilly would probably have continued mining in Gold canyon, and to this day the Comstock and "Big Bonanza" might have remained undiscovered. But for that frog the names of Mackay, Fair and a score of other mining millionaires would not now be known throughout the world.—San Francisco Examiner.

THE SUCCESS OF "THE CENTURY" AND ITS PLANS FOR 1891.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE is now so well-known that to tell of its past success seems almost an old story. The N. Y. Tribune has said that it and its companion, St. Nicholas for Young Folks, issued by the same house, "are read by every one person in thirty of the country's population,"—and large editions of both are sent beyond the seas. It is an interesting fact that a few years ago it was found that seven thousand copies of The Century went to Scotland,—quite a respectable edition in itself. The question in England is no longer "Who reads an American book?" but "Who does not see the American magazines?"

A few years ago The Century about doubled its circulation with the famous War Papers, by General Grant and others, adding many more readers lately with the Lincoln History and Kennan's thrilling articles on the Siberian Exile System. One great feature of 1891 is to be describing that remarkable movement to the gold fields in '49, in a series of richly illustrated articles written by survivors, including the narratives of men who went to California by the different routes, accounts for the gold discoveries, life in the mines, the work of the vigilance committees (by the chairman of the committee) etc., etc. General Fremont's last writing was done for this series. In November appears the opening article, "The First Emigrant Train to California,"—crossing the Rockies in 1841,—by General Bidwell, a pioneer of pioneers. Thousands of American families who had some relative or friend among "the Argonauts of '49" will be interested in these papers.

MANY OTHER GOOD THINGS ARE COMING,—the narrative of an American's travels through that unknown land Tibet (for 700 miles over ground never before trod by a white man); the experiences of escaping War-Prisoners; American Newspapers described by well-known journalists; accounts of the great Indian Fighters, Custer and others; personal anecdotes of Lincoln, by his private secretaries; "The Faith Doctor," a novel by Edward Eggleston, with a wonderfully rich programme of novelettes and stories by most of the leading writers, etc., etc.

It is also announced that The Century has purchased the right to print, before its appearance in France or any other country, extracts from advance sheets of the famous Talleyrand Memoirs, which have been secretly preserved for half a century—to be first given to the world through the pages of an American magazine. All Europe is eagerly awaiting the publication of this personal history of Talleyrand—greatest of intriguers and diplomats.

The November Century begins the volume, and new subscribers should commence with that issue. The subscription price ($4.00 may be remitted directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York, or single copies may be purchased of any newsdealer. The publishers offer to send a free sample copy—a recent back number—to any one desiring it.

Literary Notices.

The numbers of LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for November 1st and 8th contain A Soldier of the Mutiny, H. P. Liddon, by Canon Scott Holland, The Czar and the Jews, The Royal Couple of Roumania, Henry Parry Liddon, After "Tatou," Talking Birds, Vezelay, After Summer, Hampton Court, Manners, A Sixteenth-Century Duchess, In Ruthenia, What has Become of Original Sin? Dew, A Yarn Spun in Manitoba, with installments of "Marcia," by W. E. Norris, and "Eight Days," and poetry and miscellany. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each the subscription price ($8) is low. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

JUST WHAT THE HOUSEHOLD WANTS. It is only necessary to look at the December Peterson, to decide that it is the magazine for the family. Next year Peterson will hold its jubilee. To have been for fifty years the prime favorite in thousands of households is something to be proud of and its popularity steadily increases. For 1891 the magazine will be enlarged, its attractions more varied, and its illustrations more abundant. This number seems about as full of handsome pictures as it can hold. Besides admirable steel and other engravings, there are various copiously illustrated articles. A capital paper, Some Ice Carnival Sketches, gives, in addition to numerous smaller designs, two splendid full page cuts. A Frozen Lake in Holland and a Snowshoe Race over Hurdles, A Problem Never Solved is the best short story Edgar Fawcett has ever written. The fashion department will save any woman money enough to double her dresses, enabling her to make them at home, and the decorative designs will help her to ornament her rooms at an almost nominal price. The lady who neglects to have Peterson on her list for 1891 will make a great mistake. Now is the time to get up a club. Terms: $2.00 a year. 2 copies $3.50; 3 copies $4.50, with a handsome premium to the getter-up of the club; 4 copies, $6.40; 6 copies, $9.00, with an extra copy of the magazine for one year to the getter-up of the club. A sample copy, with full particulars, will be sent to Club raisers. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The custom of lifting the hat had its origin when knights never appeared in public except in full armor, but upon entering an assembly of friends the knight removed his helmet, the act signifying, "I am safe in the presence my friends."

WINCHESTER.

Mr. H. H. Bangs has gone to Boston to live.

Frank White has got home from his European trip.

Mr. P. H. Swan has gone to Florida for the winter.

Isn't it about time for Henry J. to get his tomahawk ground up for the spring election?

The health of Judge Taylor has been greatly improved by his European visit. He bids fair to continue to be a useful and respected citizen of Winchester for many years to come.

A Lawrence man will buy the Fisk property at Symmes's Corner. Some say he has bought it for $10,000. Mr. F. H. Nourse, the well known and very successful Boston and Winchester real estate agent, made the sale.

The World's Fair.

The excitement caused by this great event is scarcely equaled by that produced by the great discovery of Dr. Miles—the Restorative Nervine. It speedily cures nervous prostration, change of life, pain, dullness and confusion in head, fits sleeplessness, the blues, neuralgia, palpitation, monthly pains, etc. C. W. Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; Talbot & Moss, of Greensburg, Ind., and A. Blackburn of Wooster, O., say that "The Nervine sells better than anything we ever sold, and gives universal satisfaction." The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, NOV. 28, 1890.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

FOR TEMPERANCE.

The JOURNAL extends a cordial invitation to every voter in this city to throw his ballot for prohibition next Tuesday. For humanity's sake it hopes the invitation will be accepted by all. The well-being and good name of the city demand that the temperance vote shall prevail over all opposition at the polls on that day, and in the next issue of this paper we hope to be able to record a great and glorious victory over Rum and all its cohorts and myrmidons.

There are voters here who are champions of the temperance cause; who are professed prohibitionists through and through; who carry Rum's poor victims close to their hearts; who (and rightly) look on the rumseller as a common enemy to mankind—there are a great many of such voters here; now let us watch and see how well they acquit themselves next Tuesday. Let us see if they all come out to the polls and cast their ballots for prohibition. Let us watch and see how many of them stay at home and neglect their duty that day. Let us see how their professions and actions compare.

In order for temperance to come off triumphant next Tuesday it will be necessary for every friend of it to go to the polls and vote. Every man must be promptly on hand and do his duty. Half-way work on the part of temperance will result in a victory for Rum. A temperance victory is possible if the friends of temperance will do their WHOLE DUTY.

Gentlemen Prohibitionists, what shall we have here in Woburn next year, temperance or intemperance?

W. C. KENNEY FOR MAYOR.

This gentleman is the nominee of both the Republicans and Democrats for the office of Mayor of this city to succeed the present incumbent, and his election is generally conceded. The bare fact that both parties have chosen him for their standard-bearer is proof enough of his popularity to convince anyone, and not only that, but it shows a public confidence in his ability and integrity which augurs well for the advancement of the city's interests under his administration. He is one of the foremost young business men of this place. He is a clear thinker, a dilligent worker, conscientious in the discharge of all duties, public and private, and is as well posted in our municipal affairs as any man among us. That he will discharge the duties of the important post without fear or favor no one who knows him will doubt for a moment, and that he will make a success of his administration nobody acquainted with him will for a moment question.

Republicans owe it to themselves and the public good to throw their ballots solidly for Ald. Kenney. Every Democrat too who wants to live under a good, clean city government should do the same.

The average estimate is that Mr. Kenney will be elected by 300 or 400 majority.

CITY ELECTION.

Woburn's charter election will take place on Dec. 2, 1890. There are so many conflicting interests aroused that it will probably be a lively one. The contest over the Mayoralty is getting sharper every day.

The JOURNAL would like to see every voter who can do so go to the polls next Tuesday and deposit his ballot for the right man.

☞ B. P. Shillaber ("Mrs. Partington") died at his home in Chelsea last Tuesday, at the ripe age of 76 years. He was a genial, whole-soul man and an entertaining humorist and his friends could be counted by the thousands. They were scattered all over the world. And so, "Mrs. Partington," the dear old soul, will never be seen any more on Boston streets.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus." Dec. 4.

— Carpets are very cheap at Willard Smith's.

— Marcellus, my lad, you are a dead cock in the pit.

— We will make room for "Lines to a Billy Goat" soon.

— Down at the Boston Branch "the spices yield a rich perfume."

— Vote for prohibition all ye who like to see sober, peaceable times.

— They say Grant will win the race in Ward 3 at an easy hand-gallop.

— One thing about it is true and that is, we have had a plenty of dust this week.

— The St. Charles Minstrels have a big concert in preparation to be given in about 4 weeks.

— At the close of registration last Saturday evening the number of names enrolled was 2647.

— Early last Monday morning the thermometer showed 12 degrees above zero. Pretty sharp.

— Deacon Gage remains about the same—one day a little better, and the next not quite so well.

— Mrs. George F. Bean is a very popular lady and will be re-elected to the School Board sure.

— Have you got your ticket for the "Wreck of the Hesperus?" On sale at Smith's dry goods store.

— The markets carried full stocks of the choicest kinds ot Thanksgiving dinners in the raw this year.

— On account of Thanksgiving our No. Woburn items were received too late for publication this week.

— It wouldn't hurt Mr. Robert J. W. Phinney's feelings very much to see Mr. W. F. Davis slaughtered.

— Supt. Sewell of the No. Woburn St. Railroad has published his winter timetable. Mark well the changes.

— J. W. Studley and F. D. Cook, both of Ward 6 (No. Woburn) started for Jacksonville, Florida, on Nov. 23, 1890.

— A better stock of ranges, cook, parlor and office stoves than Holdridge keeps can't be found in Middlesex county.

— Prominent Democrats in Ward 7 say that Frank Pushee and Phin. Hanson are morally certain of being elected.

— The reservoir job is completed and water has been let on. Supt. Crilley got through quicker than he promised.

— Mr. Waldo Thompson is making preparations for a big winter trade at L. Thompson's stove, tin, and hardware store.

— Fowle of Ward 4 is sure to win with flying colors. He will make a good Alderman.

— The disgruntled Democrats held a seance the other evening to lay plans to whip Ald. Kenney. Mr. Buchanan acted as Chairman.

— A good many Democrats in Ward 7 will vote for Pushee and Hanson if there is any reliance to be placed in the signs of the times.

— They do say down Canal street way that William F. Davis, Esq., will be the worst whipped man in the whole lot next Tuesday night.

— The Holdsworth confectionery rooms in Fox Block, lately occupied by McGrath, are just as neat and inviting as anything can be.

— The Republicans of Ward 3 ought to elect Alec Grant Alderman just as easy as rolling off a log.

— Cars on the No. Woburn St. Railroad line will cease running to Medford next Sunday night for the winter. So orders Supt. Sewell.

— Quite a large delegation of Post 33, G. A. R., visited Comrades of Post 75 at Stoneham last Monday evening and had a royal good time.

— The Boston Branch proprietors have put in a water motor to run their coffee-mill, etc. Their business demands all the "modern improvements."

— Notice in the advertisement of "Caste" the directions in relation to the sale of tickets. By the way, "Caste" is going to be a very fine thing.

— Unless the JOURNAL has forgotten how to guess, the vote for Mayor in Ward 6 next Tuesday will show a curious condition of political affairs up there.

— Sorry to find Mr. W. F. Davis "flocking" with such bad (political) company. What is that little yarn about "Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart?"

— It is said that Dr. Harry Blake has had loud calls to go to Stoneham and practice his profession. We do not know in what light he regards such a call.

— Rev. Dr. March participated in the Dr. Dexter memorial services in Boston last Monday. Several other eminent clergymen were also present and took part in them.

— Julia Ward Howe will lecture before the Woburn Woman's Club in Concert Hall on Friday, Dec. 5, at 3 P. M. The subject of her talk will be "Marriage and Divorce."

— It is currently reported that the Democratic wheel-horse, R. Terrett, Esq., was induced to withdraw by a promise of a fat office in Mr. Bean's anti-"Ring" government.

— Hon. B. F. Whittemore ought to have been the Republican candidate for Alderman in Ward 5. He is interested in having a good local government and is willing to work to promote it.

— The WOBURN JOURNAL denies the report (which originally appeared in its own columns) that Mr. Beebe of Wakefield is to take the John Cummings tannery in that city.—Wakefield Record.

— Lovell, the druggist, is gathering in a very choice stock of holiday goods. He is also making hosts of friends here. People like Lovell and his neat, nice store, and the way he does business.

— Last Tuesday was a charming day. We had a return of that S. W. wind which is so soft and balmy and welcome in winter, and everybody just enjoyed it. It came pretty near being "Beach weather."

— The letter of Richard Terrett, Esq., the well known Democratic leader in this city, withdrawing from the Mayoralty canvass, is very affecting. It is pathetic enough to draw tears from a graven image.

— The effect of Rev. Fr. Scully's address at Lyceum Hall last Sunday afternoon on the vote for prohibition will be good. He is a whole team on temperance—a good match for Rev. Hugh Montgomery, who got up the meeting.

— On Thursday evening, Dec. 4th, Brewster Colony, No. 19, U. O. P. F., will hold a Pound Party and an old fashion spelling match at the close of their regular meeting. On Dec. 15 the Colony will have candidates to initiate.

— There are people in this city no doubt who have money to invest and are sometimes puzzled to know where to put it. Mr. W. E. Jenks, a reliable Boston broker, formerly of Woburn, would be a good man for such people to consult.

— Study carefully Gen. Secretary Bailey's notice of the "Wreck of the Hesperus" in our business columns. A great deal of work has been put into the preparations for the production of this entertainment and it is going to be a splendid thing.

— Gregory, the popular auctioneer and dealer in real estate, advertises some very desirable real estate in Winchester to be sold next Wednesday, to which notice we call especial attention. Somebody will have a chance to make some money at that sale.

— As usual, Miss Celia Reade will take subscriptions for all the leading magazines. This is the proper season of the year to renew subscriptions and subscribe for magazines. Please call on Miss Reade at the Centre postoffice and let her take your subscription.

— There is no reason why Mr. Cutler, the Republican candidate for Councilman in Ward 6, should not get a big majority up there. He would represent the Ward in the Council with credit and for its material advantage. Mr. Cutler is a good man for the place.

— The Equal Suffrage League will hold its next regular meeting in the Y. M. C. A. parlor Monday evening, Dec. 1, at half past seven. The first half hour will be devoted to business, and the hour from eight to nine will be spent as usual in the study of Political Economy.

— We are indebted to Mr. Charles R. Roseaquist for an interesting account of a visit received last Sunday from a party of Swedish missionaries en route to China, and of the religious services held by them, which account was received too late for this issue of the JOURNAL.

— It will be rather unfortunate for Citizen Bean for his first essay in politics to turn out a great disaster. For the esteemed Citizen Bean is bound to be snowed under to the tune of about 250 majority for the other man. But the Citizen is young, and young bones "knit" readily.

— Wonder how Lawyer Bean and Dame Bean get along when politics is the theme for discussion around the hearthstone or over the tea-urn? It is understood that they belong to different parties, and that the good Mistress of the house is more than a match for her liege lord in a talking-match.

— We cheerfully subscribe to the suggestion of a patron of the JOURNAL as follows: "Could not the city of Woburn call their new park 'Rumford Park' and thus, without any cost, erect a lasting monument to one they should honor for the great deeds done by him?" Let it be Rumford Park by all means.

— Dr. W. A. Springer, a homeopathic physician from Beverly, has come to Woburn to live and practice his profession, and from his appearance we prophesy that he will succeed. He comes with the very best of credentials and a plenty of them, and the JOURNAL bespeaks for him a share of Woburn's good graces.

— The comic opera "Priscilla" will be given at the Boston Museum next Thursday evening for the benefit of the Working Girls Club under the direction of its composers and owners, Messrs. Suratte and Coolidge. It is the same that was so highly enjoyed in this city a couple or three weeks ago when given by Mr. Macomber.

— Mr. Amos Cummings is wading right in deep in printer's ink. He is flourishing—doing more business than ever before—and feels all over just like booming things. We like his style—especially his style of patronizing the JOURNAL. He goes to Boston about every day now for additions to his big stock.

— If the people of Ward 7 want to serve the best interest of its inhabitants they should take hold and elect Mr. Pushee for Alderman and Mr. Hanson for Councilman. There are no two better men in the city for the positions than they are. The Republicans ought to put forth special efforts to pull these worthy citizens through in good shape.

— Think of the latest style Colonial Writing Desk for the low price of $10! This is the same Desk which sold in New York a short time ago for $16. It is made of solid English Oak, with inside drawer, pigeon holes, compartments, and outside shelves, drawer and footrest. To secure one for $10, write to Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston.

— Our good friend George W. Jenkins who used to keep a hardware store just across the way knows a good thing when he sees it. Hear him talk: "When I fail to receive my copy of the JOURNAL (as I have lately) it seems like going to bed without my supper." George W. richly deserves the prosperity in business which he is now enjoying at Malden.

— The tower of the old Methodist meetinghouse on the corner of Main and Walnut streets was razed to the ground last Saturday. It was said that the weathervane was to go up to Wilmington to adorn a new church there, but we do not know whether it went or not. The taking down of the steeple was quite a job but down she went, and we have lost our pet weather vane.

— We advise our readers never to skip the advertisements in the JOURNAL, especially the new ones. Something of interest will always be found in them. The JOURNAL is rather proud of its fine advertising patronage this fall. Its columns are highly appreciated by people who have something to sell or want to buy something—by merchants, tradesmen artisans, and business men generally.

— Providence permitting, the JOURNAL will publish a paper read before the Y. M. A. at its last meeting entitled "Our Highways" by Mr. Winthrop Hammond. It is a thoughtful and well-written production. President Clough furnishes the Association with good intellectual as well as material food. Under his good, common sense and liberal administration the Club is very prosperous.

— The Unitarian ladies of this city are famous for originating new things for public delectation and are very successful always in carrying them. They abound in novelties, and if the reader will glance at our business columns they will see that there is something attractive on the tapis at the Unitarian church soon to make its appearance. It is safe to say the Fair will be a good one, that everything about it will be firstclass, and that it will be worthy a liberal patronage.

— "Wreck of the Hesperus." Dec. 4.

— The selection of Mr. Charles A. Burdett, Principal of Burdett's Business College in Boston, for a member of the Woburn School Board was one of the wisest things the Republicans did at their city convention last week Thursday evening.

— It is rumored that recent changes have taken place in the management of The City Press. If the paper didn't possess wonderful vitality it never could have carried along the two regular correspondents who have burdened its columns and disgusted the public for months past and lived through it. The fact that it has carried such a load and survived is good proof that it is tougher than tripe.

— What is the matter with the Union street schoolhouse? There was no sessions again last Monday and all because the rooms were so cold that the pupils couldn't remain in them without freezing to death. It isn't possible that the $1300 of ventilation laid out on that house lately has ruined it for comfort, eh? Mebby it has got ventilated so much that it cannot be heated. There seems to be something wrong about it.

— Richard Terrett, Esq., the champion Democrat of Woburn, says about four-fifths of his warm personal friends advised him to withdraw from the race for the Mayor's office, and although he thought his judgment was better than the whole lot, and that warned him to stick, still for the sake of harmony he drew out and left a clear field for Lawyer Bean. The champion Democrat is a gentleman of brains whatever else may be thought of him.

— That open letter of "A Workingman" addressed to our next Mayor, W. C. Kenney, Esq., in last Tuesday morning's Globe was a stunner. The man who penned it should retreat into his hole and draw the hole in after him just as quick as possible. It was too silly for anything. Just as though every voter in Woburn don't know W. C. Kenney, what his relations with the working people have always been, and that he is one of the best men we have among us!

— Mr. D. W. Danforth was talked of for Alderman in Ward 6 and we rather expected to see him nominated. Probably he declined the place. Mr. Danforth would have made a valuable member of the Board, for he is an intelligent man and one who feels an interest in the welfare of the city. Mr. Dearborn is a firstrate man too. Everybody speaks well of him, and that is the best index to a person's merit that can be produced. He will get a big majority in Ward 6.

— The Republicans took Mr. Kenney, a Democrat, for their candidate for Mayor, but the Democrats declined to reciprocate the favor by accepting Mrs. Bean, the Republican nominee for their candidate for the School Board. With that party there is never any such thing as reciprocity unless they are going to get the best end of the bargain: it is "you take the crow and I'll take the turkey; or I'll take the turkey and you take the crow—I'm perfectly willing to divide fair, you know!"

— Mr. Moses Bancroft is the leading boot and shoe dealer in this city. His fine store on the corner of Main street and Montvale Ave. is lined with boots and shoes of the latest cut and best make, and the prices which he asks for them are rediculously low. Mr. John J. Lahey, who is perfectly familiar with the business and who is one of those young men who get right up and go along, is Mr. Bancroft's manager and he manages to the entire satisfaction of the public. He is popular with customers and the public generally. Mr. Samuel Grammer is chief salesman, and he too knows a man's shoe or lady's boot when he sees it. These gentlemen are pushing things at Bancroft's, and the upshot is a big business is done at that popular store.

— There is no holiday present that one friend or relative can give to another that generally is more highly appreciated than a portrait of him or herself in some of the different styles in which Mr. Frank Legg does them so admirably. We all like pictures of our friends and we want them not only true to life but artistically executed and worthy to adorn a handsome album or grace a centre-table. That is the kind of likeness for the production of which Mr. Legg is famous in these parts. Just now he is making a specialty of Crayon Portraits, in working which he is not excelled. What is nicer for a Christmas present than a fine Crayon Portrait of one we think a good deal of? Mr. Legg is offering special inducements in the shape of low prices to people for their orders for this style of portraits. Read his card in the JOURNAL.

Fact and Fancy.

It is a fact that in these days of sharp competition, imitations far outnumber, and in their newness far outshine the genuine. People often fancy they are getting diamonds in this life when really they are being served with "paste" goods. 'Tis best always to seek the true and good, avoiding all shams. This applies to household merchandise, and one gets the best and most economical when they purchase Brussels soap.

City Government.

COMMON COUNCIL.

The Board held a meeting last Friday evening.

Thomas Quinn and others petitioned for an arc light on Carter street. The resignation of William E. Blodgett as auditor was laid upon the table. The joint committee on Central Square schoolhouse reported an order, which was passed, authorizing the purchase of land of Jonathan Thompson on Main street opposite Clinton street for the new schoolhouse at a price not exceeding 12½ cents per foot. The committee on new armory reported in favor of the purchase of land of Mrs. A. M. Winn in the rear of the High school, for an armory, also a right of way of Edward L. Shaw and Griffin Place. It is understood that the price of the land is 20 cents a foot.

A Prospective Wedding.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Mr. Charles H. Taylor, Jr., son of Col. Taylor, proprietor of the Boston Globe, and member of the Globe's Editorial Staff, and Miss Marguerite C. Falck of this city, which will be solemnized on next Tuesday evening at the Unitarian church here.

A very large number of invitations have been sent out and the wedding is expected to be a high society affair.

Is It Possible?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL: A friend of mine who was present at the Citizens Meeting held at Dow's Block, last Monday evening, found out who Mr. Bean's prominent supporters were, and the list of persons present suggests the following inquiries:

Is it possible that Mr. George Buchanan, Chairman of the meeting, is for Mr. Bean because "The Ring" had defeated him for Water Commissioner and elected Mr. Parkhurst?

Is it possible that Mr. James McMahon, Secretary of the meeting, is for Mr. Bean because he was not reappointed Warden of Ward 4 by "The Ring"?

Is it possible that Mr. John O'Brien is for Mr. Bean because "The Ring" had not appointed him a police officer?

Is it possible that Mr. Elmore A. Pierce is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because he was not elected Auditor, Representative, or anything else?

Is it possible that Mr. John J. Short is for Mr. Bean because "The Ring" did not appoint him a police officer, or because he hopes to be Chief of Police under Mayor Bean?

Is it possible that Mr. Mark C. Felch is for Mr. Bean because he thinks that "The Ring" helped to defeat him as Senator?

Is it possible that Dr. G. P. Bartlett is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because he thinks it defeated him for Representative and nominated Thomas D. Hevey?

Is it possible that Mr. James Skinner is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because he thinks it has not treated his friend, Mr. Salmon, kindly?

Is it possible that Mr. Richard Terrett is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because he was not elected Superintendent of Streets two years ago, or because he hopes to take Mr. John Ferguson's place as Assessor and Overseer of the Poor if Mr. Bean is elected?

Is it possible that Hon. B. Frank Whittemore is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because it sent his friend Mr. McDonough to Cambridge?

Is it possible that Mr. McDonough is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" for the same reason?

Is it possible that some people present at that meeting are for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because it elected Mr. Jacob Brown Sinking Fund Commissioner?

Finally, is it possible that Mr. Bean is for Mr. Bean and against "The Ring" because "The Ring" is against Mr. Bean for Mayor?

A Loyal Woburn Boy.

CINCINNATI, O., Sat., Nov. 22, 1890.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL:—As a Woburn boy, I have in the five years that have elapsed since leaving there always pointed with pride to the home of my boyhood. I love the old town. Consequently I have always hailed with delight the arrival of the JOURNAL which is frequently sent me by the loved ones at home. Seeing in this mornings Commercial reference to one whose memory is dear to every son of Woburn, Count Rumford, I have taken the liberty of clipping it and sending it to the JOURNAL with the hope and thought that it would be of interest to your readers. Coming as it does in the form of an editorial, from the best Republican paper in the South it is especially valuable because of the inferential praise with which it speaks of the revered gentleman.

Very truly Yours,
JOHN A. JAYNE.

[We received the above on Monday evening and a few hours earlier an Editorial clipping from the N. Y. Tribune entitled "In Darkest England" reached this office. Both articles relate to General Booth's scheme for the relief of the world's poor and unfortunate, and both were written to show that Count Rumford, once Woburn's distinguished son, originated the plan and put it into successful operation in Bavaria a hundred years ago, by whose Sovereign he was made a Count, and from whom he received other great honors. We will give the substance of the articles in our next issue.]—ED. JOURNAL.

A Fine Lecture.

If the people had gone 10 miles and paid $1 apiece to hear Dr. March's lecture last Sunday evening in the Congregational church on "Forty Scenes in the Life of Christ" they would have considered it a cheap price to pay for such an entertainment. And so indeed it would have been, for it was really a lecture of rare merit. If it had been advertised for delivery in Chicago, where Dr. March's popularity as a biblical author is not equalled by any other in the country East or West, it would have attracted a large audience, and they would have congratulated themselves on the enjoyment of a great platform treat from a man widely noted and admired for the products of his pen.

The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views of the principal scenes in the life of our Savior which were copies of the works of the world's greatest painters in olden times, such as the "Last Supper," "Transfiguration," the "Crucifixion," "Christ Before Pilate," the "Crown of Thorns," and many others, everyone reproduced from the canvasses of the "Old Masters." The lecture was very instructive as well as highly interesting, and received profound attention from all present.

The church was filled in every part, and although the calcium light by which the pictures were brought out met with something of a mishap which necessitated a change to one less brilliant, there was no stampede, as there usually is, but every one remained until the lecture was all finished and the benediction pronounced.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free.

The Boston Journal.

When one takes up the above paper to read the news of the day he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is getting "straight goods," that is, if he is at all acquainted with its character and reputation. He knows that the utmost care has been taken in gathering up and distributing that news and that it is as free from error as it is possible to have it. There is nothing sensational about THE JOURNAL. It is sober and honest; it means to be true to its readers; and it is always reliable. It enjoys a large circulation among the most intelligent classes throughout New England, and Republicans all the way from the Canada line to Long Island Sound, and from the Hudson River to Cape Cod, "swear by" THE JOURNAL every time. Please read the publisher's announcement for 1891 in another column.

A Big Temperance Meeting.

Mr. Griffin Place presided at the Fr. Scully temperance meeting at Lyceum Hall last Sunday afternoon, and such well known prominent citizens as Mayor Johnson, Rev. Hugh Montgomery, Rev. D. D. Winn, Col. H. B. Hayes, George W. Kimball, Abijah Thompson, Joseph DeLorier, Rufus Pickering, B. A. Tripp and others occupied seats on the platform. The gathering was a large one and Rev Mr. Montgomery was in his glory.

Fr. Scully of Cambridge was the speaker. He delivered a powerful argument in favor of prohibition and earnestly advised all Woburn people who love law and order to vote against Rum next Tuesday. He is a great temperance reformer, and his address was enthusiastically received.

A Notable Lecture.

John Baker, a native of Russian Poland, and a refugee from Russia, lectured before the Woburn Woman's Club on Friday evening, Nov. 21. The club postponed its usual hour of meeting until 7.30 P. M. that others beside the members interested in Russian subjects might have an opportunity of hearing Mr. Baker's recital of his experiences in a Russian Dungeon and his adventures when on a trip toward Siberia.

John Baker is a pseudonym assumed for political reasons and for the protection of his friends and kindred who remain in Russian Poland or who are in exile in Siberia. Mr. Baker gave a sketch of his youth and early manhood, his study and travel in Europe and other neighboring countries, his hasty and unexpected call home when only three months of his University course had been completed, his amazement in learning the cause of his recall to be the drafting of his father into the twenty-five years of military service which the Russian government exacts from her subjects. Subsequently, his father was killed for taking part in a Polish insurrection, and he, only a young man, was thrown into a dungeon—a Russian dungeon—where studied torture is lavishly administered, where darkness is visible, light and air coming only through a narrow transom over the door and where through a tiny hole in the centre of the door there continually peeps the eye of the Emperor in the shape of an armed soldier.

He was not allowed to die in prison for then the sentence would not be carried out; but, when nearly exhausted and almost insane, he was taken out and at once thrust into the light of day; he was left in a nude condition to be thoroughly chilled; then he was finally made to walk a long distance on his way toward the land of the Russian exiles.

He carries the mark of the knout on his back. In his presence his mother and sisters were given the forty lashes on the unprotected surface of their skin.

His mother did not reach Siberia, but she fell by the way and he with assistance escaped and finally early in the sixties came to America and served in the Civil War.

After twenty-five years of service in the Russian army, or when a soldier has lost all four limbs, he is pensioned, that is, he may beg in certain small towns in specified districts.

The system of church government, the creed of the Russian Greek church in which the Emperor or Czar is God, and the collection of taxes, and the practice of bribery, were explained.

Ninety-five per cent of the Russians can neither read nor write, including the clergy, forty-nine per cent of whom can not either read or write.

A synopsis of the lecture can only give a meagre outline of its thrilling details which were so forcibly given that one cringed at the recital, and one was stirred to one's innermost soul, and was thoroughly incensed against a government that persists in such brutal measures of enforcing obedience from its subjects.—G. M. B.

Money invested in projects connected with Electricity are surest of large profits, and among these is the manufacture of Copper wires. The copper from the ores of the Coxheath copper mine will be treated by the electrotype process for wire bars, this process also saves all the gold and silver. The Eastern Development Co., limited, which owns these mines and the Little River Coal mines, offer a $1,000 7 per cent Bond carrying 50 per cent of stock as a bonus, by a payment of $250 down, balance on time. Address the Company at 95 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

Sunday at 3 o'clock, Boys meeting and a talk on "Ropes" is to be given if arrangements can be made.

The 4 o'clock meeting will be held and the subject will be "No or Yes." Which? Every man invited to be present.

Last Monday evening the Singing Class was started. Those who desire to join must come in next Monday evening.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. Clark of No. Woburn for a class in elocution. Any who desire to form such a class will please meet in the parlor on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2.

Friday evening, Nov. 28, at 8.30 in the parlor the Directors will meet all the young men who desire to aid in a building and especially those whose names were attached to the petition.

Dec. 3. The "Wreck of the Hesperus." This entertainment is given in aid of the Association work by young people of our city and we desire a full house. Miss A. L. Curtis of Boston is a fine reader and will please all. To say that the Woburn Orchestra is to furnish music ensures success in that line, and Mr. Morse, the chalk artist, will keep all in good humor with his chemical sketches. Tickets 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats can be had at C. H. Buss's drug store, Main street or if purchased before check can be had then. To be held in Music Hall.

Littell's Living Age for 1891.

For nearly fifty years this standard weekly magazine has afforded to its readers the most convenient and satisfactory means of keeping abreast with the best literature of the times. With the constant growth of this literature, the importance of The Living Age has steadily increased. It is unrivalled in its field, and is invaluable to every one who in these busy times wishes to keep pace with the literary and scientific progress of the age. Its prospectus for 1891 is well worth attention in selecting one's reading matter for the new year. Reduced club-bing-rates with other periodicals are given, and to new subscribers remitting now for the year 1891 the intervening numbers are sent gratis. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

A strange case is reported from a town in Delaware where a whole family of colored people are turning white, owing to their persistent use of Brussels soap.

What Mayor Johnson Says.

The Citizens' movement in Woburn in favor of George F. Bean for Mayor is now thoroughly organized, and includes many voters of both parties who are unfavorable to William C. Kenney.

Mayor Johnson, in an interview to-day, spoke strongly in favor of Mr. Kenney's election, saying: "As President of the Board of Aldermen ever since the city was started, and elected to that position by both parties, Alderman Kenney has been a prominent and influential member of the administration. He has always been in full sympathy with it, and is entitled to a large share of credit for whatever success has attended it." The Mayor also denied emphatically that there has been at any time any deal or agreement with Mr. Kenney or his friends, and declared that Mr. Salmon and not Mr. Bean is the real opponent of Mr. Kenney. He felt confident that if the people of Woburn knew Mr. Kenney as well as his associates in the City Council knew him, men like Aldermen Ramsdell, Goddard, Place, Linscott, Eames, Thompson and Beggs, all of whom were going out of office, and could have no personal ambitions to gratify, and if they fully realized the necessity of having a man of experience at the head of affairs, he would be easily elected.—Boston Journal, Nov. 26.

All school children will be interested in learning how they may, by simply writing a composition, secure a chance of sharing in a $100 prize, to be given on Christmas Day. Send your address on a postal card to Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom, 615 Washington Street, Boston, and they will send you a circular telling you all about it. We know what their offer is, and trust that many of our readers will try for the prize.

Children's Literature.

WHAT "ST. NICHOLAS" HAS DONE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Victor Hugo calls this "the woman's century" and he might have added that it is the children's century as well, for never before in the world's history has so much thought been paid to children—their schools, their pictures, and their toys. Childhood, as we understand it, is a recent discovery.

Up to the time of the issue of the St. Nicholas Magazine seventeen years ago literature and children's magazines were almost contradictory terms, but the new periodical started out with the idea that nothing was too good for children; the result has been a juvenile magazine genuine with conscientious purpose,—the greatest writers contributing to it, with the best artists and engravers helping to beautify it,—and everything tuned to the key-note of youth.

It has been the special aim of St. Nicholas to supplant unhealthy literature with stories of a living and healthful interest. It will not do to take fascinating bad literature out of boys' hands, and give them in its place Mrs. Barbauld and Peter Parley, or the work of writers who think that any "good-y" talk will do for children, but they must have strong, interesting reading, with the blood and sinew of real life in it,—reading that will waken them to a closer observation of the best things about them.

In the seventeen years of its life St. Nicholas has not only elevated the children, but it has also elevated the tone of contemporary children's literature as well. Many of its stories, like Mrs. Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," have become classic. It is not too much to say that almost every notable young people's story now produced in America first seeks the light in the pages of that magazine.

The year 1891 will prove once more that "no household where there are children is complete without St. Nicholas." J. T. Trowbridge, Noah Brooks, Charles Dudley Warner, and many well known writers are to contribute during this coming year. One cannot put the spirit of St. Nicholas into a prospectus, but the publishers are glad to send a full announcement of the features for 1891 and a single sample copy to the address of any person mentioning this notice. The magazine costs $3 00 a year. Address The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

Absconding cashiers should always take a box of Brussels soap with them, as there's nothing in Canada that can equal it.

It is to be regretted that many mothers do not commence the use of Mellin's Food until their infants are ill. This food, it must be borne in mind, is not a medicine, and is not intended primarily for sick babies; it is the best artificial food for both healthy and feeble infants.

THE KING OF FRIEZE

— FOR —

Drivers, Conductors, Railroad-Men, Milk-Men and all whose business is out of doors and who wish a warm and strong ULSTER, we recommend and guarantee ours.

It is absolutely storm and wind proof, as will be seen by the following letter:—

To Whom it May Concern:

In February, 1889, the STANDARD CLOTHING COMPANY sent me a Dark Oxford Mix Freize Ulster, which they call their "King of Freize," with the request to give it the hardest possible wear during the balance of the winter.

Although there was no snow of any amount, it was a very wet season, and I wore the coat daily in my business, and found it exactly as they represented, impervious to water and snow. I have the ulster in use now, and confidently recommend it as the most desirable, strongest, warmest ulster that I have ever owned.

The price of the "King of Freize," $12, brings it within the reach of every hack driver, herdic driver, car driver, or any one whose business is out of doors, and who needs a coat that will shed water or snow.

RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

LESSON IX, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 30.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 1, 12. Commit Verses 6-9—Golden Text, I Cor. xv. 20—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulcher, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them." On Friday afternoon His body wrapped in linen, with about a hundred pound weight of spices which Nicodemus provided, was by him and Joseph of Arimathea laid in Joseph's new tomb, wherein was never man yet laid (John xix, 38-42). According to Matthew and Mark, some of the women of Galilee who followed Him, ministering unto Him, saw Him die as they stood afar off, or rather were standing afar off when He died, and also saw where Joseph and Nicodemus buried Him. Then they returned and prepared spices and ointments and rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment (xxiii, 56). These are they who come so early to the sepulcher. With sad and heavy hearts they come to add one more kindness to the many which they have already bestowed on Him whom they loved so well. He will no doubt give them full credit for all their loving kindness, but if they had only believed Him they would have been spared this labor and expense. We often mean well in our desire to serve Him, but like these women do much fruitless work because of unbelief.

2. "And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulcher." They said as they came, "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher?" (Mark xvi, 3.) But they find that difficulty removed ere they come to it.

3. "And they entered in and found not the body of the Lord Jesus." Putting the various accounts together, it would seem that Mary Magdalene was the first to find the sepulcher empty and the stone rolled away, and that she, too, was the first to tell Peter and John (John xx, 1, 2). Then it would seem that the other women came and saw an angel sitting upon the stone which had been rolled away, and also an angel sitting in the sepulcher, and that each told them to go and tell His disciples that He was risen (Matt. xxviii, 2, 7; Mark xvi, 5, 7). Mary Magdalene seems to have lingered after the others, so blinded by grief and tears that she either did not know that it was angels who spoke to her from the tomb, or did not care to know; neither did she know Jesus himself when He first spoke to her until He called her by name. So blinding is unbelieving grief.

4. "And it came to pass as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold two men stood by them in shining garments." These are probably the same two mentioned by Matthew and Mark. Jesus sent the seventy, two and two before Him (Luke x, 1); the Spirit sent forth Paul and Barnabas, then Paul and Silas, Barnabas and Mark (Acts xiii, 2; xv, 39, 40). In the beginning of the church's history, and also in Jesus' last days, we read of Peter and John as fellow laborers (Luke xxii, 8; Acts iii, 1; iv, 19). So also we often find the angels two together, as when two accompanied the Lord to visit Abram and two appeared at the ascension (Gen. xviii, 1, 2; Acts i, 10).

5. "And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living (margin, Him that liveth) among the dead?" See His own words to John long afterward: "I am the first, and the last, and the living one; I was dead and behold I am alive forevermore" (Rev. i, 17, 18, R. V.) We learn from this verse that unbelief causes fear and turns our faces earthward. The remedy is to look up and see Him who is alive forevermore, and who has the keys of hades and death; who has all power in heaven and on earth; who says, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee." There is a word here, too, for those who think too much of the spot where the mortal bodies of our loved ones are laid. Rather let us look up to where they are alive and well, if so be that they have died in Christ.

6. "He is not here, but is risen: remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee." It would not do for us to say of our dead in Christ that they are risen, for "risen" refers to the body, and the body remains in the grave till the resurrection of the righteous at the coming of Christ; but we may truly say as we look into the grave, "They are not here; they are with Christ."

7. "Saying, The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Many times had He said these very words just as plainly as these angels now said them (Matt. xvi, 21; xvii, 23; xx, 19; see also John ii, 19; Matt. xii, 40), but they had never believed them.

8. "And they remembered His words." That was the right thing to do. If they had remembered sooner they would have saved themselves much sorrow.

9. "And returned from the sepulcher, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest." Remembering His word makes us forget our sorrow, and turns us away from the dead to minister unto the living.

10. "It was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary, the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles." According to the word of the angels, "Go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead," "they departed with fear and great joy, and did run to bring His disciples word." It was then that Jesus met them and said, "Be not afraid; go tell my brethren" (Matt. xxviii, 7-10). The explanation of any seeming difficulty in the various accounts is that some of the evangelists summarize matters, while others give a certain item or items more in detail. There are no contradictions.

11. "And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not." Paul preached Jesus and the resurrection at Athens; some mocked, and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. When at Rome he preached the Gospel of the Kingdom, some believed and some believed not (Acts xvii, 32; xxviii, 23, 24). We are nowhere encouraged to hope that in this dispensation all who hear the Gospel will believe.

12. "Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulcher, and stooping down he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed wondering in himself at that which was come to pass." This is probably the same visit to the tomb recorded in John xx, 6, 7; or if not, then Peter went twice to the tomb—once with John, when Mary told them, and again alone, when he received a personal message by the other women. Some time on this day He appeared to Peter (vs. 34); perhaps it was on this probable second visit to the sepulcher.

The narrow escape of Mrs. B. M. Searles, of Elkhart, Ind., from a premature death is wonderful. She states that "for twenty years my heart troubled me greatly. I became worse. FEATURES OF HOTEL LIFE.

Guests Who Create Trouble Over Their Own Thoughtlessness.

"I tell you, my son, behind the counter of a hotel office is a good place to study human nature, and he must be very obtuse who stays there very long without gaining a vast amount of experience," said the clerk. "There are men and there are hogs, gentlemen and cads, in fact, all sorts and all conditions of humanity are to be met at a public hotel, and the clerk soon gets to know them all and estimates them accordingly. Of course I realize there is no particular credit in being honest, but at the same time I like to see honesty acknowledged. I remember an old gentleman lost a jackknife in his room once at the Sherman house, and the girl sent it down to the office. It was not worth ten cents, but the owner was so pleased with the girl's scrupulous regard of property rights that he gave me $1 to send up to her.

"About a week later this same girl sent down a fat pocketbook, which she had found on the floor of No. 46. At the first opportunity I opened it for examination, and found it contained nearly $5,000 in bills, bonds and certificates of deposit. Two hours later in came the owner, a man of about 55, with gray hair and beard. He asked for his key in an excited manner, and without another word rushed for the elevator. Pretty soon he returned white as a sheet. 'Oh, sir,' he sighed, 'I've lost my pocketbook, and with it all I have in the world.'

"'Where did you lose it?' I asked.

"'I don't know; I can't tell; I thought it was in my room, but I have hunted all through it unsuccessfully.'

"'Is your room made up?' I inquired.

"'No; that is, the bed is not, but the sheets have been taken out, I notice.'

"Then I asked him to describe the pocketbook and its contents, which he did very accurately, and as he finished I pulled out the lost article and laid it before him. I wish you could have seen his face change color; it was a revelation. He laughed and cried by turns, and then asked the girl's name, so that he might reward her substantially for her honesty. Well, the old fellow stayed a week longer, but after receiving his bill one night he disappeared, and not only never remembered the chambermaid, but even forgot to settle his board bill. It is base acts like this that occasionally make one lose all faith in human nature.

"Lots of men will come down stairs, eat breakfast and go about their business and then return in half an hour or so in a great hurry, saying they left their money or gold watch under the pillow, and anxiously inquire if the money or bills have been found. To the credit of the chambermaids I am glad to say that rarely have I found them dishonest, and anything left in the rooms under their care is as safe as if in the office vault. And yet how often are they accused falsely!"

"I shall always remember how I roasted a man once at the Sherman house," resumed Charlie Hilton, when George paused for breath. "I was on the afternoon watch when I saw the check boy approaching the desk hanging on to an overcoat at which a guest of the hotel was tugging viciously. Both man and boy were excited and each tried to speak at once.

"'This coat belongs to me, and I insist upon taking it,' asserted the man, making another desperate struggle at the desired article.

"'Why don't you show up your check then?' sung out the lad in the same breath.

"'You didn't give me a check.'

"'I did if you left your coat.'

"'You did not. I laid my coat on the counter and you forgot to give me a check. This is my coat and I am going to have it.'

"By this time a crowd had collected, and after the man had ceased I ordered the youth to release the garment and let the claimant try it on. With a sneer of triumph he grabbed the article and crawled inside, when he found to his intense astonishment it was at least four times too large, and plainly belonged to some one else.

"Among the spectators of this comedy was an old fellow who had been writing letters all the forenoon, and when the row began he slipped away, returning just as the guest was trying to sneak off amid the jeers of the crowd.

"'Hi, there! See here,' said the old gentleman, holding up a brown overcoat. 'I guess this is yours. I found it on the armchair where you threw it this morning when you came in to write some letters.'

"The man snatched the coat and was breaking away when I called to him and gave him the worst tongue lashing he had ever received. I was pretty mad, and I let loose for all I was worth. Everybody enjoyed it except the victim, for all knew he richly deserved the scoring. He finally escaped, and only returned that night to pay his bill. He left without having had the grace to apologize to the boy for the many gratuitous insults he had inflicted."—Chicago Herald.

The Invention of the Wheelbarrow.

The invention of the wheelbarrow has been credited commonly to Pascal, a French philosopher and writer of about the middle of the Seventeenth century. According to Littre's dictionary of the French language, however, the wheelbarrow was invented by a Mr. Dupin in 1669. One or the other of these two accounts has been accepted generally—in France at least, where every useful invention is believed to be of French origin.—Exchange.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. H. L. Flanders & Co., Druggists.

If Your House is on Fire

You put water on the burning timbers, not on the smoke. And if you have catarrh you should attack the disease in the blood, not in your nose. Remove the impure cause, and the local effect subsides. To do this, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, which radically and permanently cures catarrh. It also strengthens the nerves. Be sure to get only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

AMONG ENGLAND'S WARSHIPS.

How Uncle Sam's Cruisers Looked Among the British Ironclads.

Almost like yachts they look compared with some of their huge neighbors, for some of Great Britain's strongest and most terrible sea monsters are gathered in the harbor, lying on the waters as if in slumber, quiet and tranquil enough now, but ready to awaken at their mistress' bidding, and to vomit forth death and devastation from their steel clad sides.

Close to our ship is the Anson; on the other side the huge Benbow, with massive black hull and white, fortress like superstructure, points the muzzles of her enormous guns over the tops of the turret like barbettes on her decks, fore and aft, while from the ports in her sides the cannons of her batteries peer menacingly outward. A fringe of davits, from which here and there a boat is hanging, runs on both sides of her upper deck, and her tall military mast, the tops bristling with machine guns, tapers aloft amidships.

The Anson flies the flag of the rear admiral; on her quarterdeck scarlet coated, white helmeted marines are drawn up and the band is playing; alongside of her some boats are lying. Farther out in the bay the Iron Duke has shaken out her topsails, and the canvas droops from the long yards in graceful folds, while from her bows to aft of her mainmast the white clothing of her crew, hanging there to dry, flutters from the clotheslines.

Over by the long stone wall of the New Mole the Northumberland and the Colossus, the vice admiral's ship, and a number of smaller vessels—dispatch boats and yachts—are moored, while back among the colliers the Monarch's white ensign marks the presence of a man-of-war in their midst. In the offing another naval monster, the Camperdown, is steaming slowly out to sea.

The harbor is alive with row boats and launches of all kinds. Yonder, glancing like a fish half emerging from the water, comes a small, queerly shaped craft. Circling with astonishing rapidity around our ship for a moment it darts off suddenly, and, with a swish and quick splash, something drops from its side. A moment later a dull report, a flash of fire and a little puff of blue smoke curling over the water some distance beyond us, where a little red flag waves from a sort of buoy floating there, shows us that the torpedo that we have just seen launched has reached its mark.—R. F. Zogbaum in Scribner's.

A Scolding Husband Cured.

A woman whom her husband used frequently to scold went to a cunning man to inquire how she might cure him of his barbarity. The sagacious soothsayer heard her complaint, and after pronouncing some hard words and using various gesticulations, while he filled a phial with colored liquid, desired her whenever her husband was in a passion to take a mouthful of the liquor and keep it in her mouth for five minutes.

The woman, quite overjoyed at so simple a remedy, strictly followed the counsel which was given her, and by her silence escaped the usual annoyance. The contents of the bottle being at last expended, she returned to the cunning man and anxiously begged to have another possessed of the same virtue.

"Daughter," said the man, "there was nothing in the bottle but brown sugar and water. When your husband is in a passion hold your tongue and, my life on it, he will not scold you in future."—New York Ledger.

Where Laces Are Made.

The English thread laces are made in the south of England, but the workers are rapidly dying out and the younger people are taking to employments more profitable. The amount of thread lace brought into the market, therefore, grows smaller from year to year.

The Venetian laces, which at one time did really come from Venice, are now largely manufactured in Brussels, whence they are sold to the merchants of Venice, and resold again by them as Venetian lace.

In general lace workers are receiving so little compensation that new comers into the art—for art it is—are rare. To counteract this decline the lace manufacturers of Belgium have found it necessary to establish schools in that country for the education of the young in the coarse as well as the finer grades of lace making.—New York Evening Sun.

Facts About Lightning Strokes.

A statistical investigation of lightning strokes in central Germany, covering a period of twenty-six years, has been recently carried out by Herr Kastner. The number of cases has increased about 129 per cent.; in 1889 it amounted to 1,145. The author distinguishes four thunderstorm paths. The starting points of all these are in hills, and in their course the woodless districts and flat country, river valleys and low meadow ground about lakes seem specially liable, while the wooded and hilly parts generally escape. The hottest months (June and especially July) and the hottest hours of the day, or those immediately following them (3 to 4 p. m.), show the most lightning strokes.—Chicago Herald.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

WHY OIL CALMS THE SEA.

It Smoothes Out the Ripples so the Wind Can't Get a Grip on the Water.

The action of oil in calming the sea is now so generally recognized that the new rules as to life saving appliances require that every boat of sea going vessels and all life boats shall carry "one gallon of oil and a vessel of approved pattern for distributing it on the water in rough weather." The potency of oil in smoothing waves was recently explained by Lord Rayleigh before the Royal institution in a lucid lecture.

The well known scientist's experiments demonstrate that foam or froth is caused by impurities in liquids. Thus, on shaking up a bottle containing pure water, we get no appreciable foam, but taking a mixture of water with 5 per cent. of alcohol there is a much greater tendency to foam. Camphor, glue and gelatine, dissolved in water, greatly increase its foaming qualities, and soap still more.

Lord Rayleigh finds that sea water foams, not on account of its saline matter, but in consequence of the presence of something extracted by wave action from seaweeds. By simply putting his finger into water which was moving vigorously under the influence of a few camphor scrapings the contamination of the water by the infinitesimal amount of grease sufficed to form an invisible film over it and to neutralize the foaming action produced by the dissolved camphor.

The effect of oil on waves, as several physicists have proved, is not to subdue the huge swell, but to smooth and tone down its ripples, each of which gives the wind a point d'appui, thus increasing the force of the breaking waves. "The film of oil," says Lord Rayleigh, "may be compared to an inextensible membrane floating on the surface of the water and hampering its motion."

As long as the advancing tumultuous sea water is pure there is nothing to oppose its periodic contractions and extensions, but when its surface is covered with the oily membrane the most dangerous contractions and extensions are impossible.

The scientific demonstration of the sea quelling virtue of oil is worthy of note by all sailors. It is fortunate for them that Lord Rayleigh has accomplished this at a time when ocean storms, and especially tropical hurricanes, are likely to tax the seaman's art to the utmost in saving his craft from destruction.—London Nautical Magazine.

Cincinnati School House Expenses.

The teachers' salaries alone for the school year ending Aug. 31, 1889, were $613,697. Janitors, of which there are sixty, cost the city about $30,000, or $500 each. The amount spent in repairs for the different school houses was $21,946. The cost of new buildings was $219,274, the Warner street house alone costing $71,238 without the lot. The lot cost $15,300. New furniture to the amount of $8,625 was bought, but this does not include the Warner street supplies.

For fuel $22,653 went a-glimmering. It required about 5,000 tons of coal and several thousand dollars worth of kindling. Two thousand six hundred and seventy-three dollars was paid out for rent to accommodate some of the "colonies." Heating fixtures were put in costing the city $10,291. The schools are all provided with gas, and often in dark days it is necessary to burn it the whole of the school hours. The gas cost $493.50 that year. Four lots were bought for the sum of $32,675, including the last Warner street lot. This makes a grand total of $947,027.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

An African Ruler.

Barthoen, paramount chief of the Banwaketze nation, is a model African sovereign. He is lord of 17,000 square miles of some of the finest country in South Africa, rich in gold, silver, copper, iron, asbestos, and capable of sustaining countless heads of cattle. This country lies to the north of the colony of Beehuanaland, with the Boers for neighbors on the east and the chiefs Khama and Lo Bengula on the north.

Since Barthoen came to the throne he has effected a moral revolution in his country. He has encouraged agriculture, induced thousands of his people to embrace Christianity and has strictly prohibited the liquor traffic in his dominions.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Caterpillars Cleaned Out.

Take a suitable pole, say ten feet long, and attach to the end a coarse woolen cloth by winding it with strong twine, so that it will not slip either way. Take from one to three quarts of wood ashes, pour on hot water, and thus get a strong lye. Take an old pail, turn in the lye, adding one pint or more of soft soap, and stir well. It is then ready for use, and I will warrant this lye and soap to deal the death blow instantly to all caterpillars by thrusting the saturated swab straight into the nests. Put the pole and swab in a secure place for future use.—Country Gentleman.

Millions in It.

Ames, of long handled shovel fame, did not invent the implement. A boy who was digging out a woodchuck broke the handle of his shovel, and fitted in a temporary one of double the length. Ames happened to pass by, and noticing how much easier the shovel was handled he caught on and started a factory. The boy got a dollar hat and the woodchuck out of it.—Detroit Free Press.

The ghost at the White House is said to walk half of every night, but he could do double that amount of work, if he wasn't afraid of the morning air, and knew that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cured all kinds of troublesome coughs and colds.

She stood at the gate in the late Spring twilight, and when she said good-bye, she felt neuralgia kiss her rosy cheek; but she only smiled, for she had Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain.

The first velocipede was invented by Mr. Philipp Trexler in Gratz, in Germany, in 1784. A long article in a newspaper of that time describes the invention, and names the sum of twenty ducats as given for the first machine.

The Greatest Sufferers in The World

Are women; their delicat corganizations being particularly susceptible to derangement and disease. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., purifies the blood, invigorates the system and fortifies it against the diseases incident to age, climate season. It is the best medicine in the world. Keep it in the house for your children's sake, as well as for your own.

In South America a human figure is seen in the moon.

Advertising by Sample.

On one of the hottest of July days there drove up to the hotel, where half a dozen breathless guests were vainly endeavoring to keep cool, a buggy in which sat a long haired, elderly man and a gayly dressed but rather vulgar looking young woman. The buggy stopped, and the man, after greeting the company in an engaging and affable manner, threw toward them a handful of dingy printed slips.

One of the more enterprising of the boarders picked up the slip which fluttered near his foot, and discovered that Professor Diamond and his celebrated family would give a concert and entertainment in the town hall of the village on the following evening.

"I am Professor Diamond," the elderly man announced, as soon as he was satisfied that the reader had discovered what the circulars were about. "This is my oldest daughter, Maria. Now, Maria."

With the word he produced from under the seat a wheezy accordion, and began to play "Pull for the Shore." In the most absolutely indifferent manner, but with the voice of a calliope, the young woman began also to sing, and went through two or three stanzas without stopping for breath.

"We generally give folks a sample," the professor explained, as she concluded. "Now, how many of you will take tickets? My other daughter is a sight likelier singer than this one is. Tickets are only fifty cents with reserved seats."

And out of sheer amusement the boarders all bought tickets to the concert thus advertised by sample.—Youth's Companion.

The Most Common Misquotation.

"What is the most common misquotation in the English language?" asked the inquisitive member of the Cogburn club as the purist entered. The answer came promptly:

"When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war."

"Well, what is the matter with that?" asked the inquisitive member.

"That is the most common misquotation in the English language," responded the purist. "I heard the late Roscoe Conkling say once that he won a basket of wine from Clement L. Vallandigham on that quotation. He wagered that Mr. Vallindigham could not tell what the correct words were, nor who wrote them, nor when they were written. And he won on every point. Now put yourself in Mr. Vallandigham's place. What would you have done?"

"I should have declined to make the bet," said the inquisitive member.

"And I," "and I," came from all parts of the room.

"But I should not," said the purist. "'When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war' is the correct quotation. It was written by Nathaniel Lee, an Englishman, about the year 1700."

"Did you ever see it quoted correctly?" asked the inquisitive member.

"Never in the newspapers," said the purist.—Utica Observer.

On a Railway Train.

"What a fine color that man has on his neck," whispered a gentleman to his companion as they sat together in one of the incoming trains. "Yes," answered his companion, admiringly gazing on the bronzed neck just in front of them. "I suppose he's been off somewhere with the rod and reel having a fine time."

The neck in front of them turned slowly and twisted slightly around with great difficulty, and a voice which left no doubt as to the neck it came from said: "No, I ain't been off with my rod and reel, but if yer so doosid curious I've been off with a bottle of iodine and a tough earache." And the iodine stained neck turned slowly and stiffly back, leaving the two gentlemen to the study of its bronzed mahogany and to the consideration of the ease with which people hear remarks carefully intended not to reach their ears.—New York Times.

Cats as Humorists.

I am obliged to send you an anecdote of my cat, a long haired black Persian. Living in the suburbs, we are infested by cats of all kinds, and are perpetually driving them away, aided by the said long haired favorite, who pursues them off the premises, with hair and tail standing wildly erect and presenting a most alarming appearance. We feel that this violent demonstration must be a joke, as the same cat constantly carries the remains of her own dinner about twenty-five yards, across an open space and up some steps, to feed the identical animals she has driven off an hour or two previously.—Cor. London Spectator.

A Poser.

Travers—Say, old man, great scheme! Am going to London. You order what clothes you want. Same height, same breadth. I buy them. Bring 'em back. Good fit. Cheap. Eh?

Dashaway—Splendid. I'll make out my order at once. When you get back I'll pay you.

Travers—You will, eh? Well, I'd like to know how in thunder you expect me to get over there.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Since 1857 England's small wars have cost her about $110,000,000. The war with China in 1857-62 cost her $30,000,000; the Abyssinian expedition in 1867-70, $41,500,000; the South African war in 1879-80, $14,000,000; the Nile expedition in 1884-85, $6,250,000; the Afghan war, between 1880 and 1886, $15,000,000.

Nothing in the Wide World so Good.

I was afflicted with Kidney disease. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y.—I saw it with a perfect recollection of all that was done for me besides—is the only thing that gave me permanent relief. I have recommended it to many people for Kidney disease and they all agree that it has not its equal for this complaint—Lyman Crawford, Druggist. Springfield, Mass.

The Scandinavians believe the moon once carried off two children, as they came from the water bearing a jar, and they can still be seen with it in the orb.

On the ancient monument in Central America the moon appears as a jar or a shelt whence a rabbit shaped animal is springing.

India has now about 700,000 native Christians in a population of 260,000,000.

THE BOSTON JOURNAL. For 1890.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR, POSTAGE INCLUDED.

No weekly paper issued in New England meets the expectations of a wider circle of readers than the Boston Weekly Journal. It covers so wide a field that all who do not seek after sensational literature and highly colored reports of the worst features of life may open its pages, and find in its thirty-six long columns something to interest and amuse. The topics of the day, political, religious, and of a business nature, are prominently discussed. It is the aim of the editors that the Journal shall be educational as well as entertaining. In this respect the Journal may claim a just preeminence among the weekly newspapers of New England, for it not only proposes to talk about things, but to express opinions which will make doubtful questions clear and open the way for a clearer understanding of the disputed topics of the day.

The Boston Weekly Journal has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers and intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views These qualities, upon which any newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper which no man in any degree removed from the great centres of information can afford to do without.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well-conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

The Weekly Journal aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

The Boston Weekly Journal, only one dollar per annum, postage included, is not a hastily put together weekly, but is carefully edited, containing all the news in the world. Those who cannot find time to read the daily will find in this paper all the news of the week, market reports, etc., etc.

Club rates.—The inducements to those getting up clubs will continue to be of a very favorable character; ten copies (and one extra to the originator of the club), $10; twenty copies (and two extra to the originator of the club) $20. One copy free for every ten subscribers. Boston Morning Journal, 36 long columns, $6 per annum; Boston Evening Journal, 36 long columns, $6 per annum, postage included. Proportional rates for any length of time. All remittances should be by Post Office order, registered letter, or bank check.

No one can complain at the price of Old Saul's Catarrh Cure, it is within the reach of all. Sold everywhere at 25 cents.

Parents cannot always carry the baby on a trip, for the recovery of its health. But they can keep Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup in the house, and it will compensate for the trip by its prompt relief.

Sponge Culture.

Sponge would seem to be an unpromising material for a sculptor to work upon, but that a work of art may be chiseled, or rather scissored, from it is proved by a life size statue in sponge now in the sponge department of McKesson & Robbins, wholesale druggists, of New York city. The statue represents a Greek sponge gatherer standing in the bow of a boat, pole in hand, gazing intently through a water telescope at a piece of sponge which he is supposed to be endeavoring to secure. The figure is composed of numerous pieces of what is known as leathery potter's sponge, carefully matched as to color, texture and shape, so that the statue appears to be cut from one large piece of sponge. The artist has done his work well, the face especially being an excellent piece of carving.—Science.

THE QUAKER ARTIST.

I tell thee now, Richard, that thee'll never get a cent of my money if thee keeps on with this devil's work."

The speaker was Friend Joseph Harris, and he held at arms length a small picture in water colors, the features of which were hardly discernible in the gloom of the winter morning. Friend Joseph had been at the barn, as was his custom fo fodder the cattle and feed the horses before breakfast, and had discovered this humble bit of art in the granary. He did not have to be told that it was his son Richards' work, whose inclination to such ungodly pursuits had been the distress of his parents' lives.

Full of suppressed wrath Joseph burst into the kitchen where the family were waiting breakfast and without preface addressed his son with the threat which he considered the most dreadful he could use—that of disinheritance. It meant something, too, for in spite of his plain surroundings, Joseph Harris owned nearly two hundred acres of land, worth easily a hundred and fifty dollars an acre, and his visits at the first of April of each year were not to pay interest but to receive it. A tall, straight figure, he was nearing sixty years of age, but as vigorous as a youth, with quick motions and sharp black eyes, indicating a violent nature chained for life by the strict discipline of the Society of Friends.

His son Richard, now turned of twenty-two, was of a different mould, short and stoutly built. His face at first seemed heavy and vacant, but this was, in fact, the abstraction of the dreamer. His soft brown eyes and hair clustering in thick curls over his low but broad forehead, made amends for his somewhat common-place features.

The moment his father entered the kitchen, Richard felt that his secret labor had been discovered, but his anxiety was more for it than for himself. He rarely dared face his father's anger, for Joseph Harris, like many of his sex, made up in severity at home for the smooth and passionless exterior he maintained abroad.

"Will thee give it to me, father?" said Richard, advancing toward the outstretched hand which held the sketch while the hand's owner contemplated it with unspeakabble disgust.

Poor little painting! It was a fragment of an autumn afternoon, during which Richard had been husking corn in "the hill field" and which had abided in his memory, clothed with the halo of a hundred day dreams. There was a corner of a wood, the foliage half green, half shading into tints of brown and red. A rivulet leaving a piece of meadow still gay with autumn flowers and green with wet grass, flowed rippling and sparkling out of the sunlight into the shade of the dying leaves. What courage and hope it must have! Richard followed in thought its waters as they flowed on to Chester creek and then to the stately Delaware river, and far out till they met the mighty ocean which washes the shores of all the world.

And as he mechanically plunged his husking knife into the husks and turned out the golden ears one after the other, he humbly took his lesson to himself, as was his wont, and said: "I, too, must have more courage, firmer hope. Why should I not go forward in my study of art with greater faith? I must, I will." And to fasten the vow he had painted two studies of this little piece of meadow as a constant reminder, snatching the time at First days and Fifth days when his father and mother were at a meeting, and he and Moses Riddle, the colored man, were left to look after the stock. One copy he had sent on a venture to a commission house in New York, the other he had hidden in the barn.

It had acquired a kind of sanctity to him, and each tree had become a symbol of some rebuff or danger he was fated to encounter in his future life. He had, moreover, described it to Sibbilla Vernon and had promised this sole confidante of his aspirations that he would bring it over some time and let her see it. But Sibbilla lived two miles away, and as her parents were also strict members of meeting, who regarded every work of art as profanity this would have to be managed with due caution.

Richard's first impulse, therefore, was to secure the picture. But his father had a double cause of displeasure and his anger was deep. He had agreed to give Richard a fourth share in the profits of the farm, this year, and not only was this painting business an ungodly amusement, but also a waste of precious time and a loss of money. It must be stopped.

"I'll put it where it deserves to go, and where thee will follow unless thee turns thy steps from the world and its follies. But the fire thou wilt meet will be that which is not quenched, and where the worm dieth not."

With these words, which Friend Harris spoke slowly and with that slight chanting intonation which characterizes the utterances of the speakers in meeting, the solemnity of which was farther increased by the use of the formal "thou" instead of the usual "thee," he stepped to the kitchen fireplace, where a goodly fire was burning under the crane, and striking the picture against the corner of the mantlepiece, tore a rugged split through the centre and threw the whole into the flames. In a moment it was a shivering cinder.

There are certain natures whose inherent strength can only be developed by a violent shock. Full of latent power, their weakness comes from a native humility. They distrust themselves, through a genuine admiration of others. Such was Richard Harris. But the necessary shock had come. He gazed a moment at the cinder, his face crimsoned, but the severe discipline of the society and the family exercised the sway that it usually does, even on the very young, among Friends.

"Father," he said, in a low, even tone, "I repeat what I have often told thee. I have no light that there is evil in painting; but as thee thinks there is, I shall bid thee and mother farewell, to-day, and seek employment elsewhere. I shall not ask thee for any share in thy estate."

Taking his hat from the window-sill he passed out of the kitchen door, leaving his father speechless with amazement at this rebellious utterance, and his mother—a poor weak woman, constantly in misery between carrying out the severe rule of her husband, whom she feared, and yielding to her tenderness for her boy, whom she loved—wiping her tears without emitting any sound, either word or sob. As for his two sisters, they sat demure and motionless through the whole scene, at heart rather pleased at it, as they had no sympathy with their brother's taste for forbidden arts, and thought him a queer, uncomfortable member of the the household. Moreover, though younger than he, they were not too young to see at once the pecuniary advantage to them of his renunciation of his share of the estate.

Richard went toward the barn and took a seat in a nook of the corn-fodder stack that was built along the side of the barnyard. He did not feel the cold, the raw air of the early morning. His mind was too full of the step he was about to take, and what had led up to it. Now or never he must quit the farm, renounce the teachings of the society, throw aside the coat with standing collar and the quaint broad-brimmed black hat, give up the plain language, reject the counsels of the venerable fathers of the meeting, who would surely be appointed to visit him, and prove a recreant to the revered precepts of Fox and Barclay. All this was meant by a pursuit of his strong bias for art.

Why was he born with it? This question he often asked himself. For six generations his ancestors had never touched a brush or palette; not a painting or a statue, nor a musical instrument, nor any drama or work of fiction had been allowed in their houses. How had he been created with a passion for color and form, with a love of poesy and music, which neither the dreary farm work nor the colorless life, nor all the frigid, deadening discipline of the society could quench?

Go back to his earliest memory, he could recall that, when four years old, he was left for a few hours at the house of Mike Wallis, an Irish tenant on a neighboring farm, and that Mike's wife kept him in the utmost bliss by showing a colored print of "The Virgin and the Infant," and telling him the pathetic history, as it had pictured itself in her warm Irish heart. But what was the horror of his parents, next day, when he toddled into the room when they were at dinner, and called:

"Mudder, mudder, come see God."

His parents ran to the door to see what this strange appeal meant, and lo! there on the floor of the front porch, chalked in rude, but faithful outlines, were the Child, with rays of glory around his head, and the mother by his side holding a cross. He could still recall the scowl that came over his father's face, and his mother's impetuous rush for a bucket of water and scrubbing brush. Nor had he forgotten the violent shake and immediate spanking he himself received for his artistic endeavor.

His memory kept till he was a boy of ten, and to his intense delight at effecting a trade of a Barlow knife for a box of paints. Many an hour of joy had they given him, hiding himself in the garret of the old house, in the back part of the hay mow near the dusty gable window, or in a little hut he had built in the woods. But his prying little sister betrayed him one day, and not only was his treasure confiscated, but he himself was tied to the bed post by his mother and given such a whipping as would have discouraged most youthful artists.

Later in life, when he was too old for such vigorous measures, many lectures had he received on the frivolity of such tastes, and the wickedness of ministering to them.

These scenes passing through his memory convinced him that it was vain to battle with such inflexible rules, and that to be free he must leave the farm and all its associations.

There was but one which had really held him. That was Sibbella Vernon. The daughter of rigid parents, her mother even a "public friend," whose voice at mouthly and quarterly meetings was familiar to all members of the society, Sibbilla was not an unusual type of the advanced thought of her sex. Calm, self-possessed, clear-headed, she had announced when but fifteen to her family that her own conscience was her guide, and that in all essential matters she should follow it.

From childhood she and Richard Harris had delighted to play and talk together; and though no word of love, no kiss and no caress had ever passed between them, both their families and themselves considered their union merely a matter of time and money. Nor did this absence of the usual passage of love seem to any one concerned a strange circumstance. They were accustomed to the repression of all outward show of feeling. In neither household had the children ever seen a kiss exchanged among its members, young or old.

Though devoid of any passion for art herself Sibbilla understood and respected the forbidden tastes of her lover. She looked upon his peculiar abilities as gifts of God for use in life, and she quietly but firmly put aside the traditions of her sect, which condemn them indiscriminately.

"Wilt thou presume to deny the many testimonies of Friends, both in England and America, against these sinful arts?" her mother would ask; being a "public friend" of considerable local fame, she never employed the incorrect nominative "thee" even in public life.

"Mother," replied the daughter, "they spoke for their day. I must act in mine by the light I have, not by theirs."

Her mother wisely avoided argument, trusting that the spirit would enlighten her daughter in time.

Leaving the fodder-stack, Richard walked across the bare fields toward the plain brick house which was Sibbilla's home. His mind was made up. He would go to New York and devote himself to the study of art. He had saved since his majority about three hundred dollars. He had youth, strength, talent, love—was not that enough? Would she make the serious sacrifice it involved?

As he approached the house it was about ten o'clock, and all the males were out at work. He knocked at the front door, instead of the side door as usual, and Sibbilla herself opened it and gazed at him with considerable surprise in her hazel eyes, quickly changing to an expression of pleasure, which Richard did not fail to note, and which filled him with both joy and anxiety.

"Why, Richard, what brings thee here at this hour?" was her exclamation.

"Sibbilla," he said, "I wish to see thee," and, stepping in, he closed the door, and they both stood in the wide hall, obscurely lighted by the transoms at each end. He paused a moment to recover his control, and then spoke in a low, vibrating tone: "I am going to leave the farm in order to study art.

I shall have to give up my membership in the society as thee knows. Father says he will leave me nothing if I do, and I know my mother agrees with him. But I am not afraid. All I ask is that thee approve of my decision and will become my wife as soon as I am able to offer thee a home."

At the supreme moment of resolve at the strength which for generations had been nurtured by the noble theories of self-reliance, all the passion which for generations had been muffled and smothered under the narrow Quaker system of formality and repression, burst forth and were expressed in the face of Sibbilla Veanon. She seemed to rise in stature, and laying one hand on his arm and passing the other around his neck, she said:

"Richard, I will come with thee then, or I will go with thee now."

The tone was low and the words without haste, but he who heard it felt in his inmost soul that no oath could be stronger.

"Thank God and thee," he uttered, and for the first time in their lives each felt the magic meaning of a kiss and love.

Seated on the wooden "settee," which is the common furniture of the country hall, he told her his father's words and action and his own unalterable determination to seek his future in art. It was agreed that they should be married by a magistrate as soon as Richard should have an income of $700 a year.

Full of quiet joy he went home, announced his intended marriage and immediate departure, and told Mose to have the dearborn ready at 6 o'clock in the evening to take him to the railway station. After the 5 o'clock supper the members of the family maintained almost entire silence, his mother quietly crying, and his father reading the "Book of Discipline," his favorite literature.

The dearborn drove up with Mose, who had been to the station with the milk, and stopping at the country store, which was also the post office, had brought a letter for Richard. It was rather unusual for any member of the household to receive a letter and therefore Mose announced it with considerable emphasis, addressing his master by his first name, as is the custom in strict families:

"Joseph, hy'ur's a letter for Richard. Hiram sez it's a letter from York, and 'pears as if mout be on bizness."

Joseph took the letter, and resisting a strong inclination to open it, passed it to his son. It was from the firm in New York to whom he had sent the copy of his picture, and it read:

NEW YORK, January 18,——.

Dear Sir: We have the gratification of informing you that the study you sent us on sale has attracted the attention of one of our patrons, to whom we have parted with for $500. Deducting comm., stor'ge, insur'ce, deliv'y, etc., as per enclosed sta'ement, leaves a net bal. of $327.62, for which find our c'k herewith.

You mention a duplicate of the study yet in your possession. We will take that at the same figure, cash on delivery, and will give you an order for five more studies to be completed within a year.

Respectfully,
SMILES, WILES & CO.

As he read this letter the check fell from his hand on the table. The sight of the colored and stamped paper was too much for his father. Glancing at the large amount, as much as he received for the best wheat crop his farm could raise, he snatched the letter from his son's hand and eagerly read it. Richard stood by in silence.

"What does he mean by the duplicate study?" said his father in an uncertain voice.

"He means," said Richaid quietly, "the picture which you threw in the fire this morning."

A new light dawned on his father's mind. So long as his son's taste seemed nothing but a time-and-money wasting form of idleness it had no redeeming features; but the incredible fact that there are people willing to pay hundreds of dollars apiece for such vain images now stood right before him. He was too shrewd to misunderstand it and its results.

"Richard," he said, with a softened voice, "I desire that thee would postpone leaving us for a few days. Thy mother and I will accompany thee to the city and will be present at the ceremony. I think Sibbilla's parents will also not refuse to attend."

As he went he said to Mose, who was waiting with the dearborn:

"Mose, thee should always be slow to anger, and avoid the committal of rash actions when out of temper.—Our Continent.

A Twenty-Second Talk.

"ALUM" baking powders are cheap and dear—cheap, because they are made for about four cents a pound and sold for about twenty; dear, because they do less than half as much as a strictly pure cream of tartar powder, and doubly dear, for their continued use injures the health. There is no alum, no ammonia, no adulteration of any kind, in Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder.

Threads of Thought.

Our memories are the echoes of joys and griefs forever gone.

The most real and the truest joy we have in life is in making others glad.

About the most difficult effort we can make is to try to realize our own ideals.

The flower that first opens to the sunshine will keenest suffer from the frost.

To give praise sincerely is only a just recognition of true worth.

He who is sensible may also have a good share of sensibility and sensitiveness.

That is a brave soul, indeed, that has the power to turn his "double-pain to double-praise."

It would seem preferable to wear out, rather than to be saved from rust by a put-on polish.

Character does not usually sustain sudden changes; age is generally the development of youth.

It is not always what we have accomplished, but quite as often what we had hoped to do, that has afforded us the most satisfaction.

Happy Hoosiers.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town says; Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c, a bottle, at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store.

Having His Own Way.

"Why did you run away from home?" asks Joshua Whitcomb of the ragged young tramp.

"Because I wanted to have my own way."

"Well you look as though you'd had it," is Whitcomb's sententious reply.

The boy who is eager to have his own way is continually met with, and many times it is an extremely hard way. The tyranny of home is of the mildest sort, he finds, compared with what he has to undergo in endeavoring to have his own way. Many times he falls in to evil company, and in imitating their way and making it his own he discovers himself on the way to a reformatory or prison.

Ask the wretched old tramp whom you find sitting on the park bench how he began his downward career, and if he be candid he will tell you it was by trying to have his own way.—Texas Siftings.

Thousands Poisoned.

In a recent work on Heart Disease, Dr. Franklin Miles—the noted specialist—gives many new and startling facts. Thousands of people are slowly poisoning themselves, weakening their hearts by the use of tea, coffee, tobacco and alcohol. These are Heart Whips, causing it to beat rapidly, thus gradually wearing it out, producing shortness of breath when exercising, pains in side and shoulder, hungry and faint spells. Finally heart failure and sudden death. For weakened and irritated hearts the press everywhere highly recommend the New Heart Cure discovered by Dr. Franklin Miles, which is for sale by Charles H. Buss.

A fine sleeping car costs about $13,000.

The Ruthlessness of Women.

The judgments which man passes upon his fellows are tolerant where woman's are narrow, because instead of the one aspect of the question which she perceives, he sees many; they are merciful where hers are cruel, because he recognizes more fully the stress of temptation and the complexity of motive which leads to transgression. There have been a few women who have helped their weaker sisters to rise when they had fallen, but they are indeed few. The majority of women have done what they could to keep those who are down still in that position. They have refused to believe in the possibility of reform; they have withdrawn from all contact with those who have once found temptation greater than they could bear; they have, by their inflexible attitude, made a return to virtue nearly impossible on the part of those who have once turned from it. Who should be tenderer toward a woman's sins than a virtuous woman, and who is harder? O you queens, who have with your virtuous hands thrust your weaker sisters still further in the mire; who have shown aversion where you might have shown mercy; who have hardened your hearts, that should have been soft with pity, who have turned coldly aside from those, your sisters, whom you might have saved, and gone your way as though these were not; O you who have lifted from your heads the crown of gentleness and mercy that all your sex should wear,—are you not ruthless" indeed?—Oscar Fay Adams in North American Review for November.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, N. Y.

The famous "floating stone" stands, or seems to stand, in front of the palace erected in its honor. It is an irregular cube of great bulk. SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE CITY ELECTION.

It is the fashion for standard newspapers to point out to their readers the "lessons" which elections teach and draw morals from them. Such is the practice of the JOURNAL.

The election in this city last Tuesday contained several "lessons," all of which can be easily seen without any artificial aid to the eye. They are too obvious to need any pointing out by us—he who runs may read.

The tuition was costly but wisdom gained by hard knocks is never cheap at first. In the end however the knowledge, considering its quality, may be low priced at any figure. The old saw informs us that Experience is a hard schoolmaster, but a highly efficient one.

It is fair to presume that there will be quite a change at Municipal Building, for the winning side is composed of men who hold to the good old Jacksonian doctrine that, "to the victors belong the spoils."

The JOURNAL hasn't the least doubt but that Mayor Bean and his official surroundings will give us a firstclass city government next year.

THE RUM VOTE.

Last Tuesday the rumsellers and their henchmen turned the tables on the prohibitionists and voted to license rumshops next year by a majority of 585. This was not altogether unexpected by the friends of sobriety and good order for it had been hinted that nearly all of the proprietors of this year's "kitchen bars" had abandoned the policy pursued by them at the last election (to vote "No") and would give in their ballots for the "yes" side last Tuesday. They turned the scale and the "Yes" vote won by a length, and more too.

We regret this decision. A temperance victory would have been vastly more satisfactory to the JOURNAL. But considering the character of our population a different result could hardly have been expected.

WARD 7 DID NOBLY.

The voters of the West Side deserve hearty congratulations for the splendid work accomplished by them on election day. They turned the scales completely and changed an average Democratic majority of 40 into a Republican one of 36 for Alderman Pushee, and an equally satisfactory one for Councilman Hanson.

It was a complete, thorough and, to the Republicans, a very gratifying political revolution. Doherty is no longer Boss in that Ward, and we congratulate the Westsiders on the pluck they showed in relegating him to a back seat. It was a victory worth making a special record of.

Alderman Pushee and Councilman Hanson will represent Ward 7 in the City Government honestly and with a view of promoting the best interests of the people at all times.

WARD 6.

The vote of North Woburn was a surprise and, so far as that for Mayor was concerned, a disappointment. But a good day's work was done on the Alderman and Councilman poll. Dearborn and Cutler were elected by handsome majorities, the former for the upper, and the latter for the lower, branch of the City Government. Each will fill the position in the best manner, and the people are fortunate in securing two such good men for the City Council.

The majority against Kenney for Mayor (on the same ticket with Dearborn and Cutler) was 110!

CONGRESS.

Congress assembled last Monday, and the President's Message was read and disposed of.

The President takes a hopeful view of the business affairs of the country and has no doubt but that the new tariff law will prove a boon.

Political matters are also running smoothly in his estimation, while our relations with foreign countries are amicable in the extreme.

In short, the Message treats of all those things usually treated by such documents. It is well written, sensible and practical.

— Mr. Chester Smith (Supt. of advertising at Mr. C. Willard Smith's store) has a change of card this week, to which attention is directed.

— Politically Mr. W. F. Davis, Alderman elect in Ward 1, is rank poison; but considered as a citizen and a gentleman he is equal to the best.

— The Woburn tanners and curriers will hold their annual ball on Dec. 31. Calnan's Orchestra will furnish the music with C. H. Thomas as prompter.

— Boston and New York newspaper men made many rich contributions to the list of presents at the Taylor-Falck wedding in this city last Tuesday evening.

— The December number of the Musical Record is a goed one. It contains an extra amount of Christmas music. Published by O. Ditson & Co., Boston.

— Mrs. Mary Jennings expects to have her store filled plum full of just the things that are the best for holiday presents, so look out, boys and girls, for her Christmas opening.

— Marvin Parker, the old time amateur dramatic performer, will take a prominent part in the production of "Caste" at Lyceum Hall on the 10th. That means success for the play.

— Rev. Dr. March, in his introductory address last Sunday morning, gave his audience a deal of good, wholesome advice on the subject of voting at the then coming election.

— Principal Dow is to be connected with the Boston office of the Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York for which Mr. Webster Woodman is the Woburn agent. It is one of the best there is.

— The present Chief of Police McIntosh is no doubt perfectly secure in his office. He has made a good Chief, and that is what the people want whatever the politicians may think about it.

— If there was one bright spot in the result of Tuesday's poll it was the election of Brother Jake Ham in Ward 2. He's the luckiest mortal in Woburn—always gets there when a candidate.

— We expect they will try, but Copeland & Bowser can't improve much on their display windows for the holidays. They are set out with excellent taste and a variety of fine goods.

— The "Wreck of the Hesperas" went off with great eclat last evening and was handsomely patronized. The Woburn Orchestra acquitted themselves in fine style, and so indeed did all the performers.

— We acknowledge the receipt of a polite and cordial invitation from The N. Y. World to attend the opening of the famous Pulitzer Building, and partake of an Editorial lunch on Dec. 10. Thanks.

— Dr. Harry Blake has not the faintest idea of taking the place of the late Dr. Stevens of Stoneham, as was currently reported two weeks ago. He is doing well and intends to remain here.

— Of course Dr. Bartlett will be the new City Physician. That letter in the Globe fixed his flint for him. History repeats itself—Bartlett used to be Town Physician in the palmy days of the old burgh.

— It was lucky for Woburn that at least one newspaper man was elected last Tuesday. Cutler will keep the rest of them in the traces when disposed to balk or kick, and that will be worth all it cost to elect him.

— Commodore John Ferguson is another of the Municipal Building people who probably will not be disturbed by the new administration. As Assessor and Clerk of the Almshouse Committee he is too valuable a man to be ousted.

— Livery teams were in great demand election day. The candidates pitched in regardless and many of us got rides in coaches with whips in the sockets and dogs underneath that don't often see the inside of a carriage. So it is an ill wind, etc.

— The Lynn Item of Nov. 26 was a reconstruction number so to speak and contained 24 profusely illustrated pages which conveyed a good idea of how Lynn looked after the great fire a year ago, and how it looks now when almost entirely rebuilt.

— The JOURNAL congratulates itself on the life like and finely executed portrait of Mayor-elect Bean which it presents to an admiring public this week. In all such little matters the JOURNAL distances all competetors—it always gives its readers "the best."

— The largest collection of Dining Room Furniture ever brought under one roof is now on exhibition at Paine's Furniture Warerooms, 48 Canal street, Boston. They have over three hundred styles of Dining Room Chairs alone. Their prices on dining outfits are exceedingly low.

— The last number of The Woman's Journal contained a two-column article from the facile pen of Mattie Sewall Curtis anent the Women Rights peoples' show in the Mechanics Fair then running in Boston. The article was racy, and as a guide to the Department described it was valuable.

— Rev. D. D. Wise, pastor of the First Baptist Church in this city, supplemented a period of strong, earnest work in behalf of prohibition with an able and eloquent sermon in the same direction from his pulpit last Sunday morning. He carries the cause of temperance close to his heart and spares not the rumseller in his advocacy of prohibition. He hates the traffic in rum and those engaged in it, hence his good, solid work for the success of the "No" vote last Tuesday.

— Tuesday morning was the coldest of the season. Thermometers varied, of course with location but the average figure was 5 degrees above zero, a point reached only a few times last winter. No one can complain that December (the first winter month) did not make its advent in its true character.

— Mr. Edward L. Shea has gone into the real estate business in Boston with Mr. J. W. Hobbs, who is an old operator and has a large patronage in that line. Hereafter the concern will be known as Hobbs & Shea. Their office is at 172 Washington St., where we bespeak for them a good business.

— "Caste" is to be produced by a strong dramatic company at Lyceum Hall on next Wednesday evening, Dec. 10. The play has been in preparation for several weeks by the best of local talent, and that it will be presented in fine style admits of no doubt. For full particulars see advertisement in our business columns.

— Quite a company of Union 193, P. & D. A., visited Union 95 of Medford last week and had a fine time. A literary and musical entertainment was provided by the Medford hosts and an excellent repast spread by them for the delectation of their Woburn brethren. The Order, it is understood, is in a prosperous way.

— Mr. Amos Cummings has increased the size of his advertisement of millinery and dry goods business which seems to indicate that business is rushing at his store. Mr. Cummings is enterprising; he isn't afraid of putting money into newspaper advertising; he reaches out for trade and gets it. He is making great preparations for a big holiday business.

— The advertisement of Durward's meat, fruit and vegetable market in this issue of the JOURNAL is worth reading. It is filled full of good things for Christmas dinners, especially in the shape of turkeys, geese, ducks, chickens and choice meats, let alone fine fresh fruits, the best of vegetables, and other toothsome things. The Metropolitan is a very popular market.

— Snow began to fall in quite a serious manner on Wednesday morning and continued to do a good business at it until 6 o'clock in the evening when it changed to rain and continued to pour without interruption until nearly Thursday morning. When people emerged from their couches on said morning, lo and behold, the snow had disappeared and hardly any traces of it could been seen.

— Mr. E. C. Colman makes a practice of wintering 20 or 30 ponies from the Boston sale and livery stables at his barns at Woodside in this city every year, and anyone who likes to look at miniature equines in assorted sizes and colors wouldn't miss it by going out to Woodside and giving Mr. Colman a call. The Colmans sell a great many ponies at their Portland street stable, and the holidays create a big demand for the little fellows.

— Be good to the poor little sparrows. Throw out the crumbs to them and shake the tablecloth on the back stoop for their benefit. Some people are "down on" the English sparrow, but it is all wrong—the sparrow has a right to his existence and to fair play from everybody, else God wouldn't have made him a sparrow—He would have made him a lark, or a nightingale, or something of that sort. The sparrow is all right, so feed and protect him.

— A large meeting was held in the vestry of the Methodist church last Sunday evening in the interests of "No License" which was addressed by quite a number of gentlemen among whom were E. E. Thompson, Rev. Hugh Montgomery, Griffin Place, Major H. C. Hall, Charles R. Rosenquist, Mr. Luke Warren Fowl and others, but the chief address was made by Mayor Johnson. Everything passed off in the best of style and enthusiastic manner.

— Woburn has had a flagellation case, in which it is believed the assaulted party, a physician, has been flogged out of office.—Winchester Star. Guess not. Public sentiment was largely on the side of Dr. Conway in that affair and unfavorable to his assailant. Instead of the little unpleasantness hurting the Doctor any it will have a tendency to increase his chances for the office of City Physician next year. At least, that seems to be the prevailing opinion.

— No. 29, W. R. C., will give a grand Kettledrum Encampment in G. A. R. Hall, Winchester, on this (Friday) and tomorrow evenings. This evening there are to be some very fine tableaux and singing by a noted Boston choir boy, and tomorrow dancing will be the chief feature of the entertainment. The tickets are only 25 cents: children, 15 cents. Sister Wilson of the Star, an officer in the Order, will please accept the JOURNAL's thanks for "comps."

— Since our last issue we learn that Dr. N. A. Springer will not go to Europe as he had contemplated, but will open an office at Woburn, where he will make his home, but will still retain his Boston practice as he did here last Summer. We are glad the doctor is not so far off but that he can "drop in" on this community once in a while. During his stay here he made many friends, and the large practice he had, spoke volumes for his skill as a physician. Woburn is the gainer.—Beverly Times.

— Dr. Thomas Morong, the well-known botanist, has returned to Boston from his travels in South America where he has been engaged in botanical pursuits for over two years. He has collected more than 10,000 plants, chiefly about Asuncion, Paraguay, and in the wilderness up the Pilcomayo River. He was in Buenos Ayres at the time of the late revolution and watched the bombardment of the city by the rebels. From the Argentine Republic he sailed round the Cape to Chili, where he made valuable collections in the Atacama Desert. His friends will be interested to learn that he has accepted the position of curator of the Columbia College Herbarium in the city of New York. While away and for some summers before he went his wife, she that was Mary Bennett, daughter of good Parson Bennett, made it a practice of visiting Mrs. Simonds on Beacon street, this city, and has many friends here.

— The subject of omitting the High School Graduating Exhibition from the order of exercises next June has been agitated considerably of late but meets with but small favor either from parents or pupils. Some of the School dignitaries are said to be in favor of it and have expressed fears that the papers might get hold of it and upset their calculations; but the feeling against the new departure is very strong, and it is not at all likely that public sentiment and the School Board will consent to any such arrangement.

— One of the best handlers of real estate in this city is Mr. E. J. Gregory of 396 Main street, up stairs. He recently took hold of the Timothy Driscoll property, on Prospect near Fowle street, which was assessed for $2,500, and sold it Tuesday for the handsome advance of $600 or $3,100. Previous to this he sold an estate on the corner of Fowle and Highland on which he realized an advance of $500. Mr. Gregory is one of the best of real estate salesmen and gets the highest market price to be had.

— It strikes the Editor of this paper with much force that Mayor Bean rather got the better of Madame School Committee Bean in the election, for the lady, if she attends to her official duties, will find herself, several times during her term of office, when she's got to obey her husband. She'll find the Committee-room a little different place from the family hearthstone, because Mayor Bean is, ex officio, President of the School Board and, as such, has a right to call on the Police to enforce his commands. This gives the Mayor an advantage over the Madame.

— One of the hardest things which some of the candidates for city offices had to put up with was to own up to the alleged portraits of themselves on the innumerable dodgers, flyers and gutter-snipes with which the city was flooded. Take Kenney's for example: it must have been tough for him to acknowledge himself the original of the picture of him on the dodgers; but he had to do it, or get busted. We think his wife could get a bill on it. And Bean's wasn't much better—it was just about "6 one, and half-dozen t'other," and weren't they beauties though! But patriots are often called on to make sacrifices for their country—that's what they are patriots for; and last Tuesday's candidates were nothing if not patriotic.

— Christmas is headed this way and may be expected to arrive in about two weeks from next Thursday. A visit from Santa Claus may be confidently looked for at about that period of time. If the sleighing is good he will fetch himself and load along on runners, but if the roads continue bare as they are now he will have to get here the best way he can. We hear it hinted around that there are to be stacks and stacks of beautiful Christmas goods landed here and kept in the stores and shops for sale, therefore nobody need go to Boston to buy holiday presents unless they choose to pay more than they would have to here for the like kind of goods. Hidden stores of these beautiful things will be brought out into the light of day in a week or two when look out for something richer and nicer than was ever before seen in this city.

— Mr. E. J. Gregory, a very prompt and successful real estate dealer and auctioneer of this city, advertises to sell the furniture, etc., of Windsor Hotel for the proprietor, Mrs. McDonald, on Dec. 10 and 11 instant, and pro bono publico we advise a special note be made of what he says about the sale. A very large amount of parlor, dining-room, kitchen and bed-chamber furniture and fixtures will be disposed of and as the auction is to positively take place and everything must go, the chances for buying cheap will be great. The goods, wares and merchandize are all in the very best condition; many of them are almost new; they are modern in style; and everything is desirable. Gregory proposes to sell all out in the two days, so those who want to make particular choice of things must be on hand early and often.

— The social given by the Friday Night Club last Friday evening was the initial number of a series of entertainments numbering ten in all to be given in the Unitarian church during the season and it met with great success. There was a good attendance, which is almost invariably true of the Club's essays to gratify the taste of the public for pure and elevating pleasures, and they who were present were well pleased. The artists who gave the the entertainment were: Miss Carrie A. Brackett, Soprano; Miss Adleigh J. Williams, Contralto; Mr. Herbert W. Munn, baratone; Miss Ella M. McDonald, reader; Mr. J. H. Parker, Jr., cornetist; Mrs. Remick, accompanist. Each part was admirably performed, and the combination executed the well selected programme in a manner very satisfactory to all who heard them. The next on the list is to be a lecture to be delivered next Friday night, Dec. 12.

— The Thanksgiving Sunday School Concert at the First Congregational church on last Sunday evening was largely attended. The exercises, which were of more than ordinary interest, consisted of the best of music, recitations, responsive scripture readings, and a "Chalk Talk" by Professor Greete of Boston, which was a novel feature and one which pleased everybody. It was entertaining in the highest degree and equally instructive. "Chalk talks" are a modern device for interesting Sunday School students and other bodies of truth-seekers, and it is an effective one. Superintendent John R. Carter directed matters. He takes great interest in his Sunday School, and not only so, but is prolific in ways and means to increase its usefulness. Or, as some put it, "Supt. Carter is always getting up something for the benefit of the S. S. classes and please the patrons of the school." And so he is. Several ladies recited pieces with pleasing effect, the declamations were well adapted to a Thanksgiving concert, the music excellent, and the whole thing a marked success.

— If we ever before knew of so much literature being squandered on a city election as there was on the one held here last Tuesday we can't call to mind when and where it was. There were dead loads of auto-biography, historical research, political economy, philipic, encomium, and all that sort of a thing, flying about, thrown into the bosoms of peaceful and unoffending family circles, sent abroad through the mails, sown broadcast in the highways, byways and ditches, and if there was a single voter on election day who wasn't perfectly familiar with the antecedents and present course of life, the merits and demerits, of every prominent candidate, then it must have been because he did not know how to read and the illiteracy of his neighbors was as dense as his own. We have never seen anything like it. To read and inwardly digest all the literature which was thrown off the local press concerning the candidates would be about equal to going through Harvard College—or, at anyrate, to a fair academic education, if not quite up to a University one.

— James Kay Applebee will give his celebrated lecture on "Charles Dickens, Sentimentalist and Humorist" under the auspices of the Friday Night Club, Friday, Dec. 12, at 7.30 P. M. at the Unitarian church. Mr. Applebee is one of the most popular lecturers in New England. The price of admission is designed simply to cover expenses and is but ten cents.

— Rev. Hugh Montgomery in a newspaper interview last Wednesday blamed the defeat of prohibition in this city last Tuesday on the professed friends of the cause—on men who claim to hold the principle and practice of it above politics or any of the chief moral reforms of the day. He speaks by the card. Professed temperance men knocked the "No" vote in the head and the reign of Rum in this city next year will be due to their course on election day. Mr. Montgomery, so he said in this interview, proposes to show up this whole business in his sermon next Sunday evening and point out to temperance advocates the folly and wickedness of their conduct in permitting the rum element to carry the day. He has chosen for a text on that occasion Ps. lv. 12, 13, 14, which will be found by the reader to be as pat to the subject as anything that can be found in the Bible, and from it to tell what he knows about the consistency of temperance (with a big ? after the word) men and also to give public notice of what he proposes to do when the matter of licensing comes up next May.

— John Boyle was arraigned in the District Court last Monday morning on a charge of assault and battery on his stepson, a young man by the name of Finn, with a deadly weapon, to wit, a pocket-knife, with which he cut into Finn's flesh just over his heart, and produced an ugly wound. A slight variation in the course of the blade downwards, it is alleged, would have struck the heart of the lad and killed him; but as it was he was only slightly hurt. It was Rum's doings. When sober there is no better or kinder-hearted man anywhere than John Boyle, but when full of ardent spirits he isn't John at all, but another person altogether. He used to be a Police officer, and later was overseer of the highways, and has worked at stone-masonry for Mr. J. M. Ellis. But rum has been gradually getting the mastery over him for some time, and here we find the poor fellow arraigned in the Court for an alleged deadly assault on a member of his household and placed under $1500 bonds for his appearance at the Superior Court. When sober he wouldn't injure a fly! And still there are people who will keep right on selling rum.

— Their is a very interesting serial running in St. Nicholas written by Noah Brooks called "The Boy Settlers" which gives an account of the adventures of some families who emigrated from Dixon, Lee County, Illinois, to Kansas about 1857 during the bitter struggle between the Free State and Pro-Slavery parties for supremacy there. There were in the families of emigrants several boys of whom Mr. Brooks's story chiefly treats who enjoyed the long march through Iowa into Kansas many miles beyond the Missouri with great zest. Emigrant parties from New England joined our Illinois friends along the route and we should not be at all surprised if some of the former were from this vicinity, for when Mr. Howell, an uncle of the boys, said to a tall, lean, lank Yankee whom he met beyond the Missouri driving a yoke of long, lean, lank oxen, "I shouldn't wonder if you brought those clothes you have got on at Parkville," the Yankee answered with a drawl and nasal twang: "You guess about right. A very nice sort of a man we met at the forks of the river road told me that my clothes were too Yankee. I wore them all the way from Woburn, Massachusetts, where we come from and I hated to give them up." The nub of which is that the suit of clothes which the Yankee swapped off because they were too nice and fashionable for Western emigrants to wear, are supposed to have been bought at the well known and very popular clothing house of Mr. C. M. Munroe in this city. How strangely things come around sometimes.

GEORGE F. BEAN,

Mayor-elect of Woburn.

The JOURNAL points with pride to its very successful efforts to place a perfect likeness of our new Mayor, GEORGE F. BEAN, Esq., before its large army of intelligent and cultivated readers. No other paper has achieved anything like such a large measure of success in this particular line of portraiture as the JOURNAL has in this instance, and we expect our patrons to endorse our enthusiastic self-congratulations with cheers.

The following bit of biography naturally goes with the portrait:

Mr. Bean was born in Bradford, N. H., in 1857, and was graduated from Brown University in 1881. Immediately after his graduation he was appointed Principal of the Plympton Street School, in this city. After teaching one year he began the study of law, graduating from the Boston University Law School in 1885, and was immediately admitted to the Suffolk County Bar, since which time he has practiced his profession in Boston, and has continued to reside at Woburn.

A Union Sociable.

The vestry of the First Congregational church in this city presented an attractive appearance last Tuesday evening. It was the scene of one of the nicest home-made entertainments of the season, which was the production of members of the Congregational and Baptist churches, and was superintended by Mrs. John K. Murdock, with Mr. Chester Smith Chief of Staff, or Master of Ceremonies.

Everybody enjoyed it. A fine solo was admirably rendered by William Fox; Cecil Wyman read "The Courtship of Miles Standish," which was illustrated by tableaux, Chauncy B. Conn being Standish; Chester Cotton, John Alden; Elsie Francis, Priscilla; Marcus H. Cotton gave a solo, and Miss Edith Murdock read "Elizabeth," which was illustrated with tableaux, Mr. Fowler being the principal character, with Miss Alice Hutchings as Elizabeth, and Miss Sadie Fosdick as Hannah.

The repast was abundant and of good quality, and the enjoyment of the occasion was unmarred from beginning to end.

What Mr. Brussels Did.

A woman, once doubting the genuineness of a Brussels carpet which she desired to buy, was fully convinced when an ignorant salesman told her he knew for a fact that the texture was woven by Mr. Brussels himself. He didn't make Brussels soap, but those who did, produced the most desirable purifier ever introduced into a house, and the wise buyer will take no other. It's economical.

Y. M. C. A.

Young men's meeting Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Sunday, 3 P. M., Boy's meeting. Song service.

Monday evening, Dec. 8, Singing Class at 7.30.

Sunday, 3.30, special meeting for prayer. Every Christian man expected.

Tuesday evening, Dec. 9, Elocution Class at 7.30. There must be 15 to form the class.

Every member of the Association should enquire what the event is to be on the 30th of this month.

Boy's Branch have a special time on the same evening. Only boys who belong to the Branch are admitted.

Sunday, 4 P. M., Men's meeting. Subject: "Wants." To be led by one of our young men. Do you "want" to enjoy the service? Then come.

The Woman's Auxiliary is flourishing evidently; 17 new members joined at the last meeting. They are to give an "Envelop Sociable" the 16th of this month.

In Memoriam.

At a regular meeting of Martha Washington Council, No. 14, D. of L., held Nov. 27, 1890, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unaninously adopted:

WHEREAS: It has pleased God to remove from our midst our late sister, Ella G. Richardson, it is fitting that we recognize the loss of an estimable sister, one who was ever ready to sacrifice personal convenience that good might be attained to the advantage of others, therefore be it

Resolved 1st: That her example be not lost in us; that we may strive to emulate her virtues; that we may be participants in the saying (Rev 14—13) "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth saieth the spirit, yea that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Resolved 2nd: That we bow in submission to the Divine Will of Him who said (John 14) "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you and will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am you may be also"

Resolved 3rd: That these resolutions be engrossed on the records of this Council, and a copy of them sent to the husband and relatives of the deceased accompanied with our fraternal and heartfelt sympathies in their sore bereavement, believing that what is our mutual loss is their infinite gain.

Woburn City Election.

A political cyclone struck this city last Tuesday and knocked it "six ways for Sunday." It was the biggest surprise party that has been experienced here within the memory of the "Oldest Inhabitant," and when the vote was counted and the figures reckoned up the disappointed ones in the place could be counted by scores all up and down the streets.

It was a complete overturn. It was a singular election too. There was Kenney, the regular candidate of both the Republican and Democratic parties, supported by the temperance folks, and helped by some of the tariff reformers—Kenney, a bright, clean, level-headed young man, was knocked out in one round, and by whom? You tell! Mr. Bean got there by 207 majority—the most unaccountable thing that anyone would have supposed could happen—(Madame Bean got there too as the Republican candidate for member of the School Board, for which the JOURNAL feels devoutly thankful).

The City Council will be evenly divided on joint ballot between Republicans and Democrats; but that counts for nothing because political considerations have but little weight with the Board's acts [probably Buck and Maguire and Lounsbury, etc., will continue to occupy their present offices and, whether Republican, Democratic, Know Nothing, Mugwump, or Prohibitionist, no one will ever think of such a thing as turning either of the three out].

But nobody pretends that Mr. Bean will fail to make a first class Mayor, or that he will not be surrounded by a very respectable body of city legislators. We should have been better pleased if Mr. Grant had pulled through in Ward 3.

Below we give the vote in full and about the political complexion of the two Boards:

George F. Bean, the Mayor-elect, is a Democrat, and the Aldermen elected, Davis in Ward 1, Ham in Ward 2, Finn in Ward 3 and Walsh in Ward 5, are Democrats, while Fowle in Ward 4, Dearborn in Ward 6 and Pushee in Ward 7 are Republicans. The Common Council stands five Democrats and six Republicans.

The city voted license by a majority of 585. This is a reverse of last year's vote.

CATARRH

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed.

The Scandinavian.

On Saturday afternoon 5 Swedish Missionaries on their way to China visited this city. At 7 p. m. they held a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall which was attended by a large congregation of Scandinavians. On Sunday at 10.30 a. m. at 1.30 and 7 p. m., services were held in the same place, each meeting being unusually well attended. On Sunday morning 3 Norwegian Missionaries joined the other 5 here, and held a Union meeting in which the Lord manifested himself most wonderfully. At 2 p. m. the Norwegian Missionaries left for Boston, where they were to hold two meetings in the afternoon and evening. All the Missionaries are young, unmarried men and women (5 men and 3 women) all pledged to remain single and to work among the heathen Chinese in China for at least four years, if the Lord thinks best to let them live so long. They all go of their own free will in response to a call from God to go, leaving all their dear ones behind them, some here and others in other parts of the country and others still in Scandinavia, giving their bodies and soul for Christ, not merely a talk but an act. Their names are: C. M. Johnson, G. W. Ahlstrand, J. Anderson, A. Kron and O. Guldbrandsen, Miss C. Hokanson, Miss I. Olsen and E. Petersen.

Previous to their visit to Massachusetts they were for a short time in a training school in New York City, and before leaving this Country for China, they are visiting a number of cities and towns where Scandinavians are settled, asking for a collection in each place to help them along towards their destination, China.

Their visit among the Scandinavians here did a great deal of good, and at least 8 people were converted to Christ, during their stay in Woburn. May God bless them!

In Worcester, Mass., on Dec. 5, they are to meet and join with 5 more Swedish Missionaries making in all 13 of Swedish and Norwegian Missionaries that are going from New England for China. From Worcester they proceed to Chicago, Ill., where they are to meet another troop of Scandinavian Missionaries for China, and then go toward San Francisco, Cal., when they will embark for China about Jan. 1, 1890.

We bid them Godspeed! C.

Taylor—Falck.

Mr. Charles H. Taylor Jr., eldest son of Col. Charles H. Taylor, proprietor of the Boston Globe, and Miss Marguerite C. Falck, daughter of Mrs. Mary Munn Falck, were married at the Unitarian church in Woburn last evening, the Rev. Henry Parker officiating. Numbers of friends were in attendance, a special train conveying a large party from Boston.

The bride was given away by Mr. A. A. Fowle.

Mr. Herbert W. Munn was best man and Miss Bessie H. Taylor was maid of honor.

The ushers were Mr. Robert F. Herrick, Mr. George A. Stewart, Mr. Daniel W. Lane, Mr. William O. Taylor, Mr. Herbert M. Howes, Mr. A. Gardner Morse, Mr. Charles M. Wright, Mr. John I. Taylor.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, 82 Pleasant street.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will take a three weeks' bridal trip and will be at home Wednesday after Jan. 7, at 158 Newbury street, Boston.

Hope Lodge, D. of R.

On last Tuesday evening the above Lodge gave exemplification of work to members of several visiting Lodges. About 90 representatives from Evergreen Lodge, 19, Stoneham, the officers of which were Noble Grand, Mrs. M. L. Batchelder; Vice-Grand, Mrs. M. J. Huntoon; Recording Secretary, Alma Johonett; Treasurer, Mrs. L. R. Dodge, and about 20 members of Golden Rule Lodge, 23, of Melrose, with the following officers: Noble Grand, Joseph Trundy; Vice-Grand, Hannah Rowell; and Treasurer, Eva Grundy. There was also present a delegation from Martha Washington Lodge, 1, of Boston, with Helen Shaw as Noble Grand.

District Deputy Grand Master John E. Brown was present in his official capacity. The following named are the officers who performed the work: Past Grand, Mrs. Sarah A. Woodside; Noble Grand, Mrs. Abbie Chase; Vice-Grand, Mrs. Sophia F. Corbett; Chaplain, Mrs. Mariam Leathe; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Hattie N. Delano; Permanent Secretary, Mrs. E. Maria Colomb; Treasurer, Mrs. Ida Magee. Supper was served by N. J. Harding of Arlington, and speeches were made by several of the visitors and others, and there was good music.

Our Street Railroads.

In pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the North Woburn and the East Middlesex Street Railroad companies have made their annual report for the fiscal year of 1890 to the Secretary of State and the same was published last week.

That our readers may get something near a correct idea of what these lines have been doing this year we have culled out a few figures from the reports and here submit them for inspection:

The total number of miles operated by the No. Woburn Co. is 7.8, and the total number of miles run during the year ending Oct. 1, 1890, was 94,540 against 77,655 in 1889. The number of passengers carried during the year was 381,948, against 326,316 in 1889, a gain of 55,632. The net income over operating expenses was $668 more than in 1889.

This shows that the patronage of the line is increasing, and it is safe to say it will do so much more rapidly in the future than in the past.

In 1890, to Oct. 1, the East Middlesex line carried 1,444,660, against 1,263,039, a gain of 181,621, and to do this the number of miles run during the year was 398,976, against 270,357 in 1889, a gain of 28,619. The net income above operating expenses was $7,333 more than in 1889. The number of miles owned and operated by the Company is 19.86.

The percent of increase of business done by the East Middlesex during the year is larger than that of the North Woburn, which is owing probably to the big amount of passenger traffic between Chelsea and Malden especially on Sunday.

But both lines are becoming more and more appreciated by the public and the day is only a little way off in the future when both will pay handsome dividends to their owners.

An exchange says: "We permit no man to tread upon the tail of our coat, or walk clear up the back of it by trying to refute our statement that Brussels is the best and most economical soap made."

North Woburn.

Mr. James Mack is laying the foundation for a barn which is to be built during the coming spring.

Mr. N. S. Watson had his foot badly bruised by the falling of a piece of timber while at work in Mr. Barker's factory at the Centre.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Wide Awake Club for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society, was a success.

Among the social events of last week was the Fair held at the Unitarian Chapel. It was well attended and gave a satisfactory result. The supper was par excellence and was served in a very artistic style. Among the most tastefully and well arranged tables was the fancy and candy tables. The children found diversion during the evening in fishing in the fish pond which was arranged especially for their amusement. Among the other attractions was a prize contest: The persons guessing the nearest to the number of seeds in a pumpkin being awarded the prizes. At the close of the fair the seeds were counted and it was found to contain 625. The successful contestants being Mr. Lewis Bond and Mr. Arthur Linscott each of whom received a tasteful and artistic bed quilt the handiwork of the Ladies Sewing Circle.

[The above items were crowded out last week.—EDITOR.]

The ponds are frozen over and the young people are taking advantage of the fine skating.

Mr. Harry G. Carter, student at Amherst College, passed Thanksgiving at his home in this village.

The monthly sociable of the Unitarian society was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Downing on last Thursday evening. Important business was transacted.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting at the parlor of the Congregational church on next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. All interested in temperance are cordially invited.

Mr. George Gardner of Cambridgeport has purchased the milk route and equipments owned by Mrs. A. D. Clement. It is hoped that Mr. Gardner will enjoy a large patronage and a pronounced prosperity.

"Chipman's Liver Pills

the best in the world. Never gripe or make you sick. They are purely vegetable, and will sure cure your bilious trouble. All who use them speak well of them. Sold by all druggists."

WINCHESTER.

The Winchester business of Mr. F. H. Nourse, real estate dealer, has increased a good deal in 1890.

There is going to be a ball at G. A. R. Hall Saturday evening, Dec. 6, under the management of No. 29, W. R. C.

Hereafter the regular meetings of the Winchester Woman Suffrage Club will be held on third Tuesday of each month in the parlor of G. A. R. Hall.

Rev. Mr. Newton is preaching a series of sermons on "Our Church Confession" with great acceptance and much profit (it is hoped) to his spiritual charge here.

Mrs. Hanson, the mother of the late James I. Hanson, for many years Principal of the Woburn High School, died here last week aged 76 years. She was a lady highly esteemed in this place.

The numerous members of the Mystic Valley Club whose domiciles are in this town are anticipating the gastronomic pleasures of the next meeting of the Club at the American House, Boston, on Dec. 9, with moistened lips.

At 7 o'clock next Sunday evening Charles Rufus Brown, President of the American Institute of Sacred Literature, will lecture in the Baptist church on "The Supply and Education of Men of the Ministry: the Demand of the Present Hour."

George Nelson of this town is a good kind of a man and a respected citizen, but he has got some neighbors who are worse than the 7-years itch. In their dealings with him and his family they are "meaner than pussley." They have had him in Court time after time for things he was never guilty of, and only last Monday morning Miss Daly had him up for trial in the Woburn District Court for alleged personal injuries inflicted by Nelson's dogs. As usual Nelson was discharged, there being no cause of action. He is a peaceable, law-abiding man, but some of his neighbors—well, the least said the better.

Rev. Leander Thompson has carefully prepared a history of the fifty years existence of the Congregational church. Mr. Abijah Thompson, with his will known generosity, paid for its cost of preparation, and has made the church a gratuitous offer of the manuscript for publication, which the society will undoubtedly accept and put into book form. The volume when printed will contain wood cuts of the two meeting houses and the eight pastors.—Star. A more competent historian to do the work mentioned in the Star's paragraph could not have been found than Rev. Leander Thompson of No. Woburn. He knows Woburn all up and down. One of these days the great liberality of Abijah Thompson, Esq., of this place will be more highly appreciated than it is now even, although our people honor him for his public spirit.

Boston Theatres.

"FRANCIS WILSON" AT THE GLOBE.

Francis Wilson still holds court at the Globe. He will not abdicate until a week from Saturday night, having the pleasant assurance that he will be greeted by crowds at every performance. "The Merry Monarch" might run on for weeks to come in the Globe, but its stay is limited to four weeks, and two of these have already passed, so that in the remaining two those who are fond of good clean humor and honest fun must seek their opportunity to enjoy one of the most melodious and pleasing representations of the kind ever given on the Boston stage. No light opera has ever had a more successful record in this city than this last offering of Mr. Francis Wilson, and it seems entirely possible that the engagement will be a greater success than any yet known in the Globe's history. Mr. Wilson is so irresistibly funny in all his scenes and is so ably supported by his company, that the success he has made is easily explained, and it appears entirely reasonable that the "Merry Monarch" could retain his command of his Boston subjects for the balance of the season.

THE SOUDAN.

The big Boston Theatre has been filled every evening during the entire season and the audiences were delighted with the fine scenic effects, the elaborate and beautiful pictures, the thrilling tableaux, and the clever acting of the "The Soudan." Such a success as this play has won was not expected, but it is well deserved.

Excursion parties from surrounding towns continue to swell the size of the audiences. Those who saw "The Soudan" several weeks ago should see it again. It closes at 10.40 P. M. to give all suburbanites an opportunity to reach their late trains.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The attraction at the Grand Opera House commencing next Monday, Dec. 8, is W. J. Florence in the romantic Irish comedy drama Inshavogue. It is one of the finest things ever brought to this country, and will be played for only one week.

Literary Notices.

OUR LITTLE ONES for December is a Christmas number and it is a beauty. The pictures in it are numerous and very handsome, and the heft of them have a Christmas air about them which sets one to thinking of plum puddings, punkin pies, the Christmas goose, boars heads, holly and mistletoe. The young folks will be delighted with them and the stories and poetry which they illustrate. OUR LITTLE ONES is published by the Russell Publishing Company in Boston.

The eighty-second volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE began with the December number. It is a Christmas number and a handsome one. Eight of its papers are illustrated with over 70 fine pictures, a few of which being The Comedies of Shakespeare, The Winter of Our Content, A Pre-Raphaelite Mansion, Japanese Women, A Christmas Present, Flute and Violin, Gibble Colt's Ducks, etc., etc.

HARPER'S is sold by the New England News Company, Boston; and at the Woburn Bookstore by Sparrow Horton.

[From the Shoe and Leather Review.]

A Peculiar Hide Condition.

It is very doubtful if there was ever a time when a more peculiar phase of the buff hide market existed in New England than at the present time. Usually at least one cent represents the selling value of No. 1 and No. 2 and B hides in Boston. But the market does not show this difference to day. In fact, an instance has just come to the ears of the Review where a dealer had made a sale of B's and 2's, but owing to extreme storage of these grades, he was unable to consummate the deal. He is reported to have finally filled the order with No. 1 buff hides, the price obtained being sufficient to enable him to do so without actual loss, at least. This shows the call for cheap hides and cheap leather. In fact No. 2 and No. 3 leather is always in better demand in the Boston market than No. 1. This is owing largely to the selection. A very slight blemish, a little scratch or mark, a stain either upon the grain or flesh side, throws the leather into a lower grade. A manufacturer can often cut a No. 2 or B side of leather equally advantageous to a side free of every blemish, making it perfect and classed as No. 1. Consequently the cent or more a foot saved is in large orders an important item. The above incident illustrates some of the vagaries of the hide and leather trade as existing to-day.

GREETING:

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Benjamin F. Barnard and Frederic Hinckley, who pray that letters testamentary may be issued to them, the executors therein named, and that they may be exempt from giving a surety or sureties on their bond pursuant to said will and statute;

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the second Tuesday of December, next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioners are hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the WOBURN JOURNAL, printed at Woburn, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE M. BROOKS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eighteenth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

LESSON X, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 7.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 13, 27. Commit Verses 25, 27—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 30—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

13. "And behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about three score furlongs." It was now afternoon, and all the events of the morning had doubtless become known to all the disciples, and many more than those mentioned in the last lesson had paid a visit to the tomb; perhaps these two among the rest; but if so they evidently doubted still His resurrection, for had they believed that He actually appeared to Mary and the other women we would think that they would have remained about the city hoping to see Him for themselves. So we have before us two more unbelieving disciples, one named Cleopas (vs. 18) and the other we know not. According to John xix, 25, Cleopas was husband to one of the Marys.

14. "And they talked together of all these things which had happened." They would no doubt rehearse every incident, perhaps going over the events of His arrest and trial and crucifixion and all attendant circumstances, as well as the events of that particular day.

15. "And it came to pass that while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them." They spoke of Him and He came to meet them.

16. "But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him." When Mary saw Him she knew not that it was Jesus, and when the disciples who went out fishing saw Him on the shore they knew not that it was Jesus (John xx, 14; xxi, 4). Whether He assumed a different form or appearance on each of these occasions, or whether Mary and the disciples knew him not, the one because of her weeping and the others because of their return to their old occupation, or whether it was a blindness from the Lord, as in II Kings vi, 18, does not seem very clear in the case of Mary and the disciples; but in the case of these two Mark xvi, 12, says that He appeared to them in another form.

17. "And He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad?" He knew, but He wanted them to tell Him; as if He had said, Tell me all about it.

18. "And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering, said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?" The whole city must have been filled with the things which had happened during the last few days and a man would need to be a very lonely sojourner (as the words "Art thou only a stranger" imply) not to have heard about the strange events.

19. "And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people." They could not forget nor deny that such mighty deeds and words had been seen in Jesus as had never been seen in any other; and, although contrary to all their expectations He had been put to death, yet these facts concerning Him were incontrovertible.

20. "And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him." Their testimony corroborates exactly what Jesus had foretold (Matt. xvi, 21). Now if they had added what He also foretold just as plainly, that He would rise again the third day, then would they have been enlightened and glad.

21. "But we trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done." Like Zacharias, Simeon, Anna, Joseph of Arimathea and many others they looked for redemption for Israel, even the kingdom of God (Luke i, 68; ii, 30, 38; xxiii, 51), as all the prophets had foretold. They looked for the king to sit on David's throne, and even Gabriel, the last messenger from God, taught them so to look (Luke i, 32, 33). But they knew not the way to the throne by death and resurrection.

22. "Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished which were early at the sepulcher." If they had said "made us glad" it would have been right and according to the mind of God.

23. "And when they found not His body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive." What they looked for (His body) they saw not, but they saw the linen clothes which had contained His body; and what they had not expected to see (angels) they saw, and heard that which they had not thought to hear, that He was alive. Life and not death is the topic of the Scriptures; or rather life through death.

24. "And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said; but Him they saw not." The women simply found as He had said it would be, and as the angels said it was; and even though the others who went saw not Himself, blessed are those who see not and yet believe (John xx, 29).

25. "Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!" If we spend much time on prophecy wise men may count us fools, but if we neglect prophecy, or any portion of it, Christ will count us foolish. Let us rather choose to be counted foolish by men than by Christ.

26. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?" When Paul preached at Thessalonica he taught from the Scriptures that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that Jesus whom he preached was indeed the Christ (Acts xvii, 2, 3). The Christ must suffer because iniquity, transgression and sin must be put away and made an end of (Dan. ix, 24), and without shedding of blood is no remission; it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul (Heb. ix, 22; Lev. xvii, 11).

27. "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself." Expository preaching, which many preachers despise, but which satisfies hungry souls. An Old Testament Bible reading by the Master Himself and all about Himself. Heavy hearts need Jesus only; and only when He is enthroned there will we have true gladness. Can you, dear fellow teacher, find Him in every book in all the Scriptures and in every lesson that you teach? It is only as we make Him the center of all teaching and preaching that we can hope to accomplish anything in His name. We are to be full of Him and His spirit and His word, and always speak of His sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, intercession and coming glory; pointing to His holy life as the foundation, and, if saved by His blood, then taking that holy life as our example in all things.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store, large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

UNREST.

Late one night, while I was sitting
In my chamber all alone,
And the wintry winds were sighing
In a dreary monotone,
Suddenly I heard a whisper,
Sounding quite distinct and near,
As the rustle of a garment
Fell upon my listening ear.

Turning quickly from my writing,
Peering out into the gloom
Of the shadows lurking darkly
In the corners of the room,
There a misty form was floating,
Fading quietly from sight;
Slow receding, disappearing,
In the shadows of the night.

Quickly from my chair I hastened,
Crossed the room with eager feet,
Widely flung the creaking shutter,
Letting in the snow and sleet;
But of that which I was seeking,
Not a vestige did remain.
Closing then the screening casement,
Went and took my seat again.

Long into the night I sat there
Writing, thinking, dreaming dreams,
While the shifting rays of moonlight
Filled the rooms with ruddy beams,
'Til a sudden sense of comfort
And an all pervading peace
Filled me with a drowsy languor,
Bidding me my labors cease.

Then no longer did I wonder
What the misty form might be,
That so softly left my chamber,
From my sight so quick did flee;
For from out the deepest recess
Fed within my troubl'd breast,
There had gone—I hope forever—
The wild spirit of unrest.

—Frances Rawlins in Omaha World-Herald.

Meaning of the Word "Cigar."

In the first place the word "cigar" is of modern date, and is derived from the fact that when the Spaniards first smoked cigars they were smoked in the orchard, or "cigarral," so called from its being the abiding place of those soothing, sleep producing insects the balm crickets. Hence "cigarro," a small roll; "cigarron," a large roll, and ultimately "cigar," linked even in name with the most soothing, dreamy sound in nature.

The first cigars made by the Spaniards were of tobacco loosely rolled and held together by the silken lining of corn shucks, and always with a straw running through the center, to be withdrawn before smoking, so as to secure a good draught. These were first introduced into England in 1787 by the son of a Spanish grandee visiting London, and from there spread all through Europe. This is the history of the birth of the cigar into civilization, but we must look considerably further back to find the first records, and then can find no origin, but only data of its being in existence.—New York Telegram.

Producing Fuel with Water.

A coal washing plant has been erected at a colliery in Yorkshire, England. The plant has a capacity of 400 tons per day, but has dealt with 500 tons by the wet process. The system adopted is carefully sizing the smudge and automatically washing and rewashing after crushing the various sizes. The plant is driven by a 100 horse power steam engine, and the water used in the process of washing is circulated by means of a powerful centrifugal pump which, when in full work, circulates nearly five tons of water per minute. The object in erecting this plant was to produce a high class coke out of a mixture of very dirty hard and soft smudge. The coke produced is of uniform quality, and the ash in the coke is steadily kept below 4 per cent. Besides the preparation of the smudge for the coke ovens a quantity of small peat suitable for fuel is produced by the washer.—New York Telegram.

Naked Children.

Fully three-fourths of the babies of the world go naked until they get to be five or six years old. The Canadian Indians keep their babies naked up to a certain point, and as for the little Coreans, they wear nothing but a short shirt until they are as old as our school boys. Little Egyptians of both sexes trot around without any clothes on, and the poorer portions of the Chinese children are often without clothes. I have seen quite large boys and girls naked in Havana, Cuba, and in southern California, or rather on the Californian peninsula. — Sheffield Telegraph.

It is now demonstrated that the nerves of lower animals may be successfully transplanted to the nerve stumps of man. Dr. Redart successfully grafted the skin of a chicken upon a child 2 years old. Dr. Bartens succeeded in grafting the skin of a dead man 70 years old to that of a boy 14 years old.

One of the best qualities of shaving brushes is made out of the hair of badgers, and the business of catching them is still so active, in spite of their comparative scarcity, that upward of 5,000 badgers' skins were exported to Great Britain from America in one year recently.

The results of mechanical and physical tests are considered by German authorities as having proved the fitness of aluminum bronze for artillery and small arms, particularly as recent experiments with smokeless powders have shown so great an injury to steel made artillery.

According to Professor Francis Fanvel-Gourand, there is a negro king on the west coast of Africa who rejoices in the unpronounceable name of Hagabahasamadasabalanarahitaragaradalammasakalafarhanahmahtalaladalahsalaradhamahagabaha.

What a strong, quick thrill of sympathy must flash from heart to heart when two halting cripples meet and pass on a crowded street—while all about are happy, straight limbed ones who tread life's pathway like crowned kings.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

The richest coal field in England is at Newcastle, where the current thickness of the seams is from three to six feet.

Despite the very best attention bestowed upon the baby, it will grow sick and troublesome by reason of colic, diarrhœa, teething, etc. Do not fail, then, to use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents.

A bad case of catarrh or influenza will always yield to the mild curative qualities of Old Saul's Catarrh Cure. Price only 25 cents.

INDIAN BOYS AS FARMERS.

Bucks County Agriculturists Say They Make Splendid Field Hands.

The farmers of Bucks county say the Indian problem is solved. Two or three years ago one of them applied to the training school at Carlisle for an Indian boy to work in his fields during the summer. The school authorities investigated the man's character, and then sent him a young brave who had given up his toy tomahawk for spelling books and carpenter's tools.

At the end of the summer the farmer was so pleased that the next year he and several friends, who owned farms near Wheat Sheaf, secured the services of other Indians, and the number has been increased until about fifty of the copper hued youngsters hustled hoes and dug 'taters within a radius of ten miles from Tullytown and Wheat Sheaf.

One of those who has employed the Carlisle pupils for several years is John Carter, who lives at the summit of Turkey hill, a couple of miles from Tullytown.

"The Indian boys I had," he said, "behaved themselves well."

J. W. Wright, of Wheat Sheaf, has also experimented with redskin help, and he is very enthusiastic about the plan.

"Why, those boys from Carlisle are splendid," said Mr. Wright. "We take them for a term of months or for a year, just as we care to arrange, only if we get them by the year they must be sent to school during the winter. The Carlisle people make no definite arrangements about pay; we give the boys from $4 to $12 a month and their board. They work hard and seem to take the greatest delight in doing a job neatly.

"Then they don't waste time; there's no white boy 'slouch' to 'em. Give an Indian work and he'll bend down over it and stick there until it's finished. They almost invariably tell the truth, and the boys I have had never misbehaved. Then they are doubly valuable as farm hands, because nearly all the lads are masters of one or more trades, such as carpentering, blacksmithing or harness making. We farmers up here would rather have to work for us one Carlisle boy than two white boys, such as grow up right here in the county."

In Mr. Wright's mind the only deplorable hereditary trait that is possessed by the young braves is their love for finery. They cannot get wampum, beads, eagles, feathers and red ochre, and they do not want these adjuncts to happiness. But their spare cash goes for nice clothing, new hats and becoming neckwear.—Philadelphia Press.

Why Politicians Are Big Men.

There is no more trying business than politics. Men of long experience in the elections in New York watch the leaders of the different parties with an interest that is more or less grewsome. The steady, interminable and violent wear and tear on the men who head the big political movements tell on their looks, weight and manner so rapidly that the most sturdy constitutions would break down under it if it were not for the short period during which the excitement lasts.

The men who are so fond of tracing the subtle connection between the physical appearance of man and his mental occupations should consider that one reason why the successful New York politician is always represented as a broad shouldered, powerfully built man, with a thick neck, a round head and a plentiful supply of strength is because about the only successful ward workers in town who are able to hold their own as the years roll by must have a strong physique.—New York Sun.

Care of the Teeth.

Nothing is more conducive to sweetness of breath, and consequently of general health of the mouth, than to brush the teeth regularly shortly before retiring, that all particles of food, as well as the natural secretions, may be removed. Castile soap is the best which can be used for cleansing the mouth, with which a little magnesia may be employed; a solution of oil of peppermint in water makes an agreeable and useful mouth wash; while a silken thread may be employed to cleanse the spaces between the teeth which can be effectively reached in no other way. A fine tooth powder can be made of six ounces of prepared chalk, cassia powder half an ounce, and an ounce of orris root. These are to be well mixed, and may be colored with red lake or any other innocent substance, according to the fancy.—Good Housekeeping.

Hold It To The Light.

In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.

An Afflicted Citizen.

"If you can spare me a few moments of your time, madame," he said taking off a hat that had seen better days in the dim and misty past. "I should like to explain why I am compelled to appear before you as an applicant for charity."

"Proceed," said the lady.

"You have no objections, I presume, to my leaning against this pillar of the portico to rest myself?"

"None whatever."

He leaned his robust frame against one of the posts, coughed behind his hand and began:

"I have not always been reduced to this necessity madam. In happier days not far distant, I was at the head of a successful business in a flourishing city. I had a good bank account. I was in the enjoyment of excellent health my domestic relations were pleasant, and I was the recipient of many civic offices. My trouble began with the death of my grandfather."

He pulled out a once red bandana handkerchief, wiped a corner of each eye, and resumed:

"He was a good man, and I was much attached to him. His loss moved me deeply. Then my only great-uncle died. To lose one's only great uncle, madam," he continued, in a broken voice, "brings a pang that I trust you may never know."

"What next?" inquired the lady.

"The next affliction that befell me was a fire that destroyed the home of my wife's aunt. She was a most estimable lady. The loss was total, and there was no insurance. I sympathized deeply with her, and she—she came to spend the winter with me. She brought her whole family."

He paused as if to note the effect of this, coughed behind his hand again, and wiped his eyes with the bandana reminiscence as before.

"Well?"

"Well, madam, bore up as well as I could until my boy—my eldest—the centre of my fondest hopes—excuse this emotion, madam—"

"Certainly."

"I bore up until my boy began to chew tobacco. Then my health failed.

"You don't look like a sickly man."

"I am aware of it, madam. My trouble is one of—of nerves, madam. The doctor advised me to travel. I could not follow their advice, then, owing to business complications. In the troubles that came upon me our stock of goods had run down to some extent. Then come the passage of the McKinley bill, and—"

"What had that to do with it?"

"It was the final blow. We had expected, of course, to mark our goods up and realize handsomely, but—"

"Well?"

"We—we had no goods to mark up."

"And then?"

"And then I took to the—that is, I began to travel. It was the doctor's advice. Then I—"

"Well?"

"Then I—"

"Yes, then you—"

"I—"

"Why don't you go ahead?"

"Madam," said the traveler, straightening himself up. "I see it is useless. I have not awakened your sympathies."

"Not a cent's worth."

"Not even to the extent of"—he suggested with another laborious cough behind his hand—"of a cold collation?"

"No."

"I might have known it!" he exclaimed, putting on his hat and turning away. "In telling my story, madam, I am usually interrupted at the greatuncle part of it by the offer of substantial sympathy. To the fact that you permitted me to proceed until I became entangled in the McKinley bill, madam," he added, with bitter reproach in his tone, "I attribute this ignoble failure. I have not fallen in my own esteem, madam, but my faith in human nature has received a terrible shock."

He thrust one hand in the breast of what had once been a black cloth coat, waved a majestic farewell with the other, and was gone.—Chicago Tribune.

Happiness Not Dependent Upon Wealth.

There are rich women whose whole lives would have been happier in all probability had they been poor: they have energy, capacity, industry, and could have supported themselves honestly and usefully; but now those faculties are all absorbed in the effort to be just stewards of what is given them. They spend sparingly on themselves and munificently on others; but the lavishness costs harder work than the economy. They consume days in the care of institutions or the guidance of individuals; they never take a holiday; they lie awake at night wondering if they have done rightly in paying the fine and costs of John Jones, and giving him his tenth opportunity to keep out of jail and beat his children; or whether the world is to be benefitted, on the whole, by the Combined Institution for Supplying Pennies to the Penniless. While they seem to be only "in the swim" of society, and are possibly regarded as types of fashion's butterflies, they are in reality working harder than any business man, and are unable to lay aside their cares, as he often does, on closing the doors of the counting-room. The poor think of all the beautiful tastes which they cannot gratify, but which they could freely carry out were they only rich. But the rich meanwhile are sometimes envying the poor, who have none of the cares of stewardship, and can spend their spare hours, when earned, as they please. I once went with a young girl who had been economically enjoying a summer's outing on the sea-shore to call upon a woman more generally envied, perhaps, than one in her own familiar circle. She had wealth, beauty, immense personal popularity, conscientious activity in a hundred ways, and a touch of genius in art. "What have you been doing this vacation?" she said to her young visitor. "Sketching" was the answer. "Happy girl!" said her hostess. "I have been only able to get one morning's sketching this whole season."—T. W. Higginson, in Harper's Bazaar.

The Wonderful Tower.

The highest structure in the world is Eiffel Tower, at Paris, 1,000 feet high. But the great discovery of Dr. Franklin Miles is certain to tower far above it in promoting human happiness and health. This wonderful nerve medicine builds up worn out systems, cures fits, sparms, headache, nervous prostration, dizziness, sleeplessness, monthly pains, sexual troubles etc. Mrs. John R. Miller, of Valparaiso, Ind., and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., gained 20 pounds a month while taking it. Finely illustrated treatise on "Nervous Diseases," and a sample bottle of the Restorative Nervine, free at Charles H. Buss's.

Nothing in the Wide World so Good.

I was afflicted with Kidney disease. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y.—I say it with a perfect recollection of all that was done for me besides—is the only thing that gave me permanent relief. I have recommended it to many people for Kidney disease and they all agree that it has not its equal for this complaint.—Lyman Crawford, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

I have too many Cloaks in stock. I must get rid of them at some price. I will offer them at lower prices than ever known in this city.

Ranging from $3.00 to $12.00.

I will sell all kinds of Gent's Underwear, Stockings and Neckties, 20 to 25 per cent. less than the usual price elsewhere and everywhere.

I have an extraordinary bargain in Brown Cotton for 7 cents, usually sold for 11 cents. I am smashing the prices on all Millinery Trimmed Goods. And giving bargains in all departments.

I have never been able to sell Nos. 9 and 12 all Silk Ribbon at 10 cents till this season. Gentleman's 37c. Hose at 25 cents, are not found in every place. Call and examine them.

CHRISTMAS GOODS.

Don't delay Christmas purchases. Although the capacity of this store is very great, it is always thronged on Christmas week and many times inconveniently crowded. Better selections can be made and great discomfort avoided by prompt attention to purchasing. I will lay aside for future delivery any article purchased if so desired. It is needless for me to describe or attempt to name the great number of beautiful things on exhibition. It is well known that for many years this is the Banner Store for Holiday Goods. And as for that matter, it is striding ahead and capturing the trade wonderfully, as all observers are aware. Big Stock, well selected variety, much hard work and Low Prices, are sure to win.

WAKE UP GENTLEMEN!

THE KING OF FRIEZE — FOR —

Drivers, Conductors, Railroad-Men, Milk-Men and all whose business is out of doors and who wish a warm and strong ULSTER, we recommend and guarantee ours.

It is absolutely storm and wind proof, as will be seen by the following letter:—

To Whom it May Concern:

In February, 1889, the STANDARD CLOTHING COMPANY sent me a Dark Oxford Mix Freize Ulster, which they call their "King of Freize," with the request to give it the hardest possible wear during the balance of the winter.

Although there was no snow of any amount, it was a very wet season, and I wore the coat daily in my business, and found it exactly as they represented, impervious to water and snow. I have the ulster in use now, and confidently recommend it as the most desirable, strongest, warmest ulster that I have ever owned.

The price of the "King of Freize," $12, brings it within the reach of every hack driver, herdic driver, car driver, or any one whose business is out of doors, and who needs a coat that will shed water or snow.

THE CRATER CITY.

"There's a great many curious things in this word," said my friend, Andrew Johns, as he removed his cigar and looked meditatively into space.

"And you look as though you were seeing some of them," I answered, smiling at his abstraction.

"So I am—in my mind. I see a sand crater facing a river in India. Inside of this dismal hole is a miserable village, peopled by miserable inhabitants," he went on, soberly. "There is no escape, no hope for them—they are dead! But wait; you shall hear the story. I have a notion for telling it to-night."

He threw away his cigar and was silent for some moments, while his wife a slight, dark woman, moved to a seat by his side and laid one hand caressingly on his.

Andrew had married her abroad and had never revealed her nationality.

"I will tell you of a strange adventure which befell —a friend of mine—Hal Andrews. It happened while he was stopping at Benares, the sacred city of the Hindoos and the stronghold of idolatry and superstition, when making a lazy pleasure tour of Asia.

"Benares had a peculiar fascination for him, as the oldest known habitation of man on the globe, and the Ganges, the sacred river, was especially attractive.

"More than once he watched the burning of bodies upon the funeral pyres along the river. These pyres are of logs—the bottom ones five feet long, with shorter ones across until they reach the height of three feet, then the naked body is placed thereon, more logs are added, and all is set on fire. When burned the ashes are carefully collected and thrown into the Ganges.

"Widows were formerly burned alive with their dead husbads, but it is now a matter sf choice, and—strange as it may seem—many of them choose that horrible death to the living death of being without caste or friends, as a widow must.

"One morning as he was watching funeral preparations, the corpse suddenly showed signs of life. Instantly there was a startled commotion among the howling relatives.

"Mud was hastily thrust into nose and mouth, but still the ungrateful maiden would not die.

"At last she sat upright and the relatives fled, the spectators shrugged their shoulders and turned away, and four native police advanced and bound the maiden, in spite of her cries and entreaties.

"'Will they kill her?' Hal asked, indignantly, of a bystander.

"'Oh, no!' was the indifferent answer. 'She is already dead, and must go to the Crater City.'

"'Is there, then, a city of the dead where unfortunates who escape the pyre are kept until death really claims them?' asked Hal again.

"'There is."

"The answer was given reluctantly.

"'Where is it?' persisted Hal.

"'No one can tell.'

"The answer was significant and decisive.

"'You mean no one will tell me; but I will find out!' cried Hal, hotly. 'It is a shame—an outrage!'

"'Very likely.'

"And with another shrug of the shoulders the man turned away, after giving Hal a few last words of advice:

"'Don't say too much about it while you stay in India.'

"But the scene haunted Hal. The maiden was young and beautiful, for Hindoo women are among the most beautiful on earth.

"What a horrible death in life!' he mused, as he mounted his horse and rode out into the surrounding country, followed closely by Baba, his native servant boy, who was devotedly attached to him.

"He followed along the course of the Ganges, and his thoughts were with the lovely maiden, who had recovered from the semblance of death to meet a worse fate than the funeral pyre.

"Suddenly his horse shied and dashed madly ahead, regardless of all efforts which Hal made to control him.

"Baba uttered a cry of dismay, and dashing along as fast as possible, tried to keep him in sight.

"On rushed the frightened horse, while Hal tried in vain to check him—up a sloaping, sandy ridge, then along the rise, until—Hal gave a low cry of incredulous surprise—the horse snorted, and turned to flee, the sand gave way under his feet, and Hal knew no more after the fall.

"When he recovered consciousness enough to feel an interest in his surroundings, he saw a wretched village surrounded by a natural barrier of sand on three sides, and by the river in front.

"A number of half-naked people crowded curiously around him, and among them was the maiden of the funeral pyre. He was in the city of the dead!

"The day passed slowly enough, and night came.

"As Hal was meditating upon the chances of escape, a soft voice near him said, in broken English and Hindoo, of which he knew enough to understand the meaning:

"'Do you wish to escape? It is useless. This is the city from which none ever return.'

"'There is—there must be some way of escape!' cried Hal, impatiently.

"'The sand barrier prevents all escape by land; and see,' the maiden continued, leading him to the river bank.

"The river was filled with numberless crocodiles—great, wicked-looking creatures—waiting viciously for any attempt at escape; and, besides these hideous sentinels, a boat filled with native soldiers was anchored near by.

"'You understand?' said the maiden, significantly, as Hal sank back with a groan.

"Two days passed. Hal made desperate attempts to scale the sandy wall, but in vain, as the maiden watched him with sympathy, and the rest of the miserable creatures viewed his struggles with the calm indifference born of the despair resulting from similar trials.

"The third night came, and as Hal paced the circuit of the enclosure, he heard a low whistle.

"Looking up, he saw Baba's eager face peering over the sandy bank, while a coil of rope fell at my feet.

"A soft sigh near by told him that his companion in despair had seen his chance of escape, also.

"Gently with swift, eager fingers Hal fastened the rope around her waist, whispered a few directions, and gave Baba the signal to draw her up.

"She reached the top safely, again the rope fell, and Hal took his own turn, not a moment too soon, for from all points of the miserable village, eager, howling wretches came hurrying to take the chance of escape from him.

"'Hurry, master!' said Baba, excitedly. 'Tomorrow's sun must see you far from Benares, for dead people must never return to mingle with the living, and you have seen the mysterious city.'

"Faithful Baba! He had disobeyed the laws to save his master, and no wonder that he wished to leave the place.

"There is little more to tell. He reached—they reached the frontier in safety, for the maiden accompanied him. If she had remained, she would have been returned to the Crater City, or else doomed to a living death upon the funeral pyre."

"What more?" I demanded, as he stopped, with a significant glance at his wife.

"Nothing—except this," he answered, emphatically. "My name is Henry Andrew Johns. Sometimes I have passed under the name of Hal Andrews, and my wife was a Hindoo maiden, before an English education changed her views of life."—Saturday Night.

The Metropolitan Sewerage District.

In the territory embraced in the North Metropolitan Sewerage District, the name applied to the Mystic Valley section, the cities to be benefitted are Boston, Cambridge, Somerville, Malden, Chelsea, Woburn and the towns of Stoneham, Melrose, Winchester, Arlington, Belmont, Medford, Everett and Winthrop.

The most distant point is 17 1-2 miles from the Deer Island outlet, near the line between Stoneham and Woburn. Here the sewer will be about 48 feet above low tide and the diameter 1 foot 3 inches. It is not intended that the sewers shall in all cases be circular, but they are intended to be of a capacity equivalent to circular sewers of of the diameter given.

The sewer extends down the valley through East Woburn and Winchester Highlands to the Mystic Valley sewer built by the city of Boston. Here it receives two 15-inch branches from Woburn, and continues along Abbajona river in Winchester—by the sewer already built and by new work in Medford—to West Medford, where its grade is eight feet above low tide, and diameter is three feet two inches. Here it receives sewage from the Alewife brook branch and continues through Medford Centre and Wellington to Malden river, with diameters increasing from four feet four inches to five feet, and the bottom of the sewer reaches the level of low tide.

Passing under Malden River by two iron pipes 30 inches in diameter, which are depressed about 6 feet below the general line of the sewer, it continues five feet in diameter through Everett to the Saugus Branch railroad. Here it is met by the branch from the eastern part of Stoneham, through Melrose and Malden, bringing the sewage of these towns, and having diameters increasing from 10 inches to 3 feet four inches.

At Deer Island pumping station all of the sewage is to be pumped a height varying with the height of the tide—from 10 feet to 14 feet. It is conveyed along the island 1000 feet through a sewer 6 feet wide and of varying height, and then through two iron pipes 4 feet in diameter buried on the harbor side of the bar below low water for a distance of about 2000 feet, and rising near the end to a few inches above low tide at the outlet, which is a little west from Deer Island beacon. Here, on the north border of the main ship channel, the ends of the pipes will be encased in a heavy wall of masonry, off against which the bottom rapidly slopes to a depth of more than 50 feet below low tide.

In twenty-five or thirty years the system will need to be enlarged by an additional siphon pipe at Belle Isle inlet, and one at Shirley Gut, each 4 feet in diameter, and by an additional outlet pipe at Deer Island, also 4 feet in diameter, and by additional pumping machinery. In other respects the system is, as first to be constructed, of ample capacity to serve the district for 40 years.

The estimated cost of the whole work of trunk line and main branches, with outlet, with pumping machinery and all furnishing necessary for disposing of the sewage of the district when the population is 290,000—which is the estimated population in 1892—is $4,153,453. The additional expense in construciion to make the system capable of disposing of the sewage of the district 40 years hence, when the population shall have reached 513,000, will be due to the increased pumping capacity and to additional outlet and siphon pipes, amounting to $224,400 making the total cost for construction up to 1930, $4,383,853—Malden City Press.

The Pulpit and the Stage.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a thorough trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it." Free trial bottles at H. L. Flanders & Co.'s Drug Store. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

Woman's Column.

Ghost Dances and Tomahawks vs. Women.

One of the most curious facts so far developed by the imperfect returns from South Dakota is that a larger proportion of votes were cast for Indian suffrage than for woman suffrage. The votes, so far as received, show that of 100 men voting on woman suffrage, 37 voted for and 63 against the women; while of 100 men voting on Indian suffrage 45 voted for and 55 against the Indians.

And now, within a month, these very voters are appealing to the U. S. Government for troops to defend them from these very Indians, crazed by fanaticism, who are spending their nights in whetting their tomahawks and in naked ghost-dances on the prairie, and their days in plotting devastation and massacre against their terrified white neighbors.

Was there ever before so striking a demonstration of the power of prejudice over reason, justice, and common sense? HENRY B. BLACKWELL.

Mrs. Dorothy Tennant Stanley visited Wellesley the other day, and expressed warm admiration of the college and grounds. The college girls gathered on the balconies and welcomed the bride of the distinguished African explorer with their own college cheer.

Mrs. Annie Baxter, of Jasper County, Missouri, has just been elected County Clerk. She was nominated on the Democratic ticket in a Republican county, which makes her success the more noteworthy. She is the first woman elected to this office in the South.

Virginia has no college for women, but one is in prospect. A land company of Lynchburg has offered to give Randolph-Macon College twenty acres of land for a women's college, and add $40,000 in money and $60,000 in bonds, provided $100,000 more is raised for the endowment fund.

Mrs. Mary Gould Eckhart passes triumphantly that test of practical capacity, the ability to keep a hotel. She owns the largest caterer's business in the western division of Chicago, manages it herself, and is noted for the invention of new and popular flavors and dishes.

Miss Alida M. Mehan is the school supervisor of Thomaston, Me. She has full authority over all the public schools of the town, and has discharged the duties of her responsible position so well that after a year's service she has been re-elected for another term. Miss Mehan is a graduate of Smith College, class of '84.

Mrs. Therese A. Jenkins, of Cheyenne, Wyoming, has just been appointed National Superintendent of Franchise for the W. C. T. U. There is an appropriateness in having this office filled by a woman of Wyoming. She can testify from personal experience to the good effects of equal suffrage in a community where it has prevailed for more than twenty years.

During the recent illness of Street Commissioner Beattie, of New York City, his department was controlled for a fortnight by his private secretary, Miss Cynthia Westover, who superintended 1,500 men. Miss Westover went about personally to decide which streets were in worst condition, and assigned every day the dumpcarts and sweepers. Knowing just how much money she could spend daily, she engaged or discharged hands accordingly, having harrowing experiences with Italians who sought to move her by bringing sick babies in their arms to prove that they must have work whatever the state of the department's treasury. Miss Westover is a woman of great executive ability. When no one was there to attend to it, she would herself measure a dump-cart's capacity. She is young and handsome, and is one of New York's four women notaries.

Great Discoverers.

What Bell and Edison are to the telephone and electricity, says the Pittsburg News, Dr. Franklin Miles, the well-known specialist in nervous diseases, is to the nervous system and nerve fluid. Among his numerous discoveries the Restorative Nervine is undoubtedly one of the greatest. It is unsurpassed in nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, epilepsy, neuralgia, backache, melancholly, sleeplessness, change of life, etc. Free trial bottles of it may be had of Charles H. Bass, Druggist. All should read his "New and Startling Facts for the Afflicted," a very able, interesting, and finely illustrated book. Free to all.

The only engine on the Maryland Southern railroad ran off the track into a ditch last year and there wasn't sufficient money in the treasury to restore it to its former position. The motive power is now supplied by two horses, who make the round trip of eighteen miles, from Hughesville to Brandywine and back, in eight hours when the mud is not very deep.

The Father

Of all diseases is impure blood, when loaded with foul humor. How important then that the blood should be pure, rich, and strong, without which there can be no health. To purify the blood Sulphur Bitters is incomparably the best medicine that it is possible to obtain.—THE EDITOR.

The returns of the Indian railways for the year just passed show encouraging financial results. The net loss to the state is just under 100 lacs of rupees, and is mainly due to military and guaranteed lines. The former were never expected to be remunerative, while the loss on the latter is chiefly due to the high rate of guaranteed interest.

The Illinois Central during the past year bought 89 locomotives, 65 passenger coaches, 2,650 freight cars, 10 baggage cars and 10 postal cars, built 40 bridges and laid 26,000 tons of rails.

THE COTTAGE HEARTH for December contains much reading that will be interesting to everybody. Its contents are no less instructive than intertaining

The December number is one of the best, with which the ladies especially will be delighted.

We give the JOURNAL ($2 per year) and the COTTAGE HEARTH ($1.50 a year) for $2 IN ADVANCE.

The December number of ST. NICHOLAS has for frontispiece Rembrandt's wonderful portrait of himself, engraved by T. Johnson. This portrait is referred to in Mrs. Dodge's account of Holland and its strange features. There are to be two of these papers, and it is the first which here appears under the name "The Land of Pluck, fully illustrated by new drawings made expressly by George Wharton Edwards. New and old readers of Hans Brinker will welcome these sketches gladly. Another important contribution is The Story of the Golden Fleece, retold for American boys and girls by Andrew Lang, with illustrations by Birch—this number containing the introduction only. There are many other good things in the number which is a real holiday one. Each paper is finely illustrated.

The most important issue of THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY in many months is the December number. It contains the first of a series of carefully written and generously illustrated articles on The Development of American Industries since Columbus. The manufacture of iron and steel is to be described by Mr. W. F. Durfee, and the opening paper deals with our First Steps in Iron-making. Mr. Appleton Morgan asks What shall we do with the "Dago"? The recent surprising discoveries of Dr. Henri Hertz in regard to electricity are given by Dr. Hertz himself. Rev. Dr. Henry C. McCook contributes Defenses of Burrowing Spiders, with illustrations. Mr. John C. Branner describes The Pororoca, or Bore, of the Amazon. In Architecture and the Environment Mr. Barr Ferree offers some practical observations in the interest of sound taste in building. The number contains many other papers of interest and value. Published by D. Appleton & Co., N. Y.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, N. Y.

The Minnesota supreme court has decided that all upper berths on sleeping cars must remain closed while unsold.

An Editor's Curious Find.

When the editor of The Athens Banner was living in St. James Goose Creek parish, near Charleston, S. C., he once found a large iron box in an old field, badly eaten with rust. Through curiosity he secured a hammer, and assisted by two negroes broke a hole into it, but some charred human bones and a small key that unlocked the chest were all that rewarded his pains. It was afterward learned that in the early settlement of Carolina an old bachelor left in his will $10,000 to anyone who would place his bones in an iron box and burn over it 100 cords of pine wood.

One key was to be placed in a bottle filled with lead, and dropped into a hole in Cooper river, where bottom was never found, and the other left in the coffin. A poor young man complied with the will, and was paid $10,000. The rest of the old man's money he buried, and no one ever found it. He believed that if a person's body was burned in this world he would escape fire in the next. The iron chest is doubtless still where it was left.—Atlanta Constitution.

It is a Mistake

To try to cure catarrh by using local applications. Catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It is not a disease of the man's nose, but of the man. Therefore, to effect a cure, requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, expelling the taint which causes the disease, and imparting health.

It has been stated that the coming railway city is being located at Wall's Station on the Pennsylvania line fourteen miles east of Pittsburg. The company has secured 600 acres of land and will erect machine, repair and finishing shops. It is predicted that within a year the town will have a population of 4,000 people.

This is important to nine out of ten people; Old Sanl's Catarrh Cure is easily applied and will cure the worst cases of catarrh.

Mothers, if your baby suffers pain and is restless, do not stupefy it by administering opiates; but soothe it with a reliable remedy, such as Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price only 25 cents.

The Busk-Ivanhoe tunnel through the Sauguache range will be 9,350 feet long, and will cost about $1,000,000. It will have only a single track through it, but will be as complete a piece of work of its kind as there is in the country.

WHY THEY DO IT.

Cambridge, Somerville, Malden and some other places near Boston voted in favor of continuing the plan of no license by good round majorities at their charter election this year. These cities vote for prohibition every time and solely because it pays. They are populous and would naturally go for rum, and yet they vote steadily against it at every election.

It is purely a matter of business with them. Even in boastful Somerville there are probably as many men to the acre who drink rum as there are in Woburn, but a large majority of them vote "No" when election day comes round. Why do they thus vote? Because it is money in their pockets to do so. It insures a better class of population, a higher standard of morals, more desirable social conditions, better prices for real estate, lower taxes, quick rents at good figures, and yields other things equally desirable.

The men who have money and social influence, although they indulge in the use of intoxicating liquors, vote against the establishment of the saloon in their own cities and towns. They know that the saloon keeps people from settling among them, and those who come are of the poorest kind of stuff to build a town of; that capital shuns it; real estate is a drug; and, taken by and large, the saloon town isn't a good residence town, nor a flourishing town, nor the best kind of a town to go to and make a home in.

Cambridge and Somerville and Malden understand these things—they don't want any saloon in theirs, and at every charter election they set their faces as flint against it. Thus those places flourish. They are growing at a wonderful rate. The best class of people are settling in them—people of wealth, culture, good morals, etc.; all over them fine residences are all the time going up; and Boston people are constantly seeking homes in them.

It is not so where the saloon flourishes. The cities named above know it, and therefore they vote "No" on the license question every chance they get. They go on the principle that "business is business."

BOSTON CITY ELECTION.

The city of Boston held her charter election last Tuesday and was captured by the Democracy, as usual. The worst political elements will continue to hold the fort and steal from the public crib without let or hindrance for another year at least.

Moody Merrill, the Republican candidate for Mayor, was defeated by 13,000 majority, and the wonder is that he got off as well as he did. He deserved it, and the Republicans deserved it too for not squelching him before he got his nomination papers in. He is politically not above suspicion, and his personal popularity is at a low ebb. The idea that he has, one time and another, been mixed up with official jobbing had much to do in downing him last Tuesday.

Merrill nominated himself. He had to because a large majority of his party were hotly opposed to his becoming a candidate. He has been a heavy load to carry during the campaign and his overthrow on Tuesday was a surprise to nobody.

— The recount in Wards 4 and 7 resulted in no change.

— J. P. Shields, druggist, is putting in dead loads of holiday goods.

— There are stacks and stacks of beautiful books at Willard Smith's.

— Read what Copeland & Bowser have to say about Christmas goods.

— John I. Munroe is looking for a good landlord for the Hotel Windsor.

— Mr. Charles M. Munroe has something interesting to say in his card today.

— Yesterday was another of those balmy winter days when to live is a luxury.

— Tuesday last was a day that any lover of his country had a right to feel proud of.

— The high wind of a week ago smashed a valuable pane of glass in the postoffice.

— We are in receipt of the annual report of the President and Treasurer of Tufts College.

— Mrs. Anna Vaughn, the Court street milliner, is enjoying a handsome anti-holiday trade.

— We have received several nice publications from Mr. Warren Teel of Davenport, Iowa, lately.

— Mr. C. E. Smith has secured the stock of F. M. Frye and will sell wall papers, etc., at a big discount.

— The Public Library Bulletin just issued by Librarian Cutter is an improvement over former issues.

— City Clerk Moreland has suffered quite a spell of sickness of late, but he is on his feet again in good shape.

— Tomorrow evening the Woburn Blues Minstrels will give a concert at Fraternity Hall. They are good ones.

— Nahmeokee Council, D. of P., will give a social assembly at Red Men's Hall Wednesday evening, Dec. 27.

— Those who fail to attend James Kay Applebee's lecture on Charles Dickens this evening will miss a good thing.

— Martin Doyle of Bedford street had a carriage robe and whip stolen from his stable the other night. Look out for thieves.

— John I. Munroe has to let two nearly new Queen Ann houses centrally located on line of horse cars with bath room and water closets

— There was quite a nice bit of sleighing until the warm sun and wind of Tuesday took the snow all off. It was equally good wheeling.

— Last week Thursday John Maguire's little girl of 32 Highland street fell on the ice and broke her right arm. She was sent to the hospital.

— The Boston Water Board have enjoined the Tufts College Block in this city (old Wade Block) from emptying its sewerage into Meadow Brook.

— Mr. M. Downs of Cummingsville is canvassing this city for subscribers to some standard literary works and is meeting with good success.

— The Boston Branch, Fitz & Stanley proprietors, is full and running over with fruits, nuts, confections, canned goods, etc., for Christmas.

— The ice on Horn Pond is several inches thick and the boys are having great fun skating on it. There will be no shortage in the ice crop this winter.

— The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Woburn First National Bank for the election of officers will be held in the Bank parlors on Jan. 12 next.

— Mr. Levi W. Cooper of Taunton while here visiting last week fell on the ice and broke his left arm. Dr. Seth W. Kelley was called and attended to the case.

— A few days since Dr. S. W. Kelley was called to treat George F. Barton, engineer at the Glue Works, who had a shoulder thrown out of joint by a severe fall.

— On one of the freezing nights of last week Patrick Garrity of Montvale went into a shed near home to sleep and had his feet so badly frozen that he was sent to the Mass. Gen. Hospital.

— The Womans Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will give an entertainment on the evening of the 16th instant which will be likely to attract a large attendance. It will be something worth attending.

— The Armory Committee are examining plans for a new building to accommodate the soldiery of the city. Land has been bought of Mrs. Timothy Winn near the present site of the Episcopal church.

— A number of her very good friends gave Miss May Simonds a surprise party on Thursday evening of last week at her home, No. 33 Green St. It was a very happy affair and highly pleasing to Miss May.

— Mrs. Ann B. Skinner received a paralytic shock on Thursday at 9 A. M. from which she died at an early hour this morning. She leaves three children, James and Jennie Skinner and Mrs. J. K. Murdock.

— Mr. Lovell, the druggist, returned from New Hampshire last week where he had been in response to a summons to come to his very sick child. He remained until it was out of danger and then returned to his business.

— Especial attention is directed to the advertisement of holiday goods by Mr. Lovell in this paper. We advise our people not to go to Boston for their holiday presents until they have given Lovell's a careful examination.

— Young Mr. French, who for some time has been acting as assistant to General Secretary Bailey of the Woburn Y. M. C. A., has charge of the Winchester Y. M. C. A. during the illness and absence of the General Secretary.

— Brewster Colony, No. 19, U. O. P. F., will on Dec. 18th, initiate six candidates into the Colony; the election of officers will also take place. In Jan. 1, 1891, the Colony will give a New Years party to visiting Colonies and Deputies.

— One day last week Frank B. Woodward, an employee of the building firm of Singer & Brown, fell from the Highland school building in course of construction, a distance of 20 feet, and was seriously injured, Dr. Chalmers was called.

— Miss Crosby, for six years a missionary at the Micronesian Islands, will speak before the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church on Friday evening, Dec. 12. All are cordially invited to attend.—Y. P. S. C. E Mis. Com.

— A non-partisan movement has been started by prominent citizens to have Mr. Lawrence Reade reappointed postmaster at the expiration of his present term. He is very popular with all parties and hard work will be done to retain him.

— Rev. Mathew F. McDonnell received a substantial money gift from the Married Womens Sodality of St. Charles (R. C.) Church in this city a few days ago. Fr. McDonnell maintains a high standing with the parishioners of St. Charles.

— Henry F. Davis, member of the firm of J. F. Freeman & Co., machinists, left last Monday for New York City, Michigan, Pennsylvania, etc., on business, and will return via Washington, D. C., for pleasure.

— Mr. Charles Flagg, a native of Woburn, aged about 71 years, and a citizen well esteemed, died at his home at No. 662 Main street, at noon on Wednesday last quite suddenly. He had been in poor health for several years. He left a wife and three children.

— On the evening of the 16th instant the Womans Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will give an entertainment of a unique character. The name of it is "Envelope Party," the same to wind up with an "Orange Tree." The admission to it will be only 10 cents.

— Mr. J. L. Smith, of Lock's Hill, Winchester, an old time acquaintance of the skipper of this craft, paid the JOURNAL office his annual visit last Tuesday and found people in it who were glad to see him. His farm and hospitable home are on Ridge street, and there he takes comfort, as he deserves to do.

— One of the best Christmas presents for a man is a Shaving Stand in English Oak. The mirror is adjustable to any height and revolves sideways. The drawers are finished with razor racks, cup boxes and all compartments. These stands can be purchased very low at Paine's Furniture Warerooms, 48 Canal street, Boston.

— Miss Lena Brown, who was appointed Second Assistant Principle of the High School in this city, is a daughter of Mr. Wilbur Brown of Pleasant street, a graduate of Wellesley College, and a very bright and highly accomplished young lady. The choice of the Board will no doubt turn out to be very judicious one for the cause of education here.

— James Kay Applebee will give his celebrated lecture on "Charles Dickens, Sentimentalist and Humorist" under the auspices of the Friday Night Club, Friday, Dec. 12, at 7. 30 p. m., at the Unitarian church. Mr. Applebee is one of the most popular lecturers in New England. The price of admission is designed simply to cover expenses and is but ten cents.

— The productions which we present from the busy pen of our regular antiquarian contributor this week are of great interest to many people in this city who, we dare say, will duly appreciate their value as additions to the history of the old place and take care to choicely preserve them. Other good things from the same pen will soon appear in the columns of the JOURNAL.

— Branch No. 428, O. I. H., have elected the following officers: Chief Justice, Herbert M. Blanchard; Vice-Justice, William H. Huber; Adjuster, Sylvanus Patterson; Prelate, Adoniram J. Chute; Herald, Algernon B. Kidd; Watchman, Thomas S. Casey; Vidette, Sewall D. Samson; Past Chief Justice, Nathaniel Jenkins; Trustees, Sewall D. Samson, Nathaniel Jenkins, Charles E. Tripp.

— Dr. Frank W. and Mrs. Graves have recently secured and hung up in the parlor of their pleasant residence one of Albert Thompson's best paintings. It is a fine piece of work and justifies the pride which its present owners take in it. It is a cattle and landscape piece (work in which Mr. Thompson excels), and it is doubtful if Mr. Thompson has ever done anything better with his brush.

— It is expected that Florence Howe-Hall will address the Woburn Woman's Club on Friday next, Dec. 19, and if so, her theme will be "The Art of Conversation." The lady is the daughter of Julia Ward Howe so well known in literary circles, on the platform, and in Boston society, and is said to be as gifted and learned as her brilliant mother. Her appearance on the rostrum here will doubtless attract a large number of Woburn's cultivated people.

— Last Tuesday evening the following officers were elected by Baldwin Council, 125, Royal Arcanum; Regent, Henry H. Leathe; Vice-Regent, Algernon B. Kidd; Orator, Francis A Partridge; Secretary, Edward C. Leathe; Collector, Thomas B. Evans; Treasurer, Alva S. Wood; Chaplain, Sewall D. Samson; Guide, Nathaniel Jenkins; Warden, Seth T. Gifford, Sentry, William Miller; Trustees, Frederic A. Fint, James Buel, Charlie A. Jones.

— Post 161, G. A. R. held their annual election last week and chose the following officers; Commander, Dr. Frank W. Graves; Senior Vice, James L. Pinkham; Junior Vice, George H. Ayer; Surgeon, John W. Nichols; Chaplain, J. Howard Nason; Quartermaster, Newall Z. Tabor; Officer of the Day, Benjamin F. Smith; Officer of Guard, Benjamin F. Story; Delegates to Department Convention, Dr. Frank W. Graves, James L. Pinkham, John Maloney; Alternate, Edwin F. Wyer.

— Dealers in holiday goods miss it by not displaying them earlier. Most people want to buy presents more at their leisure and not be compelled to keep on a regular jump and strike to get what they are after. In default of finding holiday goods here these folks, tired of waiting, go into Boston and spend their money there. Then our dealers don't like it and get on their ears. Fetch out your Christmas gift goods, gentlemen and ladies—your best and handsomest—and give the people a chance to buy before the rush sets in.

— The new steamer "Boston" of the Yarmouth Steamship Company Line made an exhibition trip down the Harbor last Monday afternoon with several scores of prominent Boston gentlemen as guests of the Company. The sail occupied about three hours and a half and was a pleasant affair. The "Boston," a large and elegant steamer, was thoroughly examined and much admired by the people aboard of her on this exhibition trip. The JOURNAL returns thanks for complimentary tickets.

— We have reason to believe that the idea of doing away with the literary exhibition of the High School graduation next June is a popular one with the class. Indeed, we have been informed that all of its 32 members, except perhaps 3 or 4, have expressed a desire to omit the customary oratorical display, and for reasons which, when made public, will commend themselves to the good judgment of every one. Not only are the members of the class strongly in favor of it but their parents and guardians heartily endorse the very sensible scheme.

— Rev. F. W. March, son of Rev. Dr. March of this city, addressed a good audience in the vestry of the First Congregational church last Sunday evening on the subject of "Missionary Work among the Arabs." He has labored as a preacher and pastor in Syria for many years past, his latest residence having been at Tripoli in that country. At present he and his family are visiting America for rest and recuperation, and the date of their return is yet to be fixed. What Mr. March had to tell about the Arabs was highly interesting. He gave facts concerning them which were new to many of his listeners. Their habits and general mode of life; their peculiar characteristics; what progress they have made towards becoming Christians; and other topics were talked about and made clear. The address was instructive as well as entertaining, and it seemed to have been well appreciated by the large body of listeners present.

— Next Tuesday evening, at 8.15, the N. Y. Branch of the Society of Science, Letters and Art, of London, will hold the first Ordinary meeting in the Hall of the N. Y. College of Music, 173 East 70th street, to attend which a polite invitation has been extended to the JOURNAL by the Officers, Fellows and Members per hand of Ephraim Cutter, M. D., LL. D., who is President of the Branch. The programme embraces some 8 master-pieces of the most eminent composers, which will be executed be a large array of New York's best musical talent.

— Rev. H. C. Parker, pastor of the Unitarian church in this city, delivered the first of a series of ten Sunday discourses on the Bible last Sabbath morning to the edification of his congregation. It was entitled "How Bibles Grow." The remaining nine will be given in the following order and are entitled: How we came to have a Bible, The Old Testament, The Bridge Between the Testaments, The New Testament, The Morality of the Bible, The Religion of the Bible, The Inspiration of the Bible, The Right and Wrong Uses of the Bible, What has Bible done for Civilization?

— A little snow fell again on Saturday but a heavy rain through the night swept it nearly all away. Early on Sunday morning it cleared off cold when the remaining snow and rain froze together, and meeting time Sunday would have found the sidewalks in a very slippery and dangerous condition had not Supt. Jones given them a good sanding early in the morning. We have been having quite a variety of weather since the 1st of last November and may look for more of it during the next two months if there is any reliance to be placed on the prognostications of professional and unprofessional weather prophets, the preponderance of whose testimony is in favor of a very cold and boisterous winter with great quantities of snow in New England, especially on the Atlantic coast.

— Councilman-elect of Ward 3, Marcellus Littlefield, Esq., has severed his long connection with the Boston Herald, so rumor says, as Woburn reporter and has been succeeded by Mr. Hudson who was formerly its summer resort correspondent for some time. Littlefield was a good newspaper man. His reports of local goings-on were always sought because they were felt to be reliable. Accuracy in giving "bottom facts" was his best hold and his stories of happenings, doings and sayings here were always depended upon as being pretty close up to the chalk-line. We are sorry to lose 'Cel from the guild for he is more than an average good fellow besides being a firstclass reporter, but the people of this city have called him to a seat high up in their councils, and like the true patriot that he is he obeys their summons and makes the sacrifice. Bye, bye, Marcellus.

— Last Saturday Alderman S. B. Goddard of Ward 1, the well known and successful Woburn-Boston insurance agent, and E. L. Shaw, Esq., of Shaw Brothers, leather makers, started from this city for East Tennessee for two or three weeks of quail shooting in that favored region for feathered game. They anticipated great pleasure during their absence, and the JOURNAL hopes they will not be disappointed. Mr. Goddard is an old sportsman and has probably shot over more miles of Western prairie for grouse, quail, etc., than any other man in these parts. His love of the sport has carried him nearly all over Minnesota, large tracts in Iowa and Illinois, in Kentucky and other game regions of the South. He has also in times past done a good deal of shooting in the woods, fields and pastures of New England. He loves it, and will no doubt enjoy his trip to East Tennessee very much indeed. We do not know how much of a sportsman Mr. Shaw is, but presume he is something of a hand at it, and will therefore have a good time with Mr. Goddard during their fortnight's visit to the South.

Even Skeptics Wilt.

To himself and the world in which he moves, the skeptic is a most uncomfortable being. Doubting, vascillating, halting, suspicious creature that he is, he almost distrusts the honesty of the song of the morning lark. But now and then he is brought to earth, and many a time and oft hath he been obliged to acknowledge the purity, effectiveness and saving qualities of Brussels soap, so dear to every tidy housekeeper. It's economical.

"Caste."

We affirm without fear of successful contradiction that the production of the above drama at Lyceum Hall last Wednesday by a local company of amateur play-actors was as artistically meritorious and gave as much pleasure to those who were there and heard it as any professional company at the Boston Museum or any other city theatre could have done. It was a great success from all points of view. There hasn't been a better dramatic entertainment given in Woburn since the Year One. A crowded house highly enjoyed it and gave frequent expression to their feelings.

As "Eccles," the leading character in the piece, T. Marvin Parker was brilliant, and Lottie Woodman's "Esther Eccles" could not have been surpassed in good acting by the best professionals on the Boston boards. We are telling just what we know.

"Hon. George D'Alroy" was admirably represented by Mr. E. Q. Brackett, and as "Capt. Hawtree," Prof. S. W. Mendum was about as near perfect as they make them this season. Dr. M. H. Allen, too, did "Samuel Gerridge" up brown.

Of course it is needless to say that Miss Alice M. Grammer and Miss Edia F. Davis ("Polly Eccles") filled their parts in the play to perfection, for this is their way of doing such things.

The public owe the managers of this superb dramatic exhibition a debt of gratitude for furnishing them with an evening of rare pleasure. If this company will give us such entertainments at reasonably short intervals this winter the Boston Theatres will get less patronage than usual from the people of this city.

Lasts twice as long as cheap soap for laundry use—Brussels.

City Government.

COMMON COUNCIL.

A regular meeting of the Common Council was held last Friday evening, Emery of Ward 7 being absent. Councilman Grant called attention to the fact that the committee on new Armory had not reported the fact that the Winn land purchase carried with it a 40-foot street. The monthly report of the city Auditor was read and put on file. A communication was received from James Skinner resigning the position of Sinking Fund Commissioner; Accepted. Reports of committees: Finance, sanitary on the Common by Beggs of Ward 3, inexpedient to Legislate; accepted. Street Lights, petition of Messrs. Barnard, Foster, Kelley, Quinn and others, leave to withdraw; accepted.

Under the head of unfinished business the resignation of City Auditor William E. Blodgett was accepted. Elections to fill vacancies: Sinking Fund Commissioner, William Beggs had 1; Edward D. Hayden 1; Benjamin Hinkley 8, and was elected. Auditor of accounts, blank 1; Charlie A. Jones 9, and was elected.

ALDERMEN.

There was a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen last Tuesday evening. Goddard and Ramsdell absent. The Mayor called attention to the fact that no notice had been received from the Common Council in regard to its action in filling vacancies in certain city offices, and remarked that action should be taken at once. Benjamin Hinckley was chosen a member of the Sinking Fund Commission vice James Skinner, resigned, and Charlie A. Jones was chosen Auditor of Accounts vice William A. Blodgett, resigned. Certain papers from the Common Council were concurred in. The Joint Committee on the new Central Square Schoolhouse was authorized to buy the Thompson estate on Main street, opposite Clinton street, at Central Square, for 12 1-2 cents per foot. The Chief of Police reported 21 arrests for November, and the Overseers of the Poor reported for the same month, families assisted, 40; persons, 176; money paid, $27; groceries, $131; fuel, $57.65; total, $218.62. Petitions for a recount of votes for Councilmen were received from Wards 4 and 7. Adjourned to Thursday evening to make the recount.

Hotel Windsor.

The closing of the Windsor Hotel in this city has been a serious loss to many of the best class in the community.

This popular Hotel Home has been so successfully and fairly conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald that to be obliged to quit its pleasant associations brought to those who knew most about it a feeling of personal loss.

It is said that the Decalogue and The Golden Rule find no place in the body politic, but the ruling spirit in the conduct of this Hotel under its conscientious head was that to do as we desire to be done by brings its own reward. In no case was there overreaching.

It is to be hoped that in the future some such House as that conducted by Mrs. McDonald will be opened; the people demand just such a Temperance Hotel, over the threshold of which no alcoholic beverages can come. Shall there be such a House in our city? or, shall the voice of the "Chief Priest" and those who cry aloud prevail!

We take this opportune moment to extend to Mrs. McDonald thanks for so long serving the city's people in the courteous spirit which was always extended to the guests at the Windsor.—X.

K. of P.

For some time several of our leading citizens have had under consideration the matter of organizing a Lodge of the Knights of Pythias and on Tuesday evening, Dec. 30th, the Grand Lodge Officers will visit the city and institute a Lodge in Grand Army Hall, Post 33.

On the list of the petition are a large number of our prominent people, and we understand that many more have signified their intention of signing before the charter list is closed. All who have signed and all who intend signing should call on B. F. Waldron, 377 Main St., and sign the book.

There is a large field in this city for this society to build on, and, as it is one of the oldest established fraternal societies, we bespeak for its success from the start.

We are informed that already the Knights of Pythias number upwards of three hundred thousand members in this country, which is certainly a grand showing.

Gentlemen, now is your time to join and receive the benefit of the order at a very low price.

The Scandinavians.

The Scandinavian Sewing Circle will hold an Auction Sale in Concert Hall, Savings Bank Building, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock to raise some money to help carrying on their Evangelical mission work in this city. They need your help: will you not do something for them?

The Scandinavian Evangelical Free Church of this city held its annual meeting last Saturday evening when the following officers were elected: Moderator, Chas. R. Rosenquist; Clerk, Gustof Anderson; Treasurer, N. C. Olson; Trustees, S. Froberg, A. J. Simonson, Aug. Erlandson and Alfred L. Olson.

The Scandinavian Evangelical Free Church of this city is going forward "slowly but surely." It is hoped that before long the Society will occupy the vestry for their meetings. Have you done anything for helping this worthy cause along? If not please do not forget to do so, as a good deal of money is yet needed if they shall be able to get the building completed.—X.

A Bad Accident.

About 1.30, p. m. yesterday Jacob Brown, Esq., of Canal St., fell from his house a distance of 30 feet, the fall breaking his right hip and dislocating his left shoulder. Drs. Harlow and Graves of this city and Cowdry of Stoneham were in attendance and towards evening a Mass. Gen. Hospital surgeon was sent for.

Some School Notes.

The newspaper reporter who succeeds in corraling anything concerning the doings of the school authorities of this city has reason to congratulate himself. This too whether he gets his news by hook, or by crook. The "executive session" is his bane. That ancient and moss-covered custom still holds sway in the U. S. Senate and Woburn School Board, although the former (and less important) body have made commendable efforts of late to do away with it, and will probably get shut of the fossilized old habit in the course of a year or two.

Once in awhile, though, the public get hold of bits of information respecting the proceedings of the School Board through the columns of the JOURNAL and are supposed to be duly grateful for the same. We would remark here, par parenthesis, that the public are beholden to the JOURNAL for information regarding many matters of which they would be obliged to remain in crass ignorance but for its industry and enterprise.

The resignation of Principal Dow of the High School was a genuine surprise to a great many people. It was thought by the most of them, and hoped, that he was an educational fixture in this city. He enjoys the reputation among those where he has taught of possessing peculiar and superior qualifications for a successful prosecution of the pedagogic profession. He is well in the front among the craft, and has always made a success of the business wherever prosecuted by him. There can be no doubt but that the High School has lost a mighty good man in Principal Dow.

The Board appointed Sub-Master Samuel W. Mendum to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Dow. If he would cease his very persistant advocacy of the most obnoxious political principles and drop the reprehensible habit he has of hurling political interrogation points at the heads of inoffensive people, the JOURNAL would raise both hands in approval of his appointment to fill the chief place in the High School. Mr. Mendum has the credit of being a thorough scholar, a linguist of uncommon gifts and acquirements, a student, a good disciplinarian, and they all say he is immensely popular with the classes in his department. Barring his politics, Mr. Mendum is a worthy young man, and that he is a good teacher we all know.

The other appointments made by the Board, to wit: Miss Daly to fill the place in the Cummings school made vacant by the resignation of Miss Winn; Miss Preston and Miss Brown for Assistants to Principal Mendum in the High School, will no doubt turn out to be of the very best, for the young women named are well educated and have had experience in the art of teaching "the young idea how to shoot."

The holiday vacation will begin at noon on Dec. 24, and the schools will reopen on Jan. 5, 1891. [Do you mind those last figures, boys and girls? —1891!]

The Board have received no official information respecting a rumor that the graduating exhibition of class '91 is to be omitted next June, although it is current in educational circles. If the subject should be presented to the Board it will receive all the attention which its importance demands.

Superintendent F. B. Richardson pursues the even tenor of his way and keeps the reins of school government safely in hand. Under his conscientious and intelligent administration our public schools are in an advanced and prosperous condition.

It is an extravagant man who will hang himself with a pair of fifty cent suspenders when ten cents worth of clothes line will do the job just as expeditiously and as well, and it is an extravagant woman woman who will use any other than Brussels soap, for the same reason.

Boston Theatres.

Monday evening, Dec. 15th, will witness the return of the favorites to the Globe Theatre—The Hanlon Brothers. They will present their latest and grandest spectacular creation, "Superba;" introducing gorgeous new scenery, beautiful costumes, wonderful transformations and bewildering and astonishing tricks. Over one hundred people appear in the play and it takes three cars to transport the scenery. The Hanlon Brothers are a strong drawing card, meeting with the biggest kind of success whenever they visit the Globe. They will remain only one week, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

For one week commencing Monday, Dec. 15, A Bunch of Keys will gingle at the Grand Opera for the amusement of every body. This is one of Charles H. Hoyt's best productions. It is brought out at the Grand Opera on a grander scale than ever before. The "Grand View" hotel scene introduces two upstairs rooms, elevator, electric bells and all the mechanical effects. Usual matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure billousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

School Meeting.

A special meeting of the School Committee was held one evening last week. The resignation of Herbert B. Low as Principal of the High School, was accepted, and Samuel W. Mendum was chosen Principal. The latter has been Sub-Master for two or three years. The salary was fixed at $1500, which is to include that of Military Instructor. Miss Alice Preston was chosen Assistant at a salary of $500, and Miss Lena H. Brown, Second Assistant at a salary of $450. Miss Brown now conducts a private school at Natick.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free.

The Age of an Interesting Relic.

THE JOSHUA REED HOUSE IN BURLINGTON.

In 1889 Mr. Leonard Thompson visited Woburn, England, and on the same tour, in company with Mr. Horace Wyman of Worcester, a native of Woburn, and his son Mr. Horace W. Wyman, visited West Mill, the place in England whence the first Wymans came to America two centuries and a half ago. The experiences of these gentlemen during their trip to West Mill were described in an interesting article by Mr. Horace Wyman in a recent number of the "American Photographer," *and illustrated by handsome photographs taken by Mr. Wyman by the Kodak process. In October last the same three gentlemen, accompanied by W. R. Cutter, made a trip to an interesting curiosity in the northern part of Burlington, an ancient house, known in recent years, indeed for many years, as the "Joshua Reed house," situated near the junction of the boundary lines of the towns of Burlington, Billerica, and Bedford. This house was for a century and a quarter, or, perhaps, even, a century and a half, the house of one of the branches of the numerous Wyman family of Woburn, whose common ancestors, Francis and John Wyman, were among the first settlers of the good old town of Woburn as early as the year 1640, both being subscribers to the original town orders governing its settlement.

Here again Mr. Horace Wyman took a number of photographs with his excellent instrument, resulting in a series of five, representing the front, the rear, and the two ends of the old house, and one of the well adjoining the house, a set of which has been given to the Woburn Public Library and will be placed on exhibition in its antique collection.

The present owner of the house, Mr. Joshua Reed, is very old, and has resided in it upwards of sixty years. The form and fashion of the house show it to have existed prior to the time of King Philip's War (1675-1676) and, indeed, we think we can show that it was in existence a number of years before that date, or about, say, 1666 or 1668. The case might be stated in the form of the following inscription.

OLD JOSHUA REED HOUSE
in north part of Burlington.

Supposed date of building about 1666 to 1668. It was arranged to be used as a garrison house and the port holes are still to be seen.

This house was located on the two Wymans' farm of 500 acres in Woburn, adjoining Billerica line, being the farm in that place of the brothers Francis and John Wyman, who were among the earliest settlers of the town of Woburn. Their ancestral home in England was the parish of West Mill, in the County of Hertford, where their father, Francis, died about 1658, and where his son Thomas Wyman remained. The Coytemore grant of 500 acres being laid out against the Billerica line and purchased by the Wymans, was located at their farm at that point in Woburn bounds, and next adjoining their land "where their houses stand." The date of this transaction of the General Court was May 15, 1667. Cf. Lewis & Co.'s History of Middlesex County, p. 350. The purchase of this farm by the Wymans made their "farm" in this locality one thousand acres, and this house of Joshua Reed's was one of the "houses" mentioned as standing on their original 500 acre farm in 1667, as stated in the colony records above quoted. It is not supposed that any house existed there before 1666.

The supposition is ventured also that the other "house" was the famous Amos Wyman house in this same vicinity, and a neighboring house, now no longer in existence; the house where Hancock and Adams retreated after their dinner of April 19, 1775, and where in lieu of a better supply they were forced to dine off cold salt pork and potatoes served in a wooden tray.

To verify the age of the Joshua Reed house a few items are cited from the first volume of the Woburn town records:

A country rate made the 18th of August, 1674, specifies separately the entries relating to Francis Wyman, for his farm, and for his house and estate in the town, or the "village," now Woburn Centre. The farm was the estate at the Billerica line.

John Wyman is treated in a similar way in the same list, viz., for his farm, and for his house and estate in the town. For the "farm" the brothers were taxed alike in equal amounts.

In a rate for the country in the town of Woburn, August 23, 1675; Francis Wyman, Senior, is taxed for his person and estate at farm, and Francis Wyman, at Woburn, or his estate and property at the centre village. John Wyman, Senior, is entered for persons and estate, and other Wymans are mentioned. The fact that Francis was entered for his "person and estate at farm," would show that he was then living there, and in the midst of the period of King Philip's war, then raging in the settlements about them. This would confirm the family tradition that the Wymans occupied a frontier post for the protection of Woburn inhabitants in that war; and that however obscure may have been this quarter in recent years or even at the opening of the Revolution a century or more ago, that at that time of direful Indian trouble, it was a post of the utmost importance as a shield against the insidious foe, and hence the reason of the port holes still so prominently seen. All honor to the courage of Francis Wyman who occupied this frontier post, and apparently this very house, at that serious time.

After peace had been established and the savage foe conquered and the remnants of his forces scattered, a town rate made December 22, 1679, mentions

Francis Wyman, for Dunham's house, and for his Wyman's farm—and John Wyman, for his farm—1-x, so much, etc. The farm being the one we have so frequently mentioned.

Dunham's house was near where Mr. Ward Wyman's brick house now is, at Central Square, Woburn, and the land at this place was known for many years as Dunham's lot, and a pond once existing there was called Dunham's pond.

Thus this house of the present Joshua Reed is one of the oldest structures now standing in the ancient limits of the town of Woburn. It is at least two hundred and twenty-three years old, and we hope a strong effort may be made to preserve it in its present antique condition.—C.

Holiday GoodS.

We are now ready with our usual amount of Goods suitable for the Holiday Trade. Those who have visited our stores in the past need not be told of our many attractions, but simply to be reminded that this year's goods are in no way inferior to those of former years. In fact each year we try to improve. Our Booklets and Cards are vastly superior to anything we have ever had, while the juveniles will not fail to suit all the younger ones. And for the older we have Books by the standard authors. Our Fancy Goods are numerous and our Staple Goods are correct in variety, quality and price.

Ferdinando Gorges and Edward Johnson.

On P. 339 of Lewis & Co.'s Hist. of Middx. Co, the writer said: "Edward Johnson was probably the best known citizen of the town in his time in the Commonwealth. His fame extended even in his lifetime to England, where an English Squire printed in London his unique and valuable 'History of New England' as his own production. For many years the fraud upon the labor and brains of our worthy town father passed unrecognized; but posterity now recognizes its true source, and his name and fame are assured as the author of that early New England history."

A recent discovery shows that this statement is an unjust aspersion upon the character and memory of Ferdinando Gorges, and the following is published as an explanation of the true cause of the difficulty:

Mr. James Phinney Baxter in the preface to vol. ii. of his "Sir Ferdinando Gorges and His Province of Maine" (Boston, 1890) calls attention to the position assumed by him in the discussion of the subject of Edward Johnson's work, and says on p. 175 of that volume, that "so much has been written concerning the literary work of the grandson of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, that it is thought best . . . . . to fully examine the Gorges Tracts, so called, consisting of four distinct works, usually bound together, and of which the third is the work of Edward Johnson, which was published anonymously five years before the other three works, which are genuine works of the elder and younger Gorges." "This third tract," he says, "the 'Wonder Working Providence' of Johnson, has in place of its original titlepage a spurious one, bearing upon it the name of the elder Gorges; which has caused several writers to bring against the younger Gorges the grave charge of fraud." Mr. Baxter proceeds to examine the question in some detail, which it is not necessary to repeat, and affirms that the "Wonder Working Providence," a work of two hundred and thirty-six pages, was written by Edward Johnson. "The fraud," continues Mr. Baxter, "if such was really intended by the publisher . . . . . lies simply in prefacing the 'Wonder-working Providence' of an anonymous author, now known to have been Edward Johnson, with a preface bearing the name of Sir Ferdinando Gorges and the titlepage of 'America Painted to the Life'." Mr. Baxter then proceeds to defend the younger Gorges from the accusation of deception, and lays the blame on the publisher. A number of copies of this work having been left on his hands unsold, he conceived the idea of binding them with the works of the two Gorges which were upon the same subject, and which, it is probable, had had a small sale, and thus create a new demand for them. The original Gorges tracts, three in number, were first issued by themselves, and the publisher afterwards added to them the "Wonder-working Providence:" "But, fortunately for the posthumous fame of Ferdinando Gorges, he discovered the fraud," says Baxter, "and promptly denounced it in a public manner. This act of Gorges, however, it is but fair to say, was unknown to the critics, since his denunciation of the fraud was hidden away in an old newspaper, 'The Mercurius Publicus,' bearing the date of September 13th, 1660, and of which but one copy, now in the British Museum, is known to exist. This important evidence of the innocence of Gorges is as follows:

ADVERTISEMENT.

I FERDINANDO GORGES, the entituled Author of a late Book, called AMERICA PAINTED TO THE LIFE, am injured in that additional Part, called SION'S SAVIOUR IN NEW ENGLAND, (as written by SIR FERDINANDO GORGES,) that being none of his, and formerly printed in another name, the true owner.

"This, of course, forever exonerates Ferdinando Gorges from the charge of fraud with which his critics have so cruelly assailed his memory." (Ibd. p. 185.)—C

An Endowment Policy in this Company, issued under the new perfected non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts, provides for three most important things.

1st. It is a security to the beneficiaries in case of the early death of the assured.

2d. It makes a certain provision for the wants of one's older years.

3d. It provides a sum of money continually increasing in amount, that the policy-holder may at any time receive, should he be overtaken by misfortune and lose his property.

No business man can afford to do without the advantage that such a policy may be to himself if unfortunate in business; to his family in case of his early decease or as an endowment to himself at a time in life when, if he has no property, he will be poor indeed.

JESUS MADE KNOWN.

LESSON XI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 14.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 28, 43. Commit Verses 36, 40—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 31—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

28. "And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went; and He made as though He would have gone further." The threescore furlongs had been passed over and probably the two disciples were surprised that they had reached the end of their walk so quickly, for with pleasant company and such instructive conversation as they had enjoyed a long walk would seem a very short one. And now they have reached the end of their walk, and He will not further thrust Himself upon them unless they desire it. He has enlightened them, and instructed them, and made them glad; and now it is for them to say if He shall continue with them or pass on. How often has He by His Spirit given us light upon His word, both in public and in private, but have we always felt grateful and desired to detain Him, or have we willingly allowed Him to pass on. He will not tarry where He is not wanted.

29. "But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them." Foolish and slow to believe though they were, yet He is easily constrained and goes in to abide with them. How much they would have missed if they had allowed Him to pass on.

30. "And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them." It may not be necessary to see here that which He instituted on the night of His betrayal as a memorial of His death till He come again; but the action and the words are so similar (Luke xxii, 19) that we cannot help thinking of it, and as they afterward rehearsed the matter that same night to the disciples at Jerusalem they told how He was known to them in breaking of bread (verse 35).

31. "And their eyes were opened and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight." In a moment they understood why they had been so interested; they knew whose company they had enjoyed; the report of the women was indeed true; their own eyes had seen Him. But He was gone; as mysteriously as He had joined them (which perhaps they had not thought of) so He left them; gone in a moment. So shall it be with us when in bodies made like unto His (Phil. iii, 20, 21) we shall reign with Him over the earth (Rev. v, 9, 10). We shall go here and there as He may send us, appearing and disappearing at pleasure, manifest to and companions of those on the earth, in His service, but no longer of the earth.

32. "And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?" It was a precious heart burn which they enjoyed by the way; the burning of holy peace and joy and delight, because of His presence; that blessed presence which burns out self and sin, and the world, and self righteousness and self pleasing, and lays and keeps us low at His feet for His service and pleasure.

33. "And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them." What a contrast between the sad hearts of a few hours before when they left the city and the joyful hearts which they now possess as, unmindful of threescore weary furlongs, they speedily retrace their steps.

34. "Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." Paul also mentions this appearance to Peter (I Cor. xv, 5). How like our Lord Jesus to appear specially to that poor, self confident disciple whom Satan so severely sifted, but for whom Jesus prayed. So Godlike, but so unlike what man would do.

35. "And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread." They told of their sad hearts as they left the city, of the stranger who joined them, of His questions as if He knew not anything of the events which had happened, how they in their simplicity told Him everything, and how He then took up the many references to Himself in Moses and the prophets and made them see and understand them as they never did before; how, having arrived at Emmaus, He made as though He would have gone farther, but they constrained Him and He went in to tarry with them; how He then took bread and blessed it and brake it and gave it to them, and all at once they recognized Him; but instantly He was gone they knew not where. They probably also told how it seemed that they could not get back to Jerusalem quickly enough to tell these glad tidings.

36. "And as they thus spake, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you." As they again talk of Him again He is in their midst. This is His fifth appearance on that day on which He arose from the dead.

37. "But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit." How strange a reception! He brings peace and proclaims peace, but they are filled with agitation, fear, doubt, unbelief. Is it not so still?

38. "And He said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?" Much of our trouble arises from thoughts, or, as in the R. V., "reasonings."

39. "Behold My hands and My feet that it is Myself; handle Me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." If in the things which make us afraid we would only see Jesus Himself, that would surely dispel our fears.

40. "And when He had thus spoken He showed them His hands and His feet." There were the wounds; they could doubt no longer.

41. "And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, He said unto them, Have ye here any meat?" John xx, 20, says: "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." They would have been more blessed had they believed the report of Mary and the other women in the morning.

42, 43. "And they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb, and He took it and did eat before them." Here is another feature of the powers of the glorified body. Not that we conclude from this that the resurrection body will need food as these mortal bodies now do, but as the Lord and the angels ate Abraham's food, and as our Lord now actually ate this food, so when we are like Jesus, and with Him reigning over the earth, we shall be able to eat with people as socially as now if necessary, and we shall also eat and drink with Him at His table in His kingdom (Luke xxii, 30).

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold at H. L. AN AFRICAN CHIEF'S BADGE.

Hussein Clings to a Brass Teakettle Which Dr. Peters Gave Him.

Among the many wrecks of dark continent royalty now drifting about Germany is the Somali chief, Hussein Farrar. He got a taste of Teutonic civilization while aiding the German Emin Pasha expedition, and could not be kept from hurrying off to the empire of the Hohenzollerns as soon as he got the $450 allowed him for his services. Before sailing he invested $200 in two cabs, two cabmen and a superintendent, whom he left in charge of his livery business in Aden.

He created a panic the first day he appeared in Unter den Linden, and the police had to be summoned to prevent the crowd from stealing from him a battered brass teakettle that he clutched tightly with his right hand. Every effort was made to dissuade him from disturbing the public peace by swinging this kettle wherever he went, but in vain.

He refused to explain his affection for this rather curious adjunct of his street costume, and not until Dr. Peters, the explorer, came to Berlin was any satisfactory reason for his behavior obtainable. The rival of Stanley, however, unraveled the mystery. When the Emin Pasha expedition was in the Massai country, he said, Hussein conducted himself with extraordinary bravery. Peters wished to reward him, but had nothing of value at hand to give away.

While rummaging about in camp for some kind of present, he came upon an old, leaky, brass kettle that was about to be thrown away. He had it polished at once, called together the natives, and in their presence gave it to Hussein, with the assurance that such an article among white men was the customary reward for great deeds. Since then Hussein has never let the kettle out of his sight. When fighting he wore it tied to his waist; on shipboard he carried it in his arms, and in Germany he always takes it to bed with him.—Chicago Times.

Education in Switzerland.

In Switzerland the state's first business is the education of the youth. Teachers must, first of all, be university graduates, or else be graduates of high, very high, class normals. They are employed for long terms, almost for life, and are pensioned when grown old in the public service. The schools stand at the head of everything; even the army costs less than their schools do.

Their system contains six kinds or grades of preparatory schools below the university. There are the primary, the secondary, the repeating, the special, the Real schools, and the gymnasium, the last answering in rank to the American college. The first two of these schools are cumpulsory and free, but the pupil may choose between attending the secondary school and the repeating school. This latter is intended mostly for the benefit of the very poor, who cannot spare the children from labor after they have finished with the primary school.—S. H. M. Byers in Harper's.

Rest the Great Remedy.

The medicine for the heart, of all other organs, is rest—mental and bodily. This does not mean doing nothing at all, but not overdoing; least of all, not giving it anything in the way of physical ill being to overcome. This must be provided for at all points. Food may be delicate and plentiful, air and sunshine generously admitted, baths and massage do their utmost, and chilly sleep for want of some extra blankets or dull days with a poor fire will so disorder the circulation that the other cares go for nothing as far as positive gain is concerned.

It takes an all round intelligence to secure the common health. Most people take the one chance of it that pours out of a medicine bottle. Others add to this care about food and baths, and half care about pure air, while they take little rest and next to no sunshine or any cheerful stimulus of pleasure. Of course, the result is unsatisfactory. —Shirley Dare's Letter.

As to Prescriptions.

A correspondent of The Chicago Tribune complains that he took a foreign prescription to a druggist in Chicago who declined to return the paper after putting up the medicine. The writer claims that in England and Scotland the apothecaries return prescriptions, retaining copies. A Chicago druggist thinks that a good case can be made out for both customs, although "under ordinary circumstances in this city any druggist will give a customer a copy of the prescription he brings in unless the physician's request is to the contrary."

The shorter the tunnel the sweeter the kiss, but the older the cold, the harder the cure. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has broken many stubborn coughs.

Therapeutics of Asthma.

In a lecture on the therapeutics of asthma Professor Dieulafoy gives the points of his method, which consists at the beginning of the attack in painting the inside of the nostrils as high up as possible with a camel hair brush dipped in a solution of hydrochlorate of cocaine—1 in 20—or, if preferred, the solution may be sprayed into the nose and throat for four or five minutes at a time with a tablespoonful of the above solution; if this does not succeed the patient is to inhale from 6 to 12 drops of pyridine sprinkled on a handkerchief. The cocaine and the pyridine may be employed simultaneously.

When the attack is at its acme the following solution may be injected hypodermically: Ten centigrams hydrochlorate of morphia and 10 grams distilled water, of which half a syringeful is to be injected; repeated in a quarter of an hour if necessary. The remedy par excellence for asthma, says Professor Dieulafoy, is the iodide of potassium, given in doses of from 20 to 30 grains daily, but beginning with 5 grains only, to be gradually increased. To combat the diathesis the patient should take from 15 to 30 grains iodide of potassium daily for 15 days, then replace the iodide by pills composed of powdered belladonna leaves and the extract of belladonna, of each 4 grains, made into 20 pills, the patient at the same time to take daily after the principal meal a teaspoonful of a solution of 1 grain arseniate soda and 2 1-2 fluid ounces distilled water.—Paris Letter.

Noiseless Carriages.

A large number of carriages of New York are now equipped with rubber tires nearly two inches thick and composed of many layers of rubber of various degrees of springiness. Carriages thus equipped are able to roll over the stones without the deafening clatter and jerkiness which results when iron tiers are used. In the attention which people pay to their private stables New York is making rapid strides in an upward way.

There is more interest now taken in the horse show than there is in the opera, and the breeding and training of carriage horses has been taken up by enthusiastic millionaires without number. The assertion that we go to England for showy trappings for private stables is no longer true. American carriages have all taken prizes in European fairs, and the crack coaches in the Coaching club, as well as the most widely admired dog carts and broughams, are of native manufacture. They have taken up the American buggy in England and France, just as we have adopted the dog carts and tilbury here. —Cor. Richmond Times.

Table Manners.

A napkin is not intended to be used as a bib. The fashion of pinning it about one's neck is obsolete, and only permissible in the very young or those quite beyond the pale of middle age, who are unable to measure accurately the distance between the cup and the lip.

It is not polite for a hostess to press the guest to be helped "again." She should ignore the fact of the previous helping, and simply say, "Shall I help you to so and so?"

A habit of passing things at table savors too strongly of an acquaintance with the boarding house, this handing of dishes being the prerogative of the servant.—Jenness-Miller Magazine.

Nutmegs.

Nutmegs and mace, two of the principal spices of commerce, grow in the same pod. The tiny tree upon which they grow is almost identical with a pear tree two or three years old. The nutmeg is the center or seed of the fruit, which is about the size of an ordinary hen's egg. The best comparison of the fruit would be with the hickory nut. In ripening the outside cracks open, showing the nutmeg inclosed in a thin lacy covering, which is the mace. It is found in all the tropical islands of America and Asia, the most fruitful trees growing in Jamaica, some of them yielding as many as 5,000 nutmegs in a year.—New York Ledger.

A Humorist's Son.

Burdette, the funny man, while in Chicago received a letter from his 13-year-old son, reading: "Dear Papa: I had a dream last night. I dreamed I had a new safety bicycle. Do you believe that dreams come true?" "I fear that boy is going to be a humorist," said his father sadly to an interviewer.—Philadelphia Ledger.

He Got the Dinner.

A needy Frenchman once heard that a marriage was on the tapis between the daughter of a wealthy merchant and the son of a rich banker. The dowry that was to be given with the bride was 500,000 francs. The merchant was well known to be on the lookout for a good bargain or to save a dollar, so on this the Parisian founded his hopes of a good dinner at least.

He accordingly called at the merchant's residence, and asked the privilege of seeing him on very important business. After a little while he was admitted to his presence.

"The matter, sir, on which I called, he began, "involves for you the practical saving of 250,000 franc. I—"

"Oh, my dear sir," interrupted the merchant, "this is too serious to be discussed before dinner, and, as it is now my hour for dining, pray take dinner with me and we will afterward consider your proposition at our leisure."

Having partaken of a meal that left a pleasant flavor in the unfortunate's memory the rest of his life, they returned to the merchant's study.

"And now I am ready to hear your proposal," he remarked.

The Parisian, after a moment's thought, began:

"I understand, sir, your daughter is to be married to the son of the banker, D'Argent?"

"Yes that is true."

"And her dowry is half a million?"

This was also assented to.

"Well, then, here is my idea; I am ready to take her with half that sum and thus you will save or gain exactly 250,000 francs."—Philadelphia Times.

Cold Waves

Are predicted with reliable accuracy, and people liable to the pains and aches of rheumatism dread every change to damp or stormy weather. Although Hood's Sarsaparilla is not claimed to be a positive specific for rheumatism, the remarkable cures it has effected show that it may be taken for this complaint with reasonable certainty of benefit. Its action in neutralizing the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of rheumatism, constitutes the secret of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you suffer from rheumatism, give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial; it will do you good.

Bones of Chinamen Going Home.

Deep in the hold below sixty square boxes are—much resembling tea chests—covered with Chinese lettering. Each contains the bones of a dead man—bones being sent back to melt into that Chinese soil from whence, by nature's vital chemistry, they were shapen. And those whose labelled bones are rolling to and fro in the dark below, as the plunging steamer rocks and shudders, once also passed this ocean on just such a ship—and smoked or dreamed their time away in just such berths—and played the same strange play by such a yellow light in even just such an atmosphere, heavy with vaporized opium. —Lafcadio Hearn in Harper's.

A Valuable Discovery

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted with serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers eveywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, of Knightstown, Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles' New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

A GREAT LITERARY BARGAIN.

Five Famous Romances of the American Forest.

The Leatherstocking Tales.

By JAMES FENIMORE COOPER.

An entirely new edition of the Leatherstocking Tales has just been published, in one large and handsome volume of over three hundred large quarto pages, containing all of these famous romances, complete, unchanged and unabridged, viz:—

THE DEERSLAYER, THE PATHFINDER, THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE PIONEERS, THE PRAIRIE.

This edition is printed on good paper from large type. It is a delightful book, and one which should have a place in every American home. It contains five of the most charming romances that the mind of man has ever conceived. A whole Winter's reading is comprised in this mammoth volume. All who have not read Cooper's stories have in store for themselves a rich literary treat. Every member of the family circle will be delighted with them. We have made an arrangement with the publisher of this excellent edition of the Leatherstocking Tales whereby we are enabled to offer this large and beautiful book almost as a free gift to our subscribers. Such an offer as we make would not have been possible a few years ago, but the lightning printing press, low prices of paper and great competition in the book trade have done wonders for the reading public, and this is the most marvellous of all.

WHAT I WANT IN MY WEEKLY PAPER

I WANT A reliable paper that I can Safely take into my family

I WANT A paper which represents High Ideals And Sound Principles

I WANT The latest Home News, The latest Foreign News, The Latest Political News.

I WANT Reliable Market Reports, Reliable quotations of Farm Products, Live Stock Markets, Financial & Commercial.

I WANT Sensible and seasonable Editorials On Political, Social, and Moral Questions.

I WANT The cream of the best Editorials In New York and other daily and weekly papers To let me know what they think of matters.

I WANT Good, reliable Farm and Garden Articles Written by Practical Men.

I WANT To know something of the Home Life of The American people, and of their Life, thoughts, and experiences.

I WANT Pleasant moral stories for the Young People, That the children may look for the paper As they do for a friend.

I WANT Stories of Interest for us Elders, For we, too, like our hours of leisure.

THIS IS WHAT I DON'T WANT:

I DON'T WANT Long, padded News Articles; The padding doesn't add to the value, And I haven't time to read them.

I DON'T WANT Fierce, one-sided Editorials, Written by special pleaders, Who can see nothing good In any side but their own.

NOW, WHAT PAPER WILL FILL THE BILL? WE ANSWER:

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY WITNESS EVERY TIME.

ONLY $1 A YEAR.

The Witness is just the paper for Farmers, Farmers' Wives, Farmers' Sons, Farmers' Daughters, Country Merchants, Country Store-keepers, Blacksmiths, Carpenters, Builders, Stone Masons, and all other laborers, who form the backbone of our Country and who want to be thoroughly posted in what is going on in the World.

The WITNESS offers one of the most valuable premium lists of any paper in America. Every article guaranteed and away below retail prices. Send for a free copy.

Read Our Great Premium Offer.

Send us $1.10 and you will receive the NEW YORK WEEKLY WITNESS, one year, and the above Five World-Renowned Novels—all Postage Paid by us—which ought to be read in every Patriotic American Home. You will thus get at least $4 value for $1.10.

E. PRIOR, AUCTIONEER.

Personal attention given to the sale of Real and Personal Estates in Woburn and vicinity.

Office: 393 Main St., Woburn.

I have too many Cloaks in stock. I must get rid of them at some price. I will offer them at lower prices than ever known in this city.

Ranging from $3.00 to $12.00.

I will sell all kinds of Gent's Underwear, Stockings and Neckties, 20 to 25 per cent. less than the usual price elsewhere and everywhere.

I have an extraordinary bargain in Brown Cotton for 7 cents, usually sold for 11 cents. I am smashing the prices on all Millinery Trimmed Goods. And giving bargains in all departments.

I have never been able to sell Nos. 9 and 12 all Silk Ribbon at 10 cents till this season. Gentleman's 37c. Hose at 25 cents, are not found in every place. Call and examine them.

CHRISTMAS GOODS.

Don't delay Christmas purchases. Although the capacity of this store is very great, it is always thronged on Christmas week and many times inconveniently crowded. Better selections can be made and great discomfort avoided by prompt attention to purchasing. I will lay aside for future delivery any article purchased if so desired. It is needless for me to describe or attempt to name the great number of beautiful things on exhibition. It is well known that for many years this is the Banner Store for Holiday Goods. And as for that matter, it is striding ahead and capturing the trade wonderfully, as all observers are aware. Big Stock, well selected variety, much hard work and Low Prices, are sure to win.

WAKE UP GENTLEMEN!

To the idea when you need Furnishing Goods that a great saving can be made at this store.

To Our Readers!

We have made arrangements with the publishers the Cottage Hearth Boston, Mass., to offer the WOBURN JOURNAL with their Magazine this year.

THE COTTAGE HEARTH

Is a well known Family Magazine now in its 14th year, and is a favorite wherever introduced. It has each month MUSIC, FLORAL AND HEALTH DEPARTMENTS, LATEST FANCY WORK, SABBATH READING, DEMOREST'S PATTERNS, APPROVED RECEIPTS, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, AND PRIZE PUZZLES for CHILDREN.

This Beautifully Illustrated

Monthly Magazine has among its many

CONTRIBUTORS

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, LUCY LARCOM, CELIA THAXTER, LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON, GEORGE MACDONALD, MARGARET DELAND, AUGUSTA MOORE, ROSE TERRY COOKE.

It is a large 32-page, elegantly printed magazine and has attained a large circulation solely on its merits as a family magazine. Its

Price $1.50 a Year

is very low for such a desirable home magazine, but we offer to send it a year

Free To Any One who will send us $2.00 for a year's subscription to the WOBURN JOURNAL.

Sample copies sent free on application to F. P. Shumway, Jr., Boston, Mass. We have supplied this magazine in years past to many of our readers and they have been highly pleased with it. For further particulars address WOBURN JOURNAL, Woburn, Mass.

THE KING OF FRIEZE

— FOR —

Drivers, Conductors, Railroad-Men Milk-Men and all whose business is out of doors and who wish a warm and strong ULSTER, we recommend and guarantee ours.

It is absolutely storm and wind proof, as will be seen by the following letter:—

To Whom it May Concern:

In February, 1889, the STANDARD CLOTHING COMPANY sent me a Dark Oxford Mix Freize Ulster, which they call their "King of Freize," with the request to give it the hardest possible wear during the balance of the winter.

Although there was no snow of any amount, it was a very wet season, and I wore the coat daily in my business, and found it exactly as they represented, impervious to water and snow. I have the ulster in use now, and confidently recommend it as the most desirable, strongest, warmest ulster that I have ever owned.

The price of the "King of Freize," $12, brings it within the reach of every hack driver, herdic driver, car driver or any one whose business is out of doors, and who needs a coat that will shed water or snow.

The Woburn Journal

OUR HIGHWAYS.

The following interesting paper was read by Mr. Winthrop Hammond at the November meeting of the Woburn Young Mens Association and is published in the JOURNAL at the request of President Clough of the Association.

Speaking upon the subject of "Highways" at the last meeting of the Young Men's Association, Mr. Winthrop Hammond said that whatever criticism he might make upon those in this city, it was not with a spirit of fault finding; but with the feeling that the city can be greatly improved when all are awake to the deficiencies in comparison with other places of equal age, size and advantages, for I believe we are certainly behind the times in highway construction and adornment.

Is there any one thing that makes a city as attractive as with plenty of shade trees?

Let us realize at the start that for a few years we must bear with our city fathers for they have but about $125,000 to appropriate yearly to all our various departments, including State and County taxes, and of this about $15,000 has been for the past few years, devoted to our highways.

It is certainly unfortunate that we are quite so pinched financially, for it must be plain to every observer that this does not give us satisfactory roads.

We may nearly hold our own but there is no perceptible advancement.

Perhaps a comparison of the amount of money appropriated by other cities for highways may be of interest at this point.

I find by reference to our Mayor's last inaugural address the following statistics as to the average expenditure per mile upon the highways in various cities:

Newton,	$7 50
Brockton,	4 60
Somerville,	9 38
Cambridge,	13 08
Chelsea,	11 00
Lawrence,	5 12
Fall River,	8 25
Boston,	20 12
Woburn,	2 45

We must bear in mind that this $2.45 per mile, or a total of $15,000, not only pays for labor, but also the keeping of horses, care of stone-crusher, purchase of curbing stone and tools, building of bridges, etc.

Whether other places include these items in their reports, I do not know, but it is probable that they do.

Now let us glance at

OUR FINANCIAL CONDITION.

Are our city fathers doing all that can be done under existing conditions?

Right here let me say that I believe the position of the Supt. of Streets, especially when as limited for funds as at present, must be the most undesirable office within the gift of our government. He is in one sense under the control of the aldermen, and still has to stand the criticisms continually heaped upon that department.

We have a total valuation of $8,918,306. Now under the acts of 1885 cities cannot assess over $12, on a thousand valuation "exclusive of State and County tax, and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt."

At this limit they can raise but $104,000 for schools; $10,000 for fire department; $10,000 for Almshouse, support of insane and outside relief; $6,000 for Police; $7,000 for salaries; $5,000 Street Lights, and $10,000 for various necessary items such as Library, printing, etc. One does not have to figure long to find that unless we or other departments, all we have left for Highways is $15,000.

After 1892 we shall be able to breath easier, so to speak, owing to the retirement of certain bonds, and after 1895 our finances will be in still better shape.

As this financial subject is capable of a separate consideration, I will continue it no further at this time.

It seems to me that there is but one conclusion to reach; i. e.: to wait patiently and make our $15,000 per year go as far as possible for the next two years, but at the end of that time let us insist on having and begin on a system that will result in eventually giving us roads second to none in Massachusetts.

For two years later we shall also probably be through with the upsetting of our streets necessary to construct the proposed Metropolitan Sewer.

Meanwhile let us consider how we can improve our highways as far as our finances will admit.

MY PERONAL IDEA

of this matter is that our roads are used too much as an auxiliary to our Outside Relief Department.

I have the greatest sympathy for old, broken down men, and if they are in need of assistance, by all means let our city help them, but not by making our highway department a part of our charity.

I firmly believe that the streets would be if the highways had even $1000 less, and the outside relief that amount more, but have the highway department run on sound business principles.

If you pay $2 per day see that you get $2 worth of labor performed.

As $10,000 of our appropriation is expended for labor I should like to see what a business policy of this sort, followed for one year, would accomplish.

In some places a method is adopted for the setting out of shade trees by yearly appropriating for that purpose a small amount of money, say $200 or $300. Upon application the city sets trees with protectors for $1.50 each, the actual cost to the city being from $2 to $2.50 each. In case a tree dies the city replaces it free of expense to the abutter. Why is not this a good idea for Woburn to adopt?

At some future time when

OUR FINANCES WILL ADMIT

it I would like to see a road continued from the pumping station at our water works, around Horn Pond, connecting with Pleasant street, thus giving us a wonderfully beautiful drive, one which would attract our neighbors, and be a source of great enjoyment to our own people.

Our respected citizen, Mr. Edward W. Hudson, says the view from his residence across Horn Pond is unsurpassed by anything in the old world, and we all know it is a truly beautiful view.

A drive begining at the Centre, down Pleasant street, past our Library grounds, down Canal street, around by the nicely kept pumping station, then through some of the prettiest groves imaginable, with occasional glimpses of the pond, and finally back to Pleasant, would be

ONE OF GREAT ATTRACTIVENESS.

In this connection, that is, of beautifying our city, there is a subject of which I would like to speak:—which comes directly under the control of our Highway Committee.

It is the beautifying of a few public squares.

What would be more attractive to strangers than to see in passing through here, a few tastefully laid out spots such as the triangle where Capt. Crane's house formerly stood, beyond the Cummings School.

What influence would be more refreshing to the population in that district?

Other places in the main approaching to our centre, such as Central Square, Nichols Corner, the plot at the junction of Beach and Salem streets, and the one opposite Mr. James Skinner's residence and the triange

KNOWN AS HAMMOND SQUARE.

In the latter location I have a somewhat personal interest.

The history of the past three years of this lot of land I would like you to know and I believe upon a statement of the facts you will bear me out in saying that in this matter our city officials have shown a decided lack of enterprise, of public spirit, and of appreciation of modern tastes of highway adornment.

I am glad of an opportunity to have this subject understood by others than the immediate neighbors.

After three years effort on the part of one of our public spirited citizens, to obtain this land at a reasonable figure, in 1887 it was deeded to the town, all but $70, of the purchase money being subscribed by ten interested neighbors.

The understanding was that the town should continue Plympton street across this triangle to Main street, and make an ornamental square of the balance by properly grading and curbing it.

Let us see how this was carried out.

After the deeds were given, the town roughly continued Plympton street across to Main street, making no walk whatever, and doing nothing to the Square.

AFTER APPEAL UPON APPEAL

a rough sidewalk was finally carried across on one side, but in such a condition that the Unitarian parish were obliged to lay planks for the tenants of their houses to walk on.

The following Summer street refuse was dumped in the Square for filling.

Notwithstanding the remonstrance of neighbors, this place remained in this condition until last spring, where there was a slight effort to level and grade, but left for weeds to take possession.

It would cost about $400 to put this square in first class shape—that is to curb the sidewalk all around it, then place an interior curbing about 10 inches high, and grading, sow to grass.

If the expense be too great the interior curbing could be substituted by a sloping grass bank until some future time.

THE CITY IS IN DUTY BOUND to carry out its part of the agreement and especially so, as upon continuation of Plympton street, the Unitarian parish built houses upon the two corners of their property, giving to the city enough additional taxes yearly to put this pest hole in presentable shape.

If the neighbors once had an ambition to see this square beautified after grading, by the placing of flowers, or a fountain, is it strange that such ambition is, by this time, strangled?

A petition for the city to carry out its agreement signed by near-by property owners representing several hundred thousand dollars of wealth only resulted in its being referred to the who, it seems, have no authority whatever in such matters.

PARK COMMISSIONERS

Does it not seem to be a short sighted policy, when by justly laying out a few dollars for public improvement the valuation of many estates would be enhanced.

So much for Hammond Square.

During a recent trip as far West as St. Paul, he was particularly pleased with the highways in several of our Western cities.

A city of 150,000 population in one view can hardly be compared with one of 13,000, but, when we think that Woburn is 250 years old, and St. Paul, for instance, less than 75 years, it would seem to offset to a certain extent the disparity.

However, perhaps it may be of interest to those of you who have not visited the West to know something of their streets.

IN ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS AND many other places the streets through the business portion are paved—for the most part with wood,—made in the following manner. The street is arched with stout joist, a few yards apart, giving a foundation of the necessary shape. Upon this are nailed planks, making a road of wood. This then has a coating of tar. Round cedar blocks, say 6 inches in diameter, and 5 or 6 inches in depth are set closely together and filled in between with gravel, and the whole covered with tar, which works down through the gravel and makes one solid mass.

They claim it is

NOT AN EXPENSIVE PAVING

and will last from 10 to 20 years constant wear.

Through the residential portions of these cities the streets are laid out wide, nicely paved with asphault, and kept swept as clean as a house floor.

First comes the customary granite curb, next a plot of grass say 10 feet wide, with trees set through the centre; then the walk, often of granite or concrete, then the lawns sloping to the residences; no fences anywhere in sight.

Regarding the making of sidewalks I was interested a few days ago in being told the methods adopted at

CLIFTON SPRINGS, NEW YORK.

Walks there have the appearance, to a novice, of being made of finely cut granite slabs, extending way across the walk. Upon observation it was found that they were made by filling in between boards laid an equal distance apart, with a mixture of gravel and cement, and topped off with a mixture containing a large portion of cement and less gravel.

Every alternating section was left untouched until the others somewhat hardened, and when the boards were removed, stiff paper was substituted.

When the middle section were finished the paper was withdrawn and the crack gouged out, leaving the appearance

OF LARGE SLABS PERFECTLY QUARRIED.

The greater part of the population, not owning horses, are obliged to walk, and why would it not be practical to have a certain annual appropriation for the concreting of sidewalks and gradually radiating, thus eventually giving us good walks.

BEGINNING AT THE CENTRE

In conclusion I believe the natural beauty of New England, and especially of our own immediate vicinity, to be unsurpassed, and if our highways were strictly first class, one could not find a more beautiful place, East or West than our own favored city.

Cunning, but Tricky.

Literary Notices.

The numbers of LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for the weeks ending November 29 and December 6, contain the Idyll of Brook Farm, China, by Gen. Tsheng-ki-tong, Madame, Robert Henryson, Love the Conqueror, Mutual Aid among Animal, Tarsus—Past and Present, Dangers that Threaten Terrestrial Life, Miss Mitford, Rural Life in France in the Fourteenth Century, Lord Iddesleigh, A Buddhist Shrine, Art Notes in North Italy, by Walter Pater, Newman from Newman's Points of Vew, The Cat as an Unconscions Humorist, An Irish Original, with instalments of Marcia by W. E. Norris, and Eight Days, and poetry and miscellany. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The December CENTURY is more Christmast than is usual with that magazine, there being a Christmas story by Joel Chandler Harris, and a Christmas poem by Frederick Henry Morton of Stevens Institute, while the editor in some Chrisimas Reflections says that perhaps the readers may find as much of the true Christian feeling in Dr. Abbott's article, Can a Nation have a Religion? and in the article on the Record of Virtue, as in the more ostensibly Christmas "features" of this number of THE CENTURY. The frontispiece is a striking head, Daphne, and the opening paper is General Bidwell's account of Life in California Before the Gold Discovery. Here is also published Ranch and Mission Days in Alta California: these two articles showing with what thoroughness THE CENTURY'S new and important series is being carried out. These papers are followed by several other finely illustrated ones nearly as interesting, included in which are: Franklin in Allegory, Fourteen to One, A Pair of Old Boys, Colonel Carter of Cartersville, Sister Dolorosa, The White Cowl, Laurels of the American Tar in 1812, and many others.

A new, attractive looking monthly has come to the editorial desk. The title of this new magazine, THE STORY TELLER, is a taking one and very appropriate. The issue before us is November and consists of a complete serial story entitled The Silver City, written by the well-known traveler and lecturer, Mr. F. A. Ober. The story is embellished with many illustrations. The magazine is presumably for the older young people, from ten to twenty; but if this first number is a fair sample of the numbers to come, not many of the older folks will be willing to lay aside the story until read through. The publishers announce the following stories as arranged for: Dec. number, Two Young Homesteaders, by Theodora R. Jenness. Jan. number, The Dogberry Bunch, by Mary Hartwell Catherwood, author of Romance of Dollard, Rocky Fork, etc. Feb. number, Howling Wolf and his Trick-Pony, by Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney. Each number consists of 80 to 100 large-sized pages, large type. The subscription price has been fixed at $1.50 a year; 15 cents a number. A year's numbers will give the subscriber the equivalent of about $15.00 worth of cloth-bound stories of the very best class. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston. Mass.

A high order of stories, poems, articles and pictures fill the Christmas WIDE AWAKE from cover to cover, while brilliant new type and the discardment of columns give the pages a very fresh and attractive look, and we learn that the magazine is permanently enlarged to one hundred pages. Leading attractions include a new Peppers serial by Margaret Sidney, the promised railroad serial, Cab and Caboose, by Kirk Munroe, Drawing the Child-Figure, the first of twelve pictorial drawing-lesson papers (with monthly prizes) by Miss Caroline Rimmer, daughter of Dr. Rimmer the art-anatomist and sculptor, and Marietta's Good Times, an Italian serial by a well-known Italian woman in Boston. The short stories, papers and poems (and there is a full treasury of them, making a Christmas-stocking book in fact) are by Sallie Pratt McLean Greene, Emma Sherwood Chester, Graham R. Tomson, Ethelwyn Wetherald, Charlotte M. Vail, Elizabeth Robins Pennell, Rev. George Whyte, Miss Hawley, John C. Carpenter, Margaret Eytinge, Miss Poulsson, Mrs. Claflin and Prof. Otis T. Mason. A special feature is the fac-simile reproduction of Mrs. Hemans's original manuscript of The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, which was brought to America by James T. Fields. The price of WIDE AWAKE will remain at $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. announce for early publication The Log School-House on the Columbia, by Hezekiah Butterworth (the third book of the Fiction Series for Young Readers); a Fluttered Dovecote, a new novel, by George Manville Fenn, with numerous illustrations by Gordon Browne; A Washington Bible-Class, by Gail Hamilton; The Journal of William Maclay, United States Senator 1789-1791, edited by Edgar S. Maclay; The Nugents of Carriconna, an Irish novel, by Tighe Hopkins; Ring-Riding, by H. W. Struss, of the New York Riding Club; Socialism, Old and New, by Professor William Graham, a new book in the International Scientific Series; a new edition (the third) of Brazil: its condition and prospects, with a carefully-prepared account of the recent revolution and of the present Government, by C. C. Andrews, ex-Consul-General to Brazil; a new edition of the Evolution of Man and Christianity, by the Rev. Howard MacQueary, with a preface replying to recent criticisms; and a new edition of Appletons' Winter Resorts, revised for the season of 1890-'91.

50th Year is inscribed on the dainty cover of the January PETERSON. This periodical has stood the test of half a century and still ranks foremost among the magazines for ladies and the household generally. It has been enlarged, and exhibits many improvements and fresh attractions. Besides the beautiful full-page engravings, there are several illustrated articles, poems and stories. Oddities In Foot Gear, by Harriet Latham, is exceptionally good, with numerous explanatory designs ranging from Egyptian sandals to Greenland skin shoes. Miss M. G. McClelland and Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper begin serials which promise brilliantly. Minna Irving has a fine lyric. Clarence M. Boutelle, Frank Lee Benedict and other well-known writers, contribute some of the best stories to be found in the month's round of magazines. The excellence of the fashion, needle work and household departments has always made PETERSON an infallible authority. It is now, in its new dress, a very handsome magazine and will more than ten times save the subscription money to every family that takes it. Price $2.00 a year, with large reductions to clubs, and handsome premiums, to those who get up clubs. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, Philadelphia.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON.

With hat in hand the JOURNAL makes its best bow to its hosts of readers and wishes them each and all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

CLOSE OF VOL. XL.

With this issue the JOURNAL closes an existence of full 40 years according to the figures which it carries at masthead, but 39 according to the certified date of its origin, which was, according to the records, Oct. 18, 1851.

But whether 39 or 40 years of age, the JOURNAL will enter on a new volume next week in a healthy, happy and prosperous state, for which it is under obligations to its army of generous, open-fisted patrons, and its own efforts to do right by and please them.

Ladies and gentlemen, accept our hearty thanks for your favors; a Merry Christmas to you all, and "many returns of the same."

— There is to be merrymaking at Stoneham on Christmas. On the afternoon of the 25th there will be a sunlight assembly at Armory Hall in that village for which the finest kind of music has been engaged. The tickets will be 50 cents each.

— The Railroad authorities are putting in a large and substantial sewer from their Centre depot to connect with the main pipe on Main street. Superintendent Sanborn looks to it closely that things within his jurisdiction are kept up in good shape.

— Several petitions are in circulation among the Republicans of this city in favor of the reappointment of Mr. Reade for postmaster. They bear the signatures of some of the most prominent men in the party. Mr. Reade has made an admirable record as postmaster and many desire to have him retained.

— If you visit Boston for Christmas purchases, do not fail to see what is perhaps the largest collection of Christmas gifts in the city, at the warerooms of Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, opposite the Boston & Maine Depot. They have hundreds of presents in useful pieces of furniture, costing from $2.50 to $15.

— Last week Mrs. John Couillard and family moved from this city to Saratoga street, East Boston. Almost a quarter of a century ago she moved from Saratoga street, East Boston, to Woburn, and after all that time she returns. She lately sold her place here, and will probably buy or build a home outside of Woburn and settle down.

— Our markets never in their lives looked more tempting than they do at this Christmastide. Such turkeys and geese and yellow-legged chickens and ducks! Such piles of toothsome roasts and broils and fries! Such heaps of tempting fruit and vegetables! But what right has a poor country Editor to be looking at such rich Christmas living.

— It seems natural to see Charlie A. Jones, Esq., back at the City Auditor's desk. He was appointed to fill the vacancy due to the resignation of Auditor Blodgett. Mr. Jones is no stranger to the post. It has never been filled more satisfactorily. He is an expert accountant and the business of the office was always done on time and accurately under his administration.

— The "Cash Market" in Dow Block is a good place to look for a Christmas turkey. There is no better one. If there is anything more inviting to the eye than the rows of corn-fed young gobblers with which the neat, clean, sweet storeroom is fringed and fluted and frilled we don't know what it is unless it be similar rows of fat chickens and ducks, piles of spareribs, juicy roasts and tender sirloins; the firkins of golden butter, fragrant cheese; the vegetables, the fruits, and all the other good things with which the store teems. The epicure in search of a rich Christmas dinner would not be disappointed at the "Cash Market" for every sweet and toothsome thing commonly kept in a firstclass market he would be sure to find there, and it wouldn't cost "all outdoors" either.

— William C. Johnson, inventor and electrician, was booked for an address on "Electricity as a Business," before the Y. M. A. last evening. Under President's Clough's administration the Association have listened to many able addresses during the year past. It has also been a growing institution. President Clough infuses the most active kind of life into all his undertakings.

— Town and city authorities, roadbuilders, etc., will be interested in a paper on "Highways," written by Mr. Winthrop Hammond of the firm of J. W. Hammond & Son of this city, and read by him at the last meeting of the Y. M. A. and cordially approved by the members present. We publish it at the request of President Clough of the Association, and also because of its worth to the public.

— Dr. Harlow, his attending physician, is authority for the statement that Jacob Brown, Esq., who suffered such terribly severe injuries from a fall from a ladder last week, is getting on very well indeed. Of course, it is expected he will be confined to his bed for some time but there is no doubt of his ultimate recovery. The public deeply sympathize with Mr. Brown and hope he may enjoy a speedy return to complete health.

— Particular attention is called to the fact that Highland Hose Co. of this city have not withdrawn from the Globe contest, but wish all persons having votes intended for the Company to send them in as soon as possible. All votes must be in the hands of the Company by Dec. 23 at 12 M., to give time for stamping and getting them to the Globe office before the vote closes at 8 P. M., of Dec. 23. Read this item carefully.

— We have a suspicion that many a little tot in this city is waiting with impatience for Christmas to come not only for the full stockings which he expects to find hanging by the chimney jamb in the morning, but also because of the share he anticipates in the Christmas treat which Rev. Dr. March gives annually to a company of little ones at the church. They all look forward to the Doctor's Christmas party with a great deal of pleasure.

— The following are the newly elected officers of Burbank Relief Corps, No. 84: President, Mrs. Sarah A. Woodside; Senior Vice-President, Mrs. Marion E. Leathe; Junior Vice-President, Mrs. Mary F. Barrett; Treasurer, Mrs. Ella M. Atwood; Chaplain, Mrs. Pauline A. Whitten; Conductor, Mrs. Harriet A. Knight; Guard, Mrs. Abbie A. Smith; Delegate, Mrs. Sarah A. Woodside; Alternate, Mrs. Sarah F. Duren. The Corps has 74 members.

— J. W. Hammond & Son advertise their fall and winter stock of goods in the JOURNAL and we call attention to the same. It goes without saying that their stock in every department—clothing, overcoats, underwear, headgear, umbrellas, gloves, neckwear, etc., etc., is complete, stylish, and of the best, for they have the reputation of selling only that kind of goods. Nowhere are prices lower than at Hammond's, and nowhere is better satisfaction given to buyers.

— Aha! A poetical humorist, is it? Or the reverse, a humorous poet? The City Press has one and is as proud as a hen with one chicken. It isn't every poor country paper that can glory in such metropolitan airs and luxuries. Boston must make her manners to Woburn now when they meet. The City Press always did have the best in the market and would indulge in frills when the rest of us had to scratch gravel like fury to get enough to appease the daily cravings of our empty maws.

— By postponement the regular meeting of the Woburn Womans Club will be held to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon at 3 o'clock, the usual hour. It will be addressed by Florence Howe-Hall of New Jersey, a daughter of the famous authoress and lecturer, Julia Ward Howe, whose theme will be "The Art of Conversation." There can be no doubt but that the lecture will be of uncommon interest, for the daughter is as generously endowed with brains and tongue as is her gifted mother.

— J. J. Grothe has been doing quite an extensive business of late in the manufacture of street railroad snowplows. The famous No. Woburn plow is the one he makes, nine of which he has lately turned out from his shops on Everett street. He has made six electric ones: 1 for the Lynn Belt Line, 1 for Newton St. R'y, 1 for Brockton, 1 for Augusta, Maine, and 1 for Dover, N. H.—all these to run on electric roads. He has also built 3 horse-power ones: 1 for Lewiston, Me., 1 for the No. Woburn St. R'y, and a sled for the Merrimac road. He has considerable of the work in this line in view. These plows are superior to any others built.

— Midnight robbers and burglars will be likely to fight shy of the residence of Mr. Joseph Buck in the future. Business will probably call them in a different direction hereafter. Ever since some one or more of the light-fingered gentry made a successful raid at Mr. Buck's only a short time before, he had kept a sharp eye out for them—had indeed held himself in a condition to give them a warm reception should they attempt to repeat their foray on his parlors and sleeping apartments. Not altogether figuratively speaking, Mr. Buck kept himself armed cap-a-pie, and last Thursday night his armor came into play very handily indeed. On that night Mr. Buck's home was re-visited by its old enemy, the midnight burglar, and the warm reception spoken of above was ready and waiting for him. He was cordially received by the head of the house in person. Both gentlemen will be likely to remember the meeting for some time to come. As soon as the burglar made his presence known Mr. Buck, with unusual alacrity, was on hand to greet him. Mr. Buck only weighs a little over 200 pounds, and it will be perfectly safe for our readers to conclude that the burglar didn't burgle many household wares nor much money and jewelry from Mr. Buck's premises that night. And it is perfectly safe too to conclude that he will defer a third call on that gentleman until later in the season.

— When Charles Newcomb closed a successful season of fox hunting in New Hampshire some three or four weeks ago he left his hound with a man at Amherst who wanted him to run down some more foxes. He was locked up for the night after Newcomb left and remained confined until the next day at noon when he was let out for exercise. It is presumed that very soon after being released he bid adieu to the Granite hills of N. H., for at a seasonable hour on that same night he reached his home in this city having traveled a distance 40 miles during the afternoon, and that too over a strange road and without a guideboard. In the first place, how did the hound find his way from Amherst, N. H., to Woburn? and in the second place, mustn't he have done a good stroke of pedestrianism that afternoon? Charles thinks his fox-hound is the champion runner in these parts.

— On last Friday evening the Woburn Encampment, No. 72, I. O. O. F., was duly imitated by the following officers: Charles B. Dunkerton, G. C. P.; C. Belding Smith, G. H. P.; William S. Phelps, G. S. W.; Charles A. Mayo, G. J. W.; Francis E. Merriam, G. R.; John P. Loring, G. R.; E. Bentley Young, G. I.; J. Lawrence Martin, A. J. G. At the close of the initiatory ceremonies the following Encampment officers were elected and installed for the then ensuing year: George H. Woodside, C. P.; Benjamin T. Morgan, H. P.; Charles J. Chase, S. W.; Edward A. Dow, Scribe; Robert Duncan, F. S.; George A. Simonds, Treasurer; Etienne C. Colomb, J. W. Subsequent to these proceedings the Patriarch Degree was conferred by Middlesex Encampment of Malden. Then there was a banquet, a pleasant social hour, and a friendly parting. Caterer Hardy of Arlington furnished a handsome repast.

— Some men have a strong repugnance to wearing an overcoat and seldom or never don one. Hannibal Hamlin, ex-Vice-President, used to be one of the kind. He acquired considerable notoriety in this way and also by clinging to his "blue coat and brass buttons" long after they had ceased to be the fashion. Col. Robert G. ("Bob") Ingersoll when he was 40 years old had never worn an overcoat, and we do not know that he has ever in his life put one on. We have had on our list of acquaintances several other gentlemen who cherished this same antipathy against overcoats. Col. H. B. Hayes of this city is one of them. It is very seldom indeed that he is seen with one on. It must be tough weather that can drive him to his ulster and when worn he appears to regard it more in the light of an ornament than a garment whose habitual use is necessary for his comfort. As human animals men indulge in queer fancies sometimes.

— Mrs. Jennings is as well prepared to cater to the wants of buyers of Christmas presents as anybody in Woburn. She is a Mrs. Santa Claus, or Aunty Krisskringle, or whatever the name of the Christmas friend of the young ones may be, and such stores of handsome things she has got hidden away under her counters, in boxes, on shelves, and in secret nooks and corners which will have to yield up their treasures long before the Merry Christmas morning dawns were never seen before! She has everything! There is nobody so thoughtful of the boys and girls as Mrs. Jennings, and one ought just to see what piles of things she has got in waiting for them. Nobody has so many kinds and such beautiful dolls as she has; such an endless variety of toys too! And just look through her windows, boys, and see the sorts of games she has got there for you! and those soldier setts! Aren't they just as big as life and twice as natural? And besides all these, in Mrs. Jennings's "Curiosity Shop" are heaps of elegant pocketbooks, picture-books, toilet soaps—well what's the use trying to name all the useful and beautiful Christmas goods which her store contains? It's no use: we give it up.

— Good Will towards men.

Lynn's City Marshal.

According to reports in the Lynn and Boston dailies trouble is brewing over the selection of a proper person to fill the office of City Marshal in the former place, although it is expected that the matter will give the new Mayor less disturbance of mind than some others seem to be laboring under.

THE WOBURN JOURNAL would not think of alluding to this matter were it not for the fact that Mr. Wilmot D. Nelson, a late resident of this city, and for three years Chief of our Police force, is a prominent candidate for the office of Lynn's City Marshal, with the chances strongly in favor of his appointment. It is stated in the newspaper reports referred to that the election of the new Mayor was doubtless due in considerable measure to the work and influence of Mr. Nelson during the municipal campaign, which causes him to lean strongly towards that gentleman's appointment. Only a small minority of the Board are in favor of retaining Mr. Hill, the present incumbent, who is not only a Democrat and therefore opposed to the Board in politics, but the Mayor was elected on a strict "Law and Order" issue which would make Mr. Hill's reappointment, in some measure, a stultification of the new City government. It is said the Mayor and his friends on the Board are not quite prepared to go back on themselves and the people who elected them in any such manner.

The JOURNAL is very glad to learn that Mr. Nelson's chances for the appointment are so fair. If it is a Marshal who will carry out the Mayor's "Law and Order" rule that Lynn is in search of, a better man for the office than Mr. Nelson cannot be found. For Woburn he made a careful, honest and efficient Chief of Police, and not only was he elected three or four years in succession, but at every re-election his salary was voluntarily raised $100 by the authorities.

Under Mr. Nelson's administration of police affairs here better order was maintained than ever before, hoodlums were brought to know and keep their places; there were more arrests made than in any other town in the Commonwealth of like size, more convictions of illegal rumsellers were among the good fruits of his official services, which would have guaranteed him a "steady job" in Woburn if he had seen fit to accept it. This he did not, to the regret of a large share of sober, moral, law-abiding people of the place, but preferred to return to his old home in Lynn.

The Lynn city government can do no better than to appoint Mr. Nelson their City Marshal. He is a man of good practical sense, of excellent executive ability, was always careful in the execution of police duties, never indulged in spirituous liquors, was ever to be found on the side of law and order, straightforward, conscientious, and would discharge his official duties fearlessly, honestly and faithfully, come what would. And he is a clean, square-toed, loyal Republican.

We hope Mr. Nelson will "get there," for which there now seems to be an excellent prospect.

Just Before Christmas Day.

Before appearing in public on the Friday morning next preceeding the joyous and jolly Christmas Day the JOURNAL's habit has been for several years past to take an evening stroll up and down the sidewalks of the business streets of the place and look at the holiday displays by oil, gas or electric lights, as the case might be, and to make notes of what it saw to be subsequently elaborated and given to its readers in due time. The object of this practice has always been to make our columns useful as well as ornamental to both buyer and seller; and to prove that the habit has been a good one in the JOURNAL's case it adduces the public approval which it has met with and the annual public demand for its continuance. We repeat the stroll, the notes, and the familiar talk this Christmastide.

For the benefit of the numerous readers of the JOURNAL whose homes are in neighboring towns and remote corners of our city we would say that the present displays of holiday goods in our stores and shops are deemed by good judges to be much more extensive and finer than ever before. The towns alluded to, especially Winchester, Stoneham, Burlington, Wilmington, etc., which do a large share of their everyday, as well as holiday, trading at Woburn, will save money by making a note of the above fact and utilizing it in the purchase of their Christmas and New Years presents.

For the benefit of buyers we will improve this opportunity to enumerate a few of the leading holiday stocks in this city and leave it to them to "judge by a little what a good deal means." Let us begin down near the Main street railroad crossing:

For furniture and house furnishing wares and choice things for holiday presents Caldwell's, in the old B. & L. station, is as good a place to visit as there is in Middlesex county.——Mr. Alex Ellis is not in the habit of laying himself out very large on holiday goods but he has some fine glassware, vases, etc. that would make nice Christmas presents.——For a Christmas dinner, or to fill a basket for the poor, there is no place better than the Cash Market in Dow's Block.——Webster, at the old Burgess store, makes an attractive display of holiday wares.

As these notes are intended only as a directory, or guide-board, for buyers, more particularly for out of town buyers, no more than a mere mention will be devoted to a few of the prominent dealers in Christmas goods. That will be all-sufficient to put them on the right track.——For spices for the Christmas pie, and raisins for the "plum-cake," for the choicest of fruits, nuts and confections, and for rich mocha and fragrant Bohea, the Boston Branch is the right place to go to.——Mr. Moses Bancroft has slippers enough to supply all the donation parties in Middlesex county with all they want for the ministers, besides other appropriate holiday goods. Call before purchasing elsewhere.——F. B. Dodge can boast of one of the handsomest display windows in this part of the country. It is rich in gold and silver goods, jewels and precious stones, and there is always a crowd around it after the electrics are lighted. His stock of watches is simply superb, and they are very cheap. And there is no end of fashionable jewelry in his store.——Fred Leeds manages to keep up with the procession in fine style. His step is firm and lively, and he makes a show as attractive as any of them.

Copeland & Bowser make a finer Christmas showing than ever before, which is high praise. The front window display is very handsome indeed, while the store proper is piled full of choice goods of every name and nature—crystal, china, books, pictures, toilet sets, brass goods, stationary, and everything else calculated to make the heart glad at this merry, happy season of the year.——Legg, the photographer, shows some beautiful holiday pictures.——The show window of John Duncan's store is loaded down with fine things.——Mrs. Maxwell makes a successful effort to show nice holiday goods.——Brown, the popular newsdealer, is doing a good holiday trade and has the material to do it with.——Mr. Blank, at Dr. Dodge's old stand, presents some nice things for the season.——Gage & Co., make about their customary display, which is always attractive.——Some idea of what Mrs. Jennings is doing for the young people is given in another item in this paper.

This guideboard would be exceedingly faulty did it not point the index finger of its dexter hand directly to the great Christmas Bazaar of Mr. Amos Cummings's and invite people to go in and see for themselves. Nor is there any great need of doing so either for his store is crowded every afternoon and evening with ladies in search of holiday presents, and the public have found out that he has a complete Santa Claus headquarters filled to the collar-beam with beautiful goods.——In rich plushes, boxes of rare woods, ivory and brass goods, brushes, hand-mirrors, toilet sets and soaps, there is no place on the street that comes up to Lovell's drugstore, or begins to. His holiday goods are all the best quality, handsome, and "all the style," and he is selling heaps of them.——Horton always comes up smiling at this merry time of year. Drop into his store and note carefully his fine holiday stock.——Ah, but aren't there nice candies to be had at Holdsworth's, though! Where can a larger or more complete confectionery establishment be found than Holdsworth's in Fox Block?

Nobody can get by the windows of Mr. C. Willard Smith's fine store without halting to admire the handsome things with which they are filled. They not only stop the passers-by, but crowds of ladies are to be seen afternoons and evenings standing at the counters inside admiring the great variety of Christmas gift goods and laying in supplies against the morning of the eventful day when the stockings of the little folks will yield up their treasures and family Christmas presents are given and received. Mr. Smith's windows are a pretty sight.——And such great fat turkeys as Durward's popular market contains! Such thick-meated ducks! Such tempting chickens! And geese and beef, and fresh pork—ah, but it is a firstclass hotel dinner just to look at them all.

Salesman Fred Lowell claims that no clothing house anywhere can "point with pride" to more artistically arranged show windows than those of Hammond's, and when he puts his mind on the subject and speaks in right-down dead earnest Fred generally comes pretty near hitting the bull's-eye. There are great stocks of choice holiday goods at Hammond's.——There is a nice display at E. G. Clough's large store, the wares being useful as well as ornamental.——A good, steady 30 minutes gaze into Prior's windows is better than a 4th of July celebration. His exhibition attracts more attention from Young American and indulgent mothers than any place in the city.——J. P. Shields, druggist, makes tempting offers of holiday goods. He employed excellent taste in making his selections, and is selling choice wares at cheap prices.——Lamps appear to be Mr. Holdridge's best hold for the holiday season. He has a great variety of them—many very beautiful patterns. He has many other goods appropriate to the season. His prices are low.——Mrs. Packard, in the line of observing Christmas, is not an inch behind the best. The windows of her millinery parlors look very inviting. She is a lady of good taste.

Mr. Charles M. Munroe has richly decorated the show windows of his store with holiday goods and they make a very fine appearance. A great deal of correct taste has been employed in arranging them, and the things which they contain are the best that can be bought. A professional decorator could call Mr. Munroe's west window a daisy.——Waldo Thompson, at L. Thompson's hardware store, has heaps of goods appropriate for Christmas presents, and they look firstrate.——J. M. Gerrish has no back seat when it comes to supplying the public with holiday gift goods.

Christmas at the Churches.

In accordance with past usages Christmas will be observed in the Woburn churches next Sunday with religious services appropriate to the holy season. Especial sermons will be preached in most of them and especial music given. All of which is just as it should be.

BAPTIST.

At the First Baptist church, on next Sunday morning, Rev. Daniel D. Winn, the pastor, will deliver a seasonable sermon on "The First Advent of Christ," and music has been specially selected for the occasion. The choir, under the direction of P. E. Bancroft, with Miss M. L. Bancroft as organist, will render the following selections:

Organ Voluntary.	Whiting.
Anthem. "Unto us a child is born."	Percival.
Solo and chorus. "Calm on the listening ear of night."	Gilchrist.
Christmas Song.	Helmund.
Anthem. "Hail, the King."	Bartlett.
Chorus. "And the glory of the Lord."	Handel.
Organ Postlude. Hallelujah Chorus.	Handel.

FIRST CONGREGATIONALIST.

Rev. Daniel March, D. D., the pastor, will preach a Christmas sermon at the Centre Congregational church next Sunday morning. He has selected for his theme, "The Wonderful Child." The organist, Mr. William Horatio Clarke, who never fails to delight an audience with his selections and masterly execution of them on the organ, has made out the following musical programme for the morning services:

Carol, by Children's Choir. "Glory to God in the highest."
Antiphonal Chant. Gregorian Vente.
Responsive Hymn. "Hark what mean those holy voices."
Anthem. Gloria from Hayden's First Mass.
Congregational Hymns.

In the evening at 6 o'clock, the Sunday School will give a Christmas concert, for which Assistant Supt. Lyford has made out the following:

1. Organ Voluntary.
2. Singing. Glory to God in the highest.
3. Responsive Reading.
4. Prayer.
5. Singing. At last our Star.
6. Opening Address. Ruth Bacon.
7. Recitation. Hail glorious Morn. Sarah Norris.
8. Singing. In the wintry Heaven.
9. Recitation. Christmas Babe. Claire Tagwith.
10. Recitation. In Trouble. E. Fletcher Lyford.
11. Singing. Calm was the hallowed night.
12. Responsive Reading.
13. Recitation. Christmas Story. Grace Norris.
14. Singing. Christmas Bells.
15. Recitation. Out Side. Clara Larsen.
16. Recitation. All the earth is glad to-day. Johnie and Ella Bates.
17. Singing. Song that woke the morn.
18. Reading. A Christ Legend. Miss L. Carter.
19. Singing. Hosanna.
20. Collection.
21. Address. Dr. March.
22. Hymn.
23. Benediction.

UNITARIAN.

This church will hold its Christmas services on Sunday, Dec. 28, for which Organist John C. Buck is preparing a fine musical programme.

ST. CHARLES.

As usual Christmas services will be held at St. Charles (R. C.) church, on Christmas Day for which an attractive order of exercises and musical programme will be made out.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

No special services will be held by this denomination here next Sunday.

SCANDINAVIANS.

For Christmas programme of this church see "Scandinavian Notes" by R. in another column.

She was Bound Over.

Poor Hannah Dillon, more sinned against than sinning, was arraigned in the Woburn District Court last Monday morning on a charge of attempting to shoot James J. Callahan, the switchman at the Green street crossing, and was held for the Middlesex grand jury in $2,500 bonds.

The alleged attempted murder took place on last Saturday evening at the Green street crossing and would probably have proved successful had not the efforts of the crazy woman met with superior physical force. She was arrested while walking on the railroad track about 6 o'clock in the evening in a state of partial intoxication. She resisted arrest by Callahan, who is a special policeman, with all her might, and help was summoned after she had fired two unsuccessful shots at him and she was lodged in the city jail.

The next morning, after becoming sober, the girl told a wild, pitiful story—a story of unrequited love, cruel betrayal, rum and revenge. She said she intended to shoot Callahan. They had been lovers a few years ago, but Hannah fell into bad ways, so Callahan maintains, and he refused to fulfil his promise to marry her. The exciting scene of last Saturday evening was the beginning of the sequel to the former relations of the two.

Hannah F. Dillon is, notwithstanding the ravages made by drink, a handsome woman of 27 years or so. She said she had indulged in no liquor drinking for two years previous to her attempt to shoot Callahan, and the Cainan people where she has worked corroborate her word. But the poor girl is crazy. Her mother has been in an Insane Asylum, and she will have to go to one too.

If the JOURNAL understands the facts, no jury will ever convict her of trying to kill Callahan because no insane person can thus be convicted.

The Woburn Co-Operative Bank.

At a regular monthly meeting of the managers of the Bank held last Thursday evening week $900 was sold at a premium of five cents per share, no more being offered. Why the amount was not larger was owing to the advance sales made during the previous two months which depleted the treasury to that extent.

Public interest in the affairs and success of the Bank has never been so strong as at present since its organization 46 months ago. Its utility as an aid to making homes is no longer a mooted questions, and the number of people who avail themselves of its advantages is constantly increasing.

The Bank has now 375 members; it has $62,825 in real estate securities; and from the funds which it has furnished 16 good houses have been built in this city by people who, but for the aid of the Bank, could hardly have thought themselves able to build homes just yet.

At the regular meeting to be held on Jan. 8 the amount to be sold will be about $3,000 for which, according to present indications, there will be a plenty of bidders. On the 1st of April next will begin the sale of the 9th series of shares, so Secretary Whitcher informs us, at which date probably 500 shares will be offered.

The institution is constantly proving its claim to be regarded a public benefactor.

It's economical—Brussels soap.

"Saved by Death."

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—If you want an opportunity to secure $200 by guessing how Austin Grainge came to his strange death, you must get The Boston Daily Globe on Saturday of this week, Dec. 20.

To secure the prize you have simply to read one of the most intensely thrilling stories of the century and guess how it is coming out.

The Globe of Saturday will give you full particulars.

As there will be a great rush for it, order it of your newsdealer to-day.

Every man, woman and child in New England has a chance to solve this problem and contest for the prize.

The two persons who come next to the successful guesser of the solution will receive $50 each.

The name of the story is "SAVED BY DEATH."

Fine Picture.

In response to an invitation a JOURNAL man visited the home studio of Albert Thompson, the eminent landscape and cattle painter, last Monday afternoon to look at a picture just finished by him for a party residing at Dayton, Ohio, who ordered it on the strength of former products of Mr. Thompson's brush in the same line of work. It was to leave the next day for the West and a few friends of the artist had been asked to call at his studio on Main street and pass on the merits of his last professional achievement, some of whom were already gathered around it when the JOURNAL representative entered the room.

This studio of Mr. Thompson's and its belongings were found worthy of a more extended notice than space will admit of at this time. It was a bright, sunny room of good size, on the first floor of a pleasantly situated house, and seemingly well adopted in all respects for the uses to which it is put. On the walls hung oil paintings, engravings, etc.; others—the finished and unfinished work of Mr. Thompson—occupied easels scattered about the room; there were numerous drawings and parts of penciled designs for pieces in oil; the "tools" of the artist lay around, and many other such things as are usually found in the workshop of painters were there, which, combined on a single stretch of canvas, would of themselves make a very pretty picture.

The piece which the reporter and some of Mr. Thompsons's friends had been invited in to see was a large composition standing unframed in a western light near the centre of the studio where it could be examined to good advantage. The critics present spoke of it in terms of high praise, and properly so for it was an admirable piece of painting—one of the very best of the many of the same kind that have come from this artist's hand.

The principal subject of the work was cattle of course, and the subordinate one was landscape. Mr. Thompson's specialty is cattle-painting, in which branch of the art he excels and is rated high by his brother artists. In art exhibitions his work receives flattering recognition and attracts the favorable notice and elicits the commendations of the best of judges.

In the picture under consideration the foreground was quite taken up with the figures of three cows beneath a wide-spreading oak tree laden with emerald foliage—one standing, and two lying on the greensward. The animals were perfectly drawn and colored true to life. The figure of the standing one stood out in bold relief against the blue sky and seemed almost imbued with life, while those stretched on the sod were ruminant, and one in particular could almost be seen chewing her cud, while the half-closed eyes of the other was evidence of contentment and peace.

The background of the picture was filled in with a range of low hills, between which and the knoll on which were the cows there was a stretch of green meadow, and here and there were trees, suggestions of farm-houses, old stone walls, etc. In places the gray granite ledges appeared above the sod, and nothing could have been drawn and painted to look more natural than they did. It was a fair scene to look on and, minus the cattle (the chief feature), would have been a charming piece of work.

The canvas was one of the largest that Mr. Thompson has ever covered with a cattle painting, and he says himself that he thinks it the best piece of work he has ever done. Those who have seen it agree with him.

Where the Husband Revolts.

An involuntary respect for a neat housekeeper always arises in the breast of a man. A home may be an humble one; its inmates may be poor but if clean and neat, it is preferable to one wherein dirt abounds. 'Tis hard to hold a husband's affection with dirt, and perhaps this is one of the reasons why housekeepers take so readily to that best of all soaps, the famous Brussels. It's economical.

Schuman Quartette.

We were highly delighted with the Ladies Schuman Quartette of Woburn who sang for us at our Twelfth Anniversary, exercises, Nov. 16, 1890. The selections rendered by the Quartette were excellent and were given with artistic ability. We have received words of congratulation for securing the Quartette's services for that occasion.

I take great pleasure in recommending the Quartette to any who may wish to avail themselves of the best of musical talent, and with this note unsolicited to thank them again for their great help to us.

Holiday GoodS.

We are now ready with our usual amount of Goods suitable for the Holiday Trade. Those who have visited our stores in the past need not be told of our many attractions, but simply to be reminded that this year's goods are in no way inferior to those of former years. In fact each year we try to improve. Our Booklets and Cards are vastly superior to anything we have ever had, while the juveniles will not fail to suit all the younger ones. And for the older we have Books by the standard authors. Our Fancy Goods are numerous and our Staple Goods are correct in variety, quality and price.

An early examination solicited.

A Neighborhood Entertainment.

On Thursday evening Organist Clarke invited a hundred of his immediate neighbors, without regard to sect or nationality, to an illustrated entertainment in his new music hall on the Reading boundary, entitled "Faces and Flowers." The enlarged faces of many who were present were illuminated, and the occasion was taken to introduce the features of new comers to the older residents. The delicate pictures were farther illustrated by the appropriate introduction of familiar ballads, but the central thought of the evening was presented by the transmitting upon the silken transparancy that quotation which is silently influencing the lives of many persons with good motives:

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

The pictures were followed by the scene of the grave-diggers from Hamlet which was excellently rendered by a neighbor, Mr. Isaac N. Stearns, who resides on Dragon Court. The exercises were closed by a solo on the trombone by Mr. Ernest Clarke, who had just returned for a short visit home from his western tour with Gilmore's celebrated band.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Clarke, and it was announced that the next entertainment would be made from the talent to be found in the immediate neighborhood.

This hall has been built by Mr. Clarke with the idea of its being the means of exerting a good influence in the locality for entertainments of an elevating nature which can be given without expense to those who may gather there; but the ultimate use of the building is to establish a school for church organists, for which a large three manual organ has already been purchased which will be placed in position during the coming year in the extension of the hall which is to be built in the spring.

It is hoped that by another winter arrangements will be made for an entertainment to be given each week consisting of literary exercises, organ recitals, concerts of vocal and instrumental music, with such other attractions as circumstances may indicate, and the name of the place will be known to the neighborhood as "Clarigold Hall."

"Gentlemen and ladies," said a celebrated lecturer, "I rise to remark that the American codfish ball is not up to the standard of what a codfish ball ought to be, but Brussels soap is away beyond the standard of all soaps heretofore made."

New Officers.

The following officers of Aberjona Colony, 131, United Order Pilgrim Fathers, were elected Wednesday evening: Past Governor, Eliot L. Packard; Governor, Lawrence Reade; Lieutenant Governor, Thomas J. $5,000 in Prizes.

386 Prizes to be Given Away by the Canadian Agriculturist—A Splendid Prize List.

The third great Word Competition for the "Canadian Agriculturist and Home Magazine," Canada's great and popular Home and Farm Journal, will close on the 25th of February next. The following magnificent prizes will be given free to the persons sending in the greatest number of words made up out of the letters contained in the two words, "The Agriculturist:"

1st Prize,		$1,000 in Gold
2nd	"	$500 in Gold
3rd	"	$1,000 Grand Piano
4th	"	$500 Piano
5th	"	$300 Organ
6th	"	Ticket to England and return.
7th	"	Lady's Gold Watch
8th	"	Gent's Gold Watch
9th	"	China Tea Set
10th	"	Hunting Case Silver Watch
11th	"	Boy's Silver Watch

25 prizes of $10 each. 50 prizes of $5 each. 100 prizes of $2 each. 200 prizes of $1 each.

Making a total of 386 prizes, the value of which will aggregate $5,000. This Grand Word-Making Competition is open to everybody, everywhere, subject to the following conditions: The words must be constructed from the two words, "The Agriculturist." The words must be written in ink on one side of the paper only, and numbered in rotation, 1, 2, 3 and so on to the end of the list, for facilitating in deciding the winners. The list containing the largest number of words will be awarded first prize, and so on in the order of merit. Each list as it is received at the office of the "Canadian Agriculturist" will be numbered, and if two or more tie on the largest list, the first received will be awarded the first prize, the next second and so on. Therefore the benefit of sending in early will readily be seen. Each list must be accompanied by $1 for six months's subscription to the "Canadian Agriculturist." One person can send in one or more lists, accompanying each list with $1, for which the paper will be sent to any address for six months. The best family paper in Canada. It is eminently THE paper for the home circle, and at $2 a year is the cheapest and best paper in the market. Remember, you are paying $1 for six month's subscription to one of the best home papers in Canada, and at the same time run a good chance of winning a valuable prize.

The following gentlemen have consented to act as judges, and their decisions will be final: COMMODORE CALCUTT, Proprietor Calcutt's Line of Steamers, Peterborough; A. V. R. Young, United States Consul, Peterborough; D. O. Frye, General Manager Ontario Telephone Company.

The object of the publisher of the "Canadian Agriculturist" in giving away these amounts in cash, is to extend the circulation of the paper, and a number of agents are required in every locality, to whom liberal pay will be offered. Send three cent stamp for full particulars as to clubbing rates, etc. Address, THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST, Peterborough, Ont.

The New Tariff reduces the duty on copper contained in mattex from 3½ cents per pound to 1 cent. This will enable the Eastern Development Co., Limited, owning the Coxheath Copper Mines and the Little River Coal Mines, to ship their copper product to either the American or European markets at about the same profit. Under these circumstances the $1,000 7 per cent. Bonds of the Company, carrying 50 per cent of stock as a bonus, will be sought after. By paying $250 down it secures a bond with the stock, balance on time. Address the Company at its office, 95 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

Woburn all Right, Excepting the Liquor Question.

Politically Woburn's example is worthy of emulation. Partizanship has had no place in her elections since becoming a city, and if she adheres to this course then the stigma that usually attaches to elections of this kind will never mar that city's fair name. The election last Monday emphatically showed the views of her citizens in this matter, for notwithstanding the Republicans and Democrats pledged their support to Mr. Kenney, the Citizens ticket triumphed and not only elected their candidate, George F. Bean, but the entire ticket by a most handsome vote. Partizanship should have no place in municipal or town elections.

Woburn reversed her vote of a year ago and is now classed among the license cities. It was a surprise and it is too bad.—Winchester Star.

Esteemed contemporary, please analyze the vote carefully and then say whether or not "the entire ticket" was elected. But Woburn did very badly on the liquor vote—very.

An Endowment Policy in this Company, issued under the new perfected non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts, provides for three most important things.

1st. It is a security to the beneficiaries in case of the early death of the assured.

2d. It makes a certain provision for the wants of one's older years.

3d. It provides a sum of money continually increasing in amount, that the policy-holder may at any time receive, should he be overtaken by misfortune and lose his property.

No business man can afford to do without the advantage that such a policy may be to himself if unfortunate in business; to his family in case of his early decease or as an endowment to himself at a time in life when, if he has no property, he will be poor indeed.

All classes Policies for any amount issued on this principle.

JESUS' PARTING WORDS.

LESSON XII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 21.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 44, 53. Commit Verses 45, 48—Golden Text, John xiv, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

44. And He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you." He is no longer with them as when in His mortal body. He is the same Jesus as He has proved by walking, talking, eating with them, allowing them to handle Him; but while all this is grandly true, yet He has ceased to belong to the earth in its present state (I mean only as to abiding upon it), for the immortal and incorruptible does not yet dwell on earth.

"That all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning Me." Here is the only key to all Scripture, Jesus Himself. Moses wrote of Him, and to Him gave all the prophets witness, while David also in the psalms spake concerning Him (John v, 46; Acts x, 43; ii, 31).

45. "Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures." As He is the key to all Scripture, so He also by His Spirit is the only Teacher. Who teacheth like Him? The inspiration of the Almighty giveth understanding (Job xxxvi, 22; xxxii, 8). The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. But he that is spiritual discerneth all things.

46. "And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." Jesus in all His teaching appealed to the Scriptures, saying, "It is written," or "What is written, how readest thou?" And now he repeats what He had said to the two on the way to Emmaus, that, according to the Scriptures, the Christ must die and rise again the third day. The promise was that the Christ, or Messiah, should put away sin; but in order to do that He must become Himself a sacrifice, the sinners' substitute, as was typified in all the sacrifices and so plainly stated in Ps. xxii and Isa. liii.

47. "And that repentance, and remission of sins, should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." This the apostles faithfully preached. "Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins" (Acts v, 31). Thus preached Peter to Jews only, before he received the vision which sent him to Gentiles also. "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, and by Him all that believe are justified from all things" (Acts xiii, 38, 39). Thus preached Paul to both Jews and Gentiles at Antioch in Pisidia.

48. "And ye are witnesses of these things." Or, as it is written in Acts i, 8: "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Unto Israel God had said, "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God" (Isa. xliii, 10, 12). It is considered an honorable and very desirable position to be a representative of a country or a government at a foreign court. God chose Israel from among all the nations of the earth to be His witness to all nations that He is the one only living and true God, but while a faithful remnant stood for Him, the majority of the people failed to honor God, but sadly dishonored him, and made His name a reproach. The apostles were chosen to go forth in the name of Jesus, and by living His life over again, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, to win to Christ such as might believe on Him through their word. The Acts of the Apostles tell how faithfully they did this.

49. "And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." It is not possible for the natural man to please God (Rom. viii, 7, 8); he must be born again or from above (John iii, 3, 5, 7). It is just as impossible for the new man to be a faithful witness unto Christ except by the power of the Holy Spirit; and here is where all the failure in Christian life and service comes in.

50. "And He led them out as far as to Bethany, and He lifted up His hands and blessed them." During forty days He had showed Himself alive at various times to various individuals or companies of His followers on ten or twelve different occasions, and always speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God (Acts i, 3). But now the last time has come, and He is about to leave them to appear no more on the earth till His feet shall stand again on the same Mount of Olives when He comes in power and glory, bringing His saints with Him (Zech. xiv, 4, 5; I Thess. iii, 13).

51. "And it came to pass while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into Heaven." Gradually He ascended from their midst, until a cloud received Him out of their sight, and He was seen of them no more. As Stephen was dying he saw Heaven open, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God. As Saul of Tarsus journeyed to Damascus Jesus spoke to him from Heaven and appeared to him. And again to John on Patmos Jesus appeared in vision.

52. "And they worshiped Him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy." When they were so sad at His death, because He had not redeemed Israel as they expected He would have done, how is it that they are now full of great joy when He has gone again and the Kingdom had not yet come? Some tell us that now they understood, as they did not before, that He had come, not to restore the Kingdom to Israel, but to set up a spiritual kingdom in the hearts of men. This is a mere fabrication of man, and it is not only without foundation in Scripture, but is contrary to all Scripture. The true reason of their joy is found in the message of the angels who stood by them after He ascended, and said, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven" (Acts i, 11).

53. "And they were continually in the temple praising and blessing God. Amen." May such be the end of each chapter of our spiritual life, the end of each day and of each week till we see Him. May our days begin and end with praise to God for giving unto us His dear Son, His unspeakable gift, and the great redemption which is in Him. May we be filled with the Spirit, so as to be His faithful witnesses even unto death, and may we each day be found eagerly longing for and expecting His return. Let our hearts say, "I will bless the Lord at all times, His praise shall be continually in my mouth." "My meditation of Him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord" (Ps. xxxiv, 1; civ, 34).

Marvellous Endurance.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times, and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many heart failures. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering, choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swollen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Sold by Charles H. Buss.

Do You Wish

To regain your health if you are all broken down and suffering from nervous prostration? I will tell you what cured me after suffering for months. I used two bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and now I am a well man. C. Stiles, Bookkeeper, Canton.

AT THIRTY-FIVE.

The fruitful years have come and gone,
The seasons paid their toll
To time, and each has given me
Its good to help the whole;
And I stand here at thirty-five
To sum up all the years,
To count the worth of what they brought—
Joy, sorrow, smiles and tears.

My childhood hours are with me still,
In memory's golden cup;
And girlhood's jewels glisten, too;
And womanhood's shine up
Into my eager, searching eyes,
Which see these gems of mine,
In spite of flaws, in spite of wrong,
Or careless cutting, still do shine.

What if I stand midway in life
With youth beyond recall?
It has been mine, and from my soul
Its good can no more fall
Than can the growth of yesterday
From yonder glowing tree,
That used the transient, let it go,
And kept its good, you see.

The coming years are no "decline,"
Else I am much to blame;
If I look down instead of up,
If eagerness grows tame,
If inspiration lowers aims
Because I have grown "wise,"
If sunshine seems a thing less glad,
If I search not the skies.

Because, indeed, they have not dropped
The star I reached to grasp,
If I am heedless of the gems
Within my hand's loose clasp,
Then, I am much to blame, I say
For all the years were mine
To have, to hold, to use, to give,
To make my future shine.

The best of life has not gone by,
It still is mine, I hold;
Today, to-morrow, coming days,
Most surely they enfold
The treasure I have grown unto,
So midway, here I stand
And say: Life is still very good,
With heights on every hand!
—Juniata Stafford in Chicago Tribune.

Needless Precautions.

It is always amusing to encounter anybody newly provided with a dog, especially if it be his or her first dog. There is a mixture of pride, of self consciousness and of anxiety in the owner which is somewhat similar, I presume, to the emotions of a woman with a baby, and certainly not unlike the fluttering concern of a hen with a brood of chicks. If the dog, as often happens, is a puppy, the green owner is apt to feel an alarm on one point that is quite unnecessary—grown dogs will not molest a puppy—they respect his tender years and innocent nature. But this great truth in natural history is often overlooked. Only the other day I saw in Commonwealth avenue a young lady leading forth a St. Bernard rough coated pup, a soft, yielding mass of fluffy brown and white. To caress him would be a delight; to hug him, rapture. The fiercest bull terrier would not have harmed a hair of his round, infantile head. But the young woman whipped out her lash and stood guard, even at the approach of an Irish setter. I longed to set her mind at rest.—Boston Post.

Dress of the Fifteenth Century Spaniards.

The Spaniards were the best dressed men in Europe in the Fifteenth century. They were the first to introduce the more saddish colors, as they were termed, in men's attire—an innovation that was accepted by well dressed men the world over. When King Philip married Queen Mary, of England, the exquisites took up the Spanish vogue, which was maintained for many years thereafter. Philip Sydney, Sir Walter Raleigh, and others of the royal set were the first to assume the costume of the Spanish origin and make it the fashion. It consisted of a very easy doublet fitting the body, the trunks to the knees expanded artificially, and below the hose. The colors were dark. Sir Walter Raleigh's white velvet suit decorated with pearls was a bold deviation from the usage of the times. It was worn at Queen Elizabeth's ball and has been immortalized on canvas.—Clothier and Furnisher.

For the Ingenious to Solve.

The Washington National Tribune revives this: Open a book at random and select a word within the first ten lines and within the tenth word from the end of the line. Now double the number of the page and multiply the sum by 5, then add 20, then add the number of the line you have selected, then add 5; multiply the sum by 10. Add the number of the word in the line. From this subtract 250, and the remainder will indicate in the unit column the number of the word, in the ten column the number of the line, and the remaining figures the number of the page.

The following also is recalled by the recent publication of the 21 puzzle or catch: Arrange the figures 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, using each once and none more than twice, so that the sum will be 21.

No Relation at All.

Incidents of the self assurance of the rising generation are not infrequent. They are not confined to the Caucasian race, however, as a Seattle man found out the other day. The gentleman, who is rather paternal in his manner, was riding in an elevator which is manned by a colored youth. Addressing the youngster he said:

"Well, son, do you have to work pretty hard?"

Like a flash the answer came:

"Huh! I ain't no son of yours. I ain't eben no relation. You white trash is gettin' to be too blame imperant to us colored gen'lemen anyhow. You get out right here."

And our paternal friend got.—Seattle Press.

CASTLES IN THE AIR.

A Fraudulent Bait at Which Americans Are Too Often Prone to Bite.

It would seem, after all the publicity given to the scheme in the papers throughout the country, that few persons would indulge in the chimera of obtaining a part or a whole of the estates said to be held unclaimed in the courts of England. Circulars to the effect that more than half a billion of dollars in unclaimed estates are awaiting the rightful heirs in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland continue to be scattered broadcast through this country, and there is an agency in this city employing men to promote just such schemes.

There is something alluring in this little paragraph: "Thousands of heirs have never seen these advertisements. If your ancestors on your father's or mother's side came from any of the above named countries do not fail to send the ancestral name and ascertain if you are an heir. Your deceased ancestors' rights are yours by British law. We have information of every estate and deceased person whose heirs have been advertised for in 125 years. Send postal note for twenty-five cents to insure information. If you are an heir we will recover the estate for you. No recovery, no fee."

It must have been this circular which caused Miss C. H. Clopton, of Columbia, Tenn., to address the agency in this city for information concerning a supposed Drake estate in England, to which she believed she was an heir. In reply she was told that Mrs. S. M. Redfield, of Edwards, Miss., and Mrs. L. V. Donelson, of Lexington, Homes county, Miss., had filed claims to the estate, and then the ingeniously worded letter suggested to her that she might be permitted to enter the lists with the others' consent. Continuing, it said: "Our terms are the same to each, namely, 1 per cent. of the amount gained. If we gain nothing we get nothing. And if we have to assume the costs, $10 of our fee in advance as a small guarantee of good faith."

The meat of the nut is in the last sentence. The circular distinctly states: "No recovery, no fee."

Miss Clopton replied to this letter in effect that her Uncle Elijah knew nothing about Mrs. Redfield or Mrs. Donelson. In a letter of the date of Oct. 20 she received this brief communication: "In replying to your favor of Oct. 14 we beg to say that Mrs. Redfield has accepted our terms, and suit is now pending in her behalf."

For the benefit of Miss Clopton and others who fancy that they are within one step of wealth the letter of the secretary of the United States legation in London, bearing the date of April 19, 1887, and addressed to a person inquiring about the Sands estate, may be of some benefit: "I beg to inform you that there is no such 'estate' as the one you mention. Vast numbers of people in our country are deceived and defrauded by designing persons, who represent that great estates are awaiting American claimants here, whereas there are none such."

Again, Sept. 18, 1887, a deluded person in Massachusetts, who thought he was an heir to the Lawrence-Townley estate, received a letter of caution, this time the advice coming from Minister Phelps, in which he said: "A worse fraud was never attempted. There is not a pretense of foundation for it in fact. It is simply a device for obtaining money by false pretenses from the credulous."—New York Times.

An Editor's Curious Find.

When the editor of The Athens Banner was living it St. James Goose Creek parish, near Charleston, S. C., he once found a large iron box in an old field, badly eaten with rust. Through curiosity he secured a hammer, and assisted by two negroes broke a hole into it, but some charred human bones and a small key that unlocked the chest were all that rewarded his pains. It was afterward learned that in the early settlement of Carolina an old bachelor left in his will $10,000 to any one who would place his bones in an iron box and burn over it 100 cords of pine wood.

One key was to be placed in a bottle filled with lead, and dropped into a hole in Cooper river, where bottom was never found, and the other left in the coffin. A poor young man complied with the will, and was paid $10,000. The rest of the old man's money he buried, and no one ever found it. He believed that if a person's body was burned in this world he would escape fire in the next. The iron chest is doubtless still where it was left.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Prodigal Son.

The teacher of a Sunday school class of colored children expounded to them the parable of the prodigal son. She described in as graphic a manner as she could the young man eating husks while the swine fed on the corn. In the midst of her description one attentive boy held up his hand and said: "Missus, I think that white boy was a fool." "Why do you think so?" "'Case if I had been him I would 'a' stole one o' dem hogs an' had a good dinner."—Christian Advocate.

Ice Cream and Hot Pie.

"Well, I've waited on gentlemen, ladies and children for twenty-five years," said a waiter in a Broadway restaurant the other day, "and I've seen some queer dishes and some people with queer tastes in that time, but I never saw any one do a thing like that," and he pointed mysteriously over his shoulder to a well dressed young fellow, who seemed to be eating with great gusto on the other side of the room. "What's he got?" asked the man to whom the astonished waiter had addressed his remark. "It looks like ice cream." "Ice cream it is," said the waiter, "sure enough. But what do you think is under it?"

"Give it up," was the reply. "And well you may, sir," said the man with the swallowtails and napkin, "for you might have guessed for a week and not hit it. "It's a piece of apple pie made as hot as can be in the oven. He scooped the ice cream over the top of the pie and it almost hissed. Then he began to eat the mess with a spoon before the cream could melt more than just a little, and he really seems to revel in it. It beats all what people will do to their insides," and the waiter bustled forward to seat a young woman, pretending not to see that an old man who had not tipped him was struggling wildly to get into his overcoat without assistance. —New York Tribune.

Railways' Consumption of Timber.

The round total of timber ties in use on railroads in the United States is nearly 516,000,000, and 80,000,000 are annually required for renewals. Including bridge and trestle work the annual consumption of timber on railways is computed at 500,000,000 cubic feet, requiring the cutting of the best timber from over 1,000,000 acres of forest land per annum. To meet this demand, under our present wasteful management of timber land, the area to be preserved for this purpose would probably exceed 50,000,000 acres, or more than 10 per cent. of our present forest area.

As railway managers prefer "hewn" ties, and "one to be cut from small trees," the timber consumed by railroads, or 20 per cent. of the total consumption, is taken from the young growth. Then 60 per cent. of all ties are oak, the most valuable of all our timber. Reliable investigation shows that in the Kentucky forests, when 40 per cent. of the natural growth is white oak, the new growth of oak is only 5 per cent. after the land has once been cut over for ties.—Philadelphia Press.

Bill of Fare at Andersonville.

The ration for the earlier months consisted of about four ounces of meat and a section of corn bread four inches square by three inches thick. The bread, of unbolted meal, was baked very hard to the depth of one-half inch, while the center was raw. The bread would often be as full of flies as a plum pudding is of fruit. As a large portion of our number drew rations after dark the ingredients were not wasted. During the later months yams, rice or peas were issued in lieu of meat, and meal of grits instead of bread. We had no vessels to receive these, and the steaming rice was shoveled from the wagon box into blankets; or a man would take off his trousers, knot one of the legs and thus receive the portion for his mess. The same method was used in the distribution of the yams and peas, except sometimes the receptacle was a piece of underclothing.—Century.

Usefulness of India Rubber.

Rubber enters largely into the manufacture of artificial flowers, considerable quantities of which are made in this country, and artificial limbs owe much of their flexibility and adaptability to this material. It is the only substance that imitates the ankle action of the human foot, and rubber hands are made so perfectly that many cripples are able to write by their use. The manufacture of smokeless powder has hitherto had most injurious effects on the health of those employed in it; but now the men have been provided with rubber masks, which protect them from the fumes thrown off by the chemicals entering into the composition of the powder. One of the most admirable uses to which rubber has been put is for horseshoes; it is not only light and durable, but it markedly improves the hoof.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Reading During Meals.

To read during meals is commonly reckoned as physiologically erroneous—we won't say as absolutely injurious. The theory is that, as the stomach and other organs require and exert nervous power during digestion, it is better to allow nothing to interfere with their work. We do not say this can be borne out, but the feeling of satisfaction that follows a meal, and which is often accompanied in good health by drowsiness, probably indicates that a certain amount of nervous exhaustion occurs during digestion. The pleasant chat of a dinner party is probably of value physiologically as supplying a slight mental stimulus, without making too severe demands on brain and nerves. If any evidence exists at all on the subject, we think it tends to discourage reading at meals.—Herald of Health.

The vote taken in the Methodist Episcopal churches during October and November is now complete, and shows a good majority in favor of women as lay delegates. New England and the West gave large majorities in favor of the women; the Middle States were closely divided, and the South was generally opposed. This vote does not legally determine the question, which will come before the next General Conference for authoritative settlement. It is merely an expression of opinion; but, as such, it cannot fail to have great weight with the Conference, and will probably secure a decision in favor of equity and common sense.

Frances Willard said, in her address at the recent annual convention of the National W. C. T. U.: "It has been wisely said, 'Only let justice prevail among men, and there will be small need of charity.' Each age develops a new conscience—becomes just concerning a class to which before it had considered itself generous. For instance, a charitable master thought well of himself because he took good care of his slave, but a just master liberated him that he might care for himself. 'An indulgent husband,' as the phrase is, thinks well of himself because he permits his wife to do as she chooses; but a just husband perceives that to do so is her right, which he can neither give nor take away."

From letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. "No, ma'am."

"My girl?"

"No, ma'am"

"My Tommy—has he met with an accident?"

"No, ma'am, it is far worse."

"But what can it be?" Tell me at once!"

"I just came from the new building."

"What new building?"

"Where your husband was at work. Madam, brace yourself to hear the worst."

"And you, you rascal, brace yourself to get whacked by the broomstick!" she replied as she ran for the broom.

When she got back he was standing on the walk, twenty feet away.

"You must be a cold-hearted woman, not to care about your husband's death," he remarked.

"Yes, I guess I am, seeing I've had 12 years to get over it! Now you skip, or I'll call somebody to raise a bump on your head?"—Ex.

The right way to cure catarrh is to eradicate the poisonous taint which causes the disease, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The Siam shoe has the form of an ancient canoe with a gondola bow and an open top. The sole is made of wood and the upper of inlaid wood and cloth, and the exterior is elaborately ornamented in colors and with gold and silver.

The Muscovite shoe is hand woven on a wooden frame, and but little attention is paid to the shape of the foot. Leather is sometimes used, but the sandal is generally made of colored silk cordage and woolen cloth.

The Armenian shoe has a leather sole and heel, without a counter and back quarter. The vamp is made of felt and is beautifully ornamented with needlework done in colored silk thread.

The Persian footgear is a raised shoe and is often made a foot high. It is made of light wood richly inlaid, with a strap extending over the instep.

Mrs. Hodgson may often be seen wearing crimson robes.

Mrs. Frank Leslie generally dresses in handsome black costumes.

I have too many Cloaks in stock. I must get rid of them at some price. I will offer them at lower prices than ever known in this city.

Ranging from $3.00 to $12.00.

I will sell all kinds of Gent's Underwear, Stockings and Neckties, 20 to 25 per cent. less than the usual price elsewhere and everywhere.

I have an extraordinary bargain in Brown Cotton for 7 cents, usually sold for 11 cents. I am smashing the prices on all Millinery Trimmed Goods. And giving bargains in all departments.

I have never been able to sell Nos. 9 and 12 all Silk Ribbon at 10 cents till this season. Gentleman's 37c. Hose at 25 cents, are not found in every place. Call and examine them.

CHRISTMAS GOODS.

Don't delay Christmas purchases. Although the capacity of this store is very great, it is always thronged on Christmas week and many times inconveniently crowded. Better selections can be made and great discomfort avoided by prompt attention to purchasing. I will lay aside for future delivery any article purchased if so desired. It is needless for me to describe or attempt to name the great number of beautiful things on exhibition. It is well known that for many years this is the Banner Store for Holiday Goods. And as for that matter, it is striding ahead and capturing the trade wonderfully, as all observers are aware. Big Stock, well selected variety, much hard work and Low Prices, are sure to win.

WAKE UP GENTLEMEN!

To the idea when you need Furnishing Goods that a great saving can be made at this store.

THE DEACON'S MISFIT.

"I do wish," exclaimed Mrs. Deacon Appleby, "that everything wouldn't allus come in a heap!"

"Wall, wall, Samantha, don't fret," said the deacon, who sat in a corner mending a "hold back," which had broken while driving home from town that afternoon.

"I guess if somebody didn't fret things would get wus than they be, for of all the procrastinatin' critters you beat the wust of 'em. The idea of your waitin' till Saturday afore you went to town to git them clothes, and not a thing to put on your back for Sunday!"

"No use of stewin' about that, now that I've been and got back and bought the clothes," said the deacon, his temper not the least ruffled by the lashing of his consort's rather sharp tongue.

"You've bought 'em but they ain't here," returned the good woman.

"I couldn't wait for 'em to be fixed. The misfit parlor man said that they allus cal'lated to have the goods a perfect, bang up, nobby fit afore he delivered 'em to customers." Lucky, Samantha, that I see that advertisement of the misfit parlors, for there you can git custom made goods at ready made prices!"

"You picked up a good many slang words for one trip to town, it seems to me," said Mrs. Appleby, amid a great clatter of tea kettle and other domestic utensils upon the kitchen stove.

"Them 'ere ain't slang. They're terms that belong to the trade," explained the deacon.

"Wall, I dunno what a suit o' clo'es 'll amount to you, with you in one town and they in another; s'posin' they don't come?"

"I could wear a shawl o' yourn to meetin', and have it given out from the pulpit with the rest of the church notices that I'd got a new outfit somewheres on the way," suggested the deacon, with a humorous twist of his lips, which always had a smile lurking about them ready to spring into visible existence.

"I wouldn't make sport out of sacred subjects if I was in your place," said Samantha with unabated asperity.

The current of debate was turned at this point by the appearance of Doris, whose twenty years of life had developed the energetic qualities of her mother with the never failing good temper of her father—a combination, by the way, which went very well with a sweetly simple manner and a full share of beauty.

"The coach is coming, father," she announced, "and I think it brings Mr. Graves, the new minister."

"For pity's sake!" cried Mrs. Appleby.

"I never thought of its bein' time for the coach yit," exclaimed the deacon, hastily thrusting the piece of harness which he was mending into a pocket and running to the sink to wash his hands.

"Doris has gone to meet him at the door. I shan't with this faded caliker on," said Mrs. Appleby.

"I will meet him, mother, and show him to his room," said Doris, and she added "you and father will have time to brush yourselves up a bit before he comes down to supper."

With nothing but sunshine upon her sweet face she adjusted a ribbon at her throat, and another at her waist, with the effect of a general change of attire, for it took but little to adorn her simple beauty.

She opened the front door just as Mr. Graves alighted from the coach. He was a pleasant faced young man—a student sent there for one Sabbath as a "candidate." As yet he had not gained a very ministerial look, especially since he wore a travelling suit of gray, with russet shoes and crush hat.

Doris greeted him with unconscious grace, but he was a little embarrassed.

"If I may tax your kindness so soon," he said, as he paused in the doorway of the pleasant chamber to which she conducted him, "I would like a needle and thread. I caught my coat sleeve on the door of the coach and the result is a sad looking rent."

And he held up his arm to show the extent of the damage.

"That is too bad, but I can soon mend it for you. I'm afraid," she added, with her sunny smile, "that unless you are more nimble with the needle than father is you would have a hard time mending that. It is a dreadful tear and it will show, the best I can do."

Mr. Graves laughed, and handed her the garment with a grateful look.

"The worst of it is," he added, "I had a parcel checked on the cars and the baggage man couldn't find it at the station when I arrived. It contained more suitable garments than these for to-morrow."

"I hope it is not lost," said Doris.

"Probably it will be found in time for me to check it back again when I return."

In the meantime Mrs. Appleby was bustling about in the preparation of tea and the deacon, having finished mending the harness, was out attending to the chores, which always hurried him at that hour.

Six o'clock came; supper was all ready. Still no express bundle arrived for the deacon. It ought to have come on the coach.

Mrs. Appleby grew more and more uneasy; even the calm deacon began to brush with his hand the clothes he had on, wondering if they couldn't be made to answer in case his new suit did not come.

But no—they would not do. He had been humiliated enough by being compelled to wear them to town that day. The truth was, his thrifty wife had undertaken a few days before these events to sponge the deacon's clothes with a famous cleansing soap which had been recommended to her.

The soap was indeed effective. It removed all the stains and grease, but at the same time took out every vestige of the original dye wherever the sponge was applied. The result was a generally mottled effect which was so ridiculous that the wearer laughed every time he looked at them.

He had hoped that the new suit would arrive before the young minister came down to supper. But it was a vain hope.

"I guess he'll think we're mortal poor for you to wear them things," said Mrs. Appleby.

"Mebbe he'll think I'm all the more stiddy for a deacon if I don't pay so much attention to dress, like the world's people," was the ready reply.

As a matter of fact Mr. Graves did not think of noticing his genial host's attire, and although Mrs. Appleby was "fidgety" at the table Doris and her father were pleasant enough to make up.

But when 9 o'clock—the deacon's bedtime—came and Mr. Graves retired for the night the Applebys looked at each other in dismay.

"Now what d'ye think?" exclaimed Mrs. Appleby.

"Looks as if I'd got to stay at home from meetin' to-morrow or go and wear these here brindle trousers," said the deacon with a rather dismal smile.

"If it only wasn't wicked to pretend to be ill and not to go," said Doris faintly.

"But it is wicked," asserted her father.

"Jest as I expected 'twould turn out when you come home without the new clo'es," said Mrs. Appleby.

"I don't see how I could help it. They needed fixin' over, and I knew you'd scold if I axed you to do it with so little time."

"You oughter got 'em the fust of the week, as I told ye to. It all comes of your procrastinatin' that I'm allus tellin' ye about."

"There is somebody at the door this minute," cried Doris, and she flew to answer the knock.

A boy stood on the step with a bundle.

"Express for the deacon," explained the youngster. "Carried by on t'other train, and come back on the one from the west. Dad told me to fetch it right up, as ye might be wanting of it!"

"There, there, Samantha!" cried the deacon, holding the bundle exultantly close to the good lady's face.

"Now what comes of all your talk? Here's the clo'es, and they sent 'em jest as they said they would."

Samantha relented in spirit, as she usually did after the worry of the day was over, and so they retired in peace. The deacon would have liked to try on his purchase before going to bed, but it occurred to him that that would appear like boyish impatience, so he contented himself with tearing a hole in the wrapping paper and obtaining a glimpse of the dark goods through the opening.

In the morning, for some unaccountable reason, the Applebys all overslept, and when the deacon and his energetic wife arose they found that they had a narrow margin of time in which to do the ordinary morning work of a farm, which cannot be omitted even on the Sabbath.

This tended to irritate Samantha, and even the deacon found it hard to keep his Sunday countenance during a hastily prepared breakfast. Mr. Graves was a little anxious over the coming ordeal of preaching, for the second time in his experience, a regular written sermon.

"We'll be late, just as sure as the world!" said Mrs. Appleby for the dozenth time after Mr. Graves had gone to his room for a half hour of meditation.

"Time enough, mother. Don't fret," said the deacon.

"But you've got your clothes to change yet, and no knowin' whether they'll come within a rod of fittin' ye," persisted Mrs. Appleby.

"I'll risk it. I'll wear 'em anyway, fit or no fit," said the deacon impatiently.

"I will hitch up the horse for you, father, so you can have more time," said Doris.

"That's a good gal! I wish ye would, for I declare for it I hate to have ter hustle round so like a house afire Sunday morning."

Mr. Graves came down ready to start. Mrs. Appleby tried to entertain him with becoming before meeting topics while the deacon was getting ready. Doris came in and said the team was ready.

Still Deacon Appleby did not put in an appearance. His wife fidgeted, Doris became uneasy, and Mr. Graves looked at his watch.

"What in the name of natur' can that man be a-doin'?" exclaimed Mrs. Appleby at last.

She started to go and see, when the door opened and Deacon Appleby came in. His face was very red, and there was a queer pucker about his lips as though he were suppressing an inclination to laugh.

"Good land!" ejaculated Mrs. Appleby.

"Why father!" Doris exclaimed.

Mr. Graves stared at the apparition in the doorway, then looked down at his own slim length, and back again at the ample figure of his host, while his pale cheeks became almost as red as the deacon's.

"Got the hoss ready?" ventured the latter.

"Yes, father. But"——

"Wall, we hain't much time to spare. Ye see"—The good man was on the point of making an explanation, but checked himself and began, with short, cautious steps to cross the room, adding:

"Come, come, if the hoss is ready."

A more ridiculous figure than that cut by the deacon it would be hard to imagine.

He had put on his new suit of clothes. They were made of dark goods of fine quality. But the legs were several inches too short, and so tight that they set like the costume of a circus performer. The coat was equally short, and to introduce the buttons to their respective buttonholes would have been an impossibility. And every moment the deacon made a vain attempt to stretch the too economical waistcoat down to cover a zone of white shirt and suspender buttons betwixt that garment and the trousers.

"What in the world did you buy them duds for?" gasped Samantha in the deacon's ear, when they were seated beside each other on the forward seat of the beach wagon.

"Don't say a word, please don't, and mebbe there won't nobody notice it!" was the hurried response.

"Not notice 'em!" echoed Mrs. Appleby.

"There's a pesky mistake, unless the clo'es shrunk tremendously after I left them," said the deacon.

At the meeting house the latter glided into a pew near the door partially unobserved, after the services were begun; and in perspiring misery he sat through the hour of worship until aroused by a touch upon his arm. It was the boy who had brought the express bundle the evening before, and he had another bundle now.

"Dad didn't see this one when he sent me up last night, and so I fetched it here, knowin' you always was ter meetin'," said the boy, handing over another bundle.

"What have you there, father?" Doris exclaimed noticing the bundle hugged under his arm.

"Oh—yes—I forgot—but it's your'n, I guess," he stammered, giving it to Mr. Graves.

The latter looked at it and shook his head.

"I think not. Mine was larger and in plain wrapping."

The deacon stared at the bundle which was returned to his charge, and the words "misfit parlors" in large letters swam before his gaze.

On the way home Mr. Graves and Doris did all the talking. The deacon went into the house with the bundle, and the first thing he did was to open it.

"Wall, I do vum!" he exclaimed, holding up coat and trousers, which were certainly a fit for himself.

"Them are the clo'es I bought!" he declared.

"Then whose are them you've been tryin' to squeeze yourself into, I'd like to know?" demanded Mrs. Appleby.

Both glanced toward the doorway. Mr. Graves and Doris stood on the threshold, and both were smiling.

"Father," said Doris, with her sweetest laugh, "the parcel which came last night was for Mr. Graves. Those are his clothes which you have on."

It hardly seemed like Sunday in a deacon's household, with a minister for a guest, during the next half hour. It would be difficult to say which laughed the hardest, for even Mrs. Appleby did her share in that line.

"Wall, we'd better swap back, if 'tis the Sabbath," said the deacon at last. And Mr. Graves laughingly assented.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Graves remained through his vacation and preached regularly at the little meeting house.

With the next term he graduated, was called to the rural parish, and set up his home there, with Doris Appleby to furnish sunshine for him.—Ernest A. Young in Yankee Blade.

He Sat Down.

Every bench on the east side of Battery Park was full of sitters—old and young men and women, boys and girls. A man, who seemed to be pretty well tired out, walked up and down for ten minutes, and then, seeing that nobody moved, he walked up to a bench on which five men were sitting and said:—

"Any of you men seen a $5 gold piece around here? May have been, lower down."

All jumped up and began to search, and three started for the other bench. The man then sat down with a sigh of satisfaction, and five minutes later, when all had seen through the trick, four of the ousted sat down with him, while the fifth stood and figured for a while, and then said:—

"Say, I'll tie one hand and both legs behind me and fight you for a cent!"—New York Sun.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at H. L. Flanders & Co. Drug-store.

A Debating Society.

The Methodist church is at this moment a great debating society, with the question of woman's rights for discussion. This topic is up in their newspapers. It is at the minister's meetings East and West, and North and South. It is in the pulpits, and it will not cease till it is decided whether women may be admitted as lay delegates to the General Conference. Women outnumber the men in the Methodist church, as they do in all the churches, and they do a vast amount of church work. How reasonable it is that they should be delegates to the Conference!

They All Failed.

The following letter from Mr. W. A. Thomsom, of Columbus, Wis., is peculiarly interesting: "My wife," says he, "has been treated for her head, stomach and nervous prostration by three doctors in New York, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, one in Cincinnati, and at the large institute in Buffalo for 16 months. They all failed. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine helped her wonderfully." This should be used in all headaches, backaches, changes of life, nervous disturbances, fits, rheumatism, etc. Ask at Charles H. Bass drug store for a free trial bottle and Dr. Miles' new book on the Nerves and Heart.

Read and study out subjects of interest, and be ready to begin the ensuing season's work promptly, with an adequate comprehension of the extent of the business to be conducted, and a just appreciation of the details therein involved.

The Moustache Index.

There is a great deal of character in the moustache. As the form of the upper lip and the regions about it has largely to deal with the feelings, pride, self-reliance, manliness, vanity, and other qualities that give self-control, the moustache is more particularly connected with the expression of those qualities or the reverse.

When the moustache is ragged, and, as it were, flying hither and thither, there is a lack of proper self-control. When it is straight and orderly, the reverse is the case, other things, of course, taken into account.

If there is a tendency to curl at the outer ends of the moustache, there is a tendency to ambition, vanity or display. When the curl turns upward there is a geniality, combined with a love of approbation; when the inclination is downward, there is a more sedate turn of mind not unaccompanied with gloom.

It is worthy of remark that good natured men will, in playing with the moustache invariably give it an upward inclination, whereas cross-grained or morose men will pull it obliquely downward.

Let her now tell the story herself: "I was at a party and at its close the host asked him to see me home. He consented, but I could see that he was ill at ease. He walked by my side all the way home but never opened his lips. I tried to talk, but being almost as bashful myself, did not succeed very well. When we reached the gate I thanked him, and said "Good-night." Spanking is Good.

Opinions are much divided as to the efficacy of "spanking," so-called. There are mothers who pride themselves on "never laying a hand" upon their children, and the fiat has gone forth among educators that the teacher unable to manage her class without a resort to corporal punishment does not deserve to be a teacher. Well, all can think as they please, of course, but there are certain times with children and moods in children which call for a genuine, old fashioned spanking as a means of grace. As not a few mothers can testify from actual experience, bad tempers and naughty ways have often been "nipped in the bud" by a little physical pain administered just at the right time.—Ex.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

EXPIRES ON JAN. 1, 1891.

The agreement made between the Knights of Labor and the Manufacturers Association in this city last spring will expire by limitation on Jan. 1, next. A meeting between the Executive Committee of the Knights and a representatation of the M. A. was held a few days ago with a view of making arrangements for the future, at which however nothing of a definite character was accomplished. Indeed, it is understood that neither side had any propositions to offer in regard business matters.

It does not by any means follow, if we understand the situation, that, because no advances were made for a renewal of last years's agreement or a new one suggested, there is any friction between the manufacturers and employees—it simply means that both sides prefer to continue their business relations untrammelled by arbitrary conditions that both may at any time become weary of. So far as anything has come to light, good feelings exist all along the line and no trouble is apprehended from any quarter. It is earnestly to be hoped that there will be no repetition this season of last winter's disastrous labor difficulties—that there will be no strikes or lockouts—but that patience and forbearance may control the actions of the manufacturers and workmen in all their business relations.

A Woburn correspondent of the Boston Evening Traveller had this to say in his last Tuesday's letter, and the suggestions are worthy of being well considered and followed out. Another big strike here this winter should certainly be avoided if possible. The Traveller writer says in speaking of the meeting of the committees and labor matters here:

"Neither committee had any proposition to offer and the meeting adjourned without accomplishing anything, thus leaving the matter in uncertain state. The manufacturers are hopeful for good business for the new year and it is desired by the people of Woburn that a definite and amicable understanding may be arrived at between the employers and their help that the city may not suffer from such labor troubles as were passed through last winter. The city has not yet fully recovered from that severe blow."

IRELAND'S DEFENDERS.

"The greatest hero of the whole
Is he who can himself control."

Last Monday a special election was held in Kilkenney, Ireland, for a Member of Parliament at which the anti-Parnellite candidate was chosen by an overwhelming majority. The campaign had been a exceedingly bitter one, for on the result of it Parnell had staked his claim to the leadership of the Irish party in Parliament, although since his defeat he and his friends say the contest for supremacy has only fairly begun.

Since the verdict in the O'Shea divorce case in which he was made co-respondent, and his abandonment by Gladstone, by the Irish priesthood, and a good share of the National party headed by nearly all of its most able and trusted leaders, on account of his moral turpitude brought to light in that case, Parnell has acted more like a crazy person than anything else, and everything he has done would seem to be with a view to political self-destruction. He is now in Paris trying to patch up a peace with some of the anti-Parnellite leaders, in which he will probably meet with poor success.

What effect the sudden and terrible fall of the old leader will have on the Irish question it is hard to say. Davitt, McCarthy and other anti-Parnellite leaders claim that the overthrow of Parnell, who was never true to it, will help along the cause and hasten Ireland's redemption, and every true friend of the Emerald Isle will hope they are right.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE.

There may be some doubt about the wisdom of Senator Hoar's insisting just at this time on the passage of political measures to the exclusion of those calculated to relieve the business of the country from the state of stagnation into which it has been thrown by the present anomalous condition of the money market. More business and less political legislation by the general government is what the interests of the country demand just now.

☞ Congressman-elect Hoar of this District returned last week from Virginia where he went to enjoy a period of rest demanded by the tremendous draft which the campaign made on his vital forces. It is very gratifying to learn that while away he recovered from the perilous state of exhaustion which he was in. He is said to be quite chipper again.

☞ The amount of advertising in the Boston Sunday Herald for a month or so past has been immense. Boston business men know where to go to get the most and best advertising done for their money.

☞ The General Court for 1891 will convene at the State House in Boston and organize one week from next Wednesday.

— The Ladies of the "Cecilias," who are all well known in Woburn, will give a fine concert on Tuesday evening, January 13th, in the Unitarian church.

— Chief McIntosh and Officer McDermott made successful liquor raids on the premises of Barney McHugh, Hugh Dever, and John A. McMullen last Sunday.

— Mr. Levi W. Cooper, who was severely injured by a fall on the ice a fortnight ago, is on the streets again although he still carefully nurses one one arm in a sling.

— Col. C—— is a leading member of the Editorial Staff of the C. P. of this city. In picking up accounts of local happenings and doings he makes the fur fly, so to speak.

— Horton, at the Old Woburn Bookstore has on hand all kinds, sizes, patterns and prices of 1891 Diaries. It is high time for everybody to get his or her diary for next year.

— Mr. John C. Buck has accepted the office of organist at the Unitarian church. He was organist at the Congregational church for several years where he was very much liked.

— The JOURNAL was favored with a very pleasant call from Sister Wilson of the Winchester Star last Tuesday afternoon. She reports everything lovely in Woburn's fair suburb.

— Renewing his subscription, Mr. T. Frye of Ayer writes "find — dollars for next year's subscription to our old friend, the WOBURN JOURNAL." They all like their "old friend," the JOURNAL, this year!

— Albeit the sun was out but a small part of the time, Sunday was by no means an unpleasant day as respects weather. It was fairly moderate as to temperature, and the churches were tolerably well filled.

— We desire never to set our eyes on larger, fatter, fairer or more tempting geese than Fred Hartwell had hanging up in his market for Christmas dinners. He's got some of them left for New Year's.

— In a card Mayor Johnson has requested that there shall be no smoking in the Municipal Building during business hours. The Globe tried to make a great hue-and-cry over the "order," but it was stillborn.

— Mr. Waterman Brown, gateman at Church Ave. crossing, will hereafter take the thermometer at 7 a. m. instead of 6 a. m. as heretofore. The former compelled him to rise too early on Sunday mornings.

— A very excellent calendar for 1891 is that issued by D. J. Reilly & Co., printers roller-makers at 324 Pearl st. N. Y. It is large, plain and practical, and that is what calendars ought to be made for.

— Miss Fanny T. Hartwell, oldest daughter of our esteemed fellow citizen, Mr. Fred A. Hartwell of the City Market, has gone to Florida with a party of Winchester friends and will remain there until spring.

— Miss Evans and Miss McLean, fashionable dressmakers who have occupied rooms on Church Ave., have changed their headquarters to the Boutwell residence on Pleasant street. Read their card in this paper.

— There will be the usual reception and Pound Party at the Home for Aged Women on Thursday, Jan. 1. All who can do so are cordially invited to call upon the ladies and cheer them with kind words and small gifts.

— We heard quite a number of women say that actual trial proved to them that just as nice Christmas goods were to be found in Woburn as in Boston and the prices were lower here than there. Which speaks well for Woburn.

— Never be led to purchase a cheap Book-case. It is money wasted. Go yourself or send to Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston, where you can purchase a large Bookcase, finely made, and handsome in appearance, as low as $10.

— Prof. Emerson, formerly Superintendent of the Woburn public schools, declined a reappointment to the office of Superintendent of public schools of Newton last week and a successor was elected. Prof. Emerson stands high in this State as an educator.

— The JOURNAL has received many compliments from business men for its racy "Just Before Christmas Day" published in its last issue. With thanks for the same, please be assured, gentlemen, that the JOURNAL hardly ever fails to "get there."

— A holiday in a city comes as near being lonesome as they make them. It seems all right to close places of business on Sunday, but when it comes to shutting up everything on a week day it is rather more than frail humanity can stand without a kick.

— Mayor Bean will deliver his Inaugural Address before the City Council on Jan. 5, prox. We are getting ourselves in trim for listening to a good thing. Mayor Bean is one of the best educated men in this town and as bright as a dollar.

— The installation of the officers of Post 33, G. A. R., will take place on the evening of Jan. 1, by John Welch of Post 42 of Lowell. It is probable that members of Post 119 of Lexington will attend the Campfire and supper which will follow the installation ceremonies.

— The Sunday School of the First Congregational church finds some difficulty in getting their elected officers to accept. John L. Carter declined a re-election, so did Will Crosby as Secretary, and others refused honors. The election was postponed to next Sunday.

— We acknowledge the receipt of local papers from Thomas H. Hill, Esq., of Sequachee, Tenn., where he is located as the Secretary and General Manager of a big land company. One of the papers had quite a piece about Sequachee which, it said, is flourishing like a green bay tree.

— The installation services of Brewster Colony, No. 19, U. O. P. F., will take place Thursday evening, Jan. 1. Dist. Deputy Alice J. Durgin and Staff of Stoneham will perform the work. The Supreme Officers are expected to be present, also a delegation from Miles Standish Colony of Stoneham.

— Mr. Elisha F. Hayward has finished the business census of this city and sent in his final reports last week. They embraced the business statistics of 288 establishments. It was no small job to do this work, but it was important, and Mr. Hayward has received the approval of the Bureau for it.

— Mr. Bryan McSweeney of 7 Munroe St. returned from Olean, N. Y., last Monday for a visit with his family and friends. He was away just 8 months during which time he has been making leather at Olean, and will remain until after New Year's. A plenty of his old neighbors were glad to see him again.

— The annual meeting for the election of officers of the Ladies Charitable Society connected with the Unitarian church will be held in the church parlors next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, but the regular monthly supper which usually follows in the evening is postponed until the following Thursday evening, Jan. 8, at the usual hour.

— Representative Charlie A. Jones has been elected Auditor of the city of Woburn. The choice is a good one, securing the services of an able, painstaking and genial official. Bro. Jones has the congratulations of the Item.—Lynn Item. Editor Parker knows whereof he speaks, hence the value of his testimony as to Mr. Jones's merits.

— Chief McIntosh will remain at the head of the Woburn police under the new administration it is said. We hope so for he is an honest and efficient Chief under whose sway there has been good order and a decrease of illegal rumselling. That is the kind of a Chief of Police Woburn needs, so there can be no doubt but friend McIntosh is perfectly secure in his position.

— It was tolerable cold weather on the day before Christmas and several not very successful efforts were put forth to give us some snow. There were frequent squalls sometimes accompanied with snow, the wind was high, the sun shed sort of cold, sickly rays, and, take it by and large, the weather and appearance of things were anything but cheerful and Christmas-like.

— Postmaster Reade of Woburn, whose term expires Feb. 22, is being urged for reappointment by the press and citizens generally of that city. Although a Democrat he does not let his politics interfere with the management of his office, and he gives Woburn one of the best administered offices in the State. True reform means a continuance in office of Mr. Reade.—Winchester Star.

— The annual Firemen's ball will take place probably on some Friday evening in January. The following members constitute the Ball committee:—Chief Engineer Ferrin, Assistant Ames, Foremen Charles A. Wood of Hose 1, Charles E. Eaton of Hose 2, James H. Doherty of Hose 3, Lawrence Martin of Hose 4, John H. Bates of Hose 5, George H. Newcomb of Hose 6, Edward E. Stowers of Hook and Ladder 1.

— The following are the new officers of Womans Relief Corps No. 83: President, Mrs. Octavia E. Dou; Senior Vice-President, Miss Susan Tebbetts; Junior Vice-President, Mrs. Eliza Tabor; Treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks; Chaplain, Mrs. Margaret Cutter; Conductor, Mrs. Lillian Trull; Guard, Mrs. Lizzie Higginbothom. Delegates to Department convention, Mrs. Helen Patten, Mrs. Martha Mason; Alternates, Mrs. Eliza Fay, Mrs. Maria Stowers.

— Mrs. James I. Hanson's private art exhibition given at her pleasant residence on Eastern Ave. last week was highly enjoyed by all present. Tickets of invitation were issued so that a selection of guests was possible and the company therefore were of a choice character. A variety of paintings and other art products were tastefully displayed in Mrs. Hanson's parlors in the consideration of which a couple of afternoons and evenings were very agreeably passed.

— The JOURNAL was so full of the Christmas spirit last week that it forgot there was more than one day for merry-making and the enjoyment of good things during the holiday season. One of the matters it didn't get right, having been led astray by the spirit aforesaid, was the date of Dr. March's annual candy party to the small folks. It always takes place on New Year Day instead of Christmas Day, and next Thursday instead of last the good Doctor will make many juvinile hearts rejoice over his annual distribution of sweet and toothsome things.

— We don't quite see why Charlie McDonald was "given leave to withdraw" by the Common Council on his application for State Aid. It has always been understood that nobody was more deserving of it than he. Charlie was a brave soldier; he carries the evidence of it around in his body; he is not overburdened with this world's goods; and there is certainly no more deserving person in Woburn on the score of uprightness of daily walk and conversation than the Veteran Charles A. McDonald. It seems to an outsider as though his petition for State Aid ought to have been granted.

— The other day we got a paper called the Pell City Globe which was a copy of the first issue of a 4-page, 6-column sheet recently established at Pell City, Ala. This Pell City ought to be named "Maxwelltown," for our friend Mr. John Maxwell of Winchester was its founder and appears to be its principal owner. We see by the copy received that he is a Director of the Bank of Pell City with a capital of $50,000; a Director in the Pell City Iron and Land Company with a capital of $100,000; the proprietor of a big livery stable; Vice-President of the Pike Investment and Improvement Co., capital $200,000; and we don't know what else he has embarked in down there. But Bro. John is a rusher.

— Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, the daughter of Julia Ward Howe and the author of "Social Customs" and other books of a similar nature, lectured before the Woburn Woman's Club on Dec. 20, on "The Art of Conversation." The next meeting of the Club will be held on Jan. 2, at 3 p. m. in Concert Hall when Mrs. Erving Winslow will read from Ibsen's "Doll's House." Mrs. Winslow although born in London of German-English extraction, yet hails from Boston as her husband carries on business in that city. Mrs. Winslow has been favorably received abroad and with enthusiasm in London, where she appeared to large and cultivated audiences in the Haymarket Theatre. Her tour through the Western States was a marked success, and let us hope her visit to our city may be greatly enjoyed and appreciated by our citizens.

— Mr. William B. Ward is an old saw-maker and no one knows the business better than he does. He was an employee of the Woburn Saw factory at Montvale for 35 years and only recently left when the establishment was absorbed by a syndicate. Mr. Ward knows a saw as far as he can see one. He is now engaged in sharpening them, together with scissors, knives, and all sorts of implements of the kind. He is original. He has fitted up a carriage to go about the country in quest of business. It is supplied with all necessary accommodations, "modern improvements," and handy appurtenances, for prosecuting the trade, and it is as unique and attractive as it is comfortable and and handy. Mr. Wood enjoys a first-class patronage and is coining heaps of money as a perigrinating saw-filler and scissors-grinder, and may his shadow never grow less.

— While mince pie is regarded as especially designed for Christmas time it is an article of food that is expected to be current in every well-regulated household all winter long. It is generally looked upon as staple goods, and no thrifty New England housewife would think of such a thing as allowing her cupboards to be without a good supply of juicy, spicy, liberally-fruited, short-crusted mince pies any time from November to April. But mince pies are an insipid kind of a dessert unless "highly flavored," that is to say, unless they are generously furnished with spices, or have pungent and fragrant things plentifully intermingled with the meat, suet, apples and boiled cider of which they are principally composed. A person is seldom met with who does not like a genuine New England mince pie, but he don't like them flat—that is to say, he wants the "seasoning" of them to greet his nostrils pleasantly and take hold of his tongue sharply and tickle his palate lively, else they are no mince pies for him. The spices for them can be procured at Fitz & Stanley's Boston Branch grocery.

— Mr. Frank L. Perry, who has so long occupied the position of head clerk at the coal office of Mr. J. B. McDonald in this city, and so acceptably to the public, will take a similar situation in the Boston office of the Weston Lumber Company, of which Mr. McDonald is President. Mr. Perry will have no connection with the Asbestos Paper Company of Boston, of which Hon. Edward D. Hayden of this city is President and Mr. McDonald Treasurer, except so far as to take care of their books, as he has been doing ever since the election of Mr. McDonald to the office of Treasurer. The Asbestos Paper Co. and the Asbestos Packing Co. of New York, of which Mr. Hayden was formerly the President and W. B. Doyle Treasurer, have no connection, as has been erroneously stated. Mr. Perry will be at Mr. McDonald's coal office in this city mornings and evenings to aid book-keeper Edwin C. Cotton who will continue to occupy the position he now fills so well and acceptably. Mr. Perry will not change his residence on account of taking the Boston position but will remain an esteemed citizen of North Woburn.

— A large percent of the employees of our leather establishments are now idle but why, the JOURNAL will not undertake to say. Workmen, instead of filling the factories, are now lining the streets, which would not be the case could they find work to do. It is a hard lay for the poor man to be thrown out of employment in the dead of winter and for his resources for the means of support of his family and self to be cut off in the hardest part of the year when it costs the most to live and the necessities of life are the most imperative. The reason given for the present slack times in the leather establishments is said to be dull trade. The proprietors claim that sales drag and prices are down. They say they cannot afford to make leather under the present condition of things. Somehow this change seems to have come on very suddenly. The manufacturers have had a prosperous season and just why things should experience such a radical turn-about is something of a riddle to those outside of the business. It is to be hoped that the leather trade will soon revive and that the hundreds of tanners and curriers now idle in this city may speedily be summoned to their old places and work given them that wages may be earned to live on.

Trusts and Mistrusts.

We are often asked to put our trust in things above; sometimes customers ask for "trust," and the pleasant grocery clerk "trusts" all your family are well. Then there are sugar trusts, pork and grain trusts and other trusts, including mistrust. But we trust you will at once try Brussels soap for household use, for you can safely trust to its efficacy. Then it is so lasting, you know, and economical.

City Government.

COMMON COUNCIL.

The Common Council held a meeting on last Friday evening at which considerable important business was transacted.

The monthly report of the Auditor of Accounts was read and accepted. ——Councilman Fox of Ward 2 was called to the chair.——Johnson Richardson and James T. Newcomb were granted $6 each State Aid, and Harriet Ridlon and John Henry were granted $4 each. Charles A. McDonald was given leave to withdraw. ——President Thompson of the Finance Committee, said they had looked over the accounts and recommended the following transfers: $1590 from abatements and overlays to department of ventillation apparatus, Union Street Schoolhouse. The President stated that payment for the apparatus would not be made until it worked satisfactorily; $100, from Almshouse to Outside Relief; $300, from Abatements and Overlayings to Interest on Municipal Debt; $200, from Miscellaneous to Municipal Building; $150, from Miscellaneous to Printing and Stationery; $29, from Miscellaneous to State Aid; $500, from Abatements and Overlayings to Police Department. ——Benjamin Hinckley having declined the office of Sinking Fund Commissioner, Edward E. Thompson was elected to that office, receiving a unanimous vote.——An order was passed to choose a Chief Engineer of the Fire Department. A motion of Councilman Grant lay the subject matter on the table was defeated. President Thompson stated that the question had been raised outside regarding the legality of the election of Mr. Ferrin under the new ordinance. He was satisfied that it was all right, but thought it best to have another election to set the matter at rest. Albert A. Ferrin was then unanimously chosen Chief Engineer.——Charles H. Morgan petitioned for State Aid, and a communication was received from the Selectmen of Saugus, stating that George H. Newhall, who had moved to Woburn, had been paid State Aid for November.

Christmas S. S. Concert.

The Congregational church was filled to overflowing last Sunday evening with people who assembled to enjoy the Christmas Sunday School concert arranged by Superintendents Carter and Lyford and noticed at length in last week's JOURNAL. No spare room was to be seen anywhere in the building. The singing-seats were crowded too and the singers in them did admirably. The little folks sang especially well. Prof. Clarke, organist of the church, has a happy faculty of making everyone do his best, while his success in the production of antiphonal music by adult and juvenile choirs has never been surpassed.

The exercises by the children, under the careful direction of the Superintendents named above, were pleasing and edifying. The literary, biblical and musical selections were each and all appropriate to the Christmas season and showed in their prompt and correct execution much previous preparation and intelligent study. It was evident that the large audience were well pleased with the successful efforts of the little ones to surpass all former efforts at giving a Christmas Sunday School concert. The following programme was admirably carried through by little and big:

1. Organ Voluntary.
2. Singing. Glory to God in the highest.
3. Responsive Reading.
4. Prayer.
5. Singing. At last our Star.
6. Opening Address. Ruth Bacon.
7. Recitation. Hail glorious Morn. Sarah Norris.
8. Singing. In the wintry Heaven.
9. Recitation. Christmas Babe. Claire Jaquith.
10. Recitation. In Trouble. E. Fletcher Lyford.
11. Singing. Calm was the hallowed night.
12. Responsive Reading.
13. Recitation. Christmas Story. Grace Norris.
14. Singing. Christmas Bells.
15. Recitation. Our Side. Clara Larsen.
16. Recitation. All the earth is glad to-day. Johnnie and Ella Bates.
17. Singing. Song that woke the morn.
18. Reading. A Christ Legend. Miss L. Carter.
19. Singing. Hosanna.
20. Collection.
21. Address. Dr. March.
22. Hymn.
23. Benediction.

An irate woman knocked in the head of a flour barrel because her grocer wouldn't trust her for Brussels soap.

At the Unitarian Church next Sunday.

The Unitarians will hold their Christmas service of song and praise next Sunday, for which Organist Buck has selected appropriate pieces, and Pastor Parker has probably written a special sermon.

At the regular morning services of church the music will be a Christmas voluntary on the organ by Mr. Buck, the same to be followed by an anthem, "Be Joyful, O Earth" by Macy. The closing piece will be "The Good Shepherd" arranged by Nevin.

The main feature of the day however will be the Christmas concert at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. On this occasion the music is expected to be particularly fine. The following is the

PROGRAMME:

Songs by the School, assisted by J. H. Parker, Jr., Cornetist.
Christmas Song, by Dow. Solo by Miss Stella Lindoln. Cornet obligato by Mr. F. H. Rogers.
Chorus by Choir.
Song. The Christmas Hymn. Freckel
Miss Mabel Davis.
Song. "I have sought and I have found. Keller
Mr. Jacob Benzing of Boston.

Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 50 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buss' Drug Store.

The Test.

Last Saturday evening a test of the fire alarm and signals and also of the agility and fleetness of foot of the firemen was duly made by Mayor Johnson in company with Mayor-elect Bean, local and Boston reporters, Alderman-elect William F. Davis and numerous invited guests.

The alarm was pulled by the Mayor just before 10 o'clock in the evening, and was as much of a surprise to the "laddies" as it was possible for anything to have been. Chief Ferrin and Captains of Companies were at the house of the Hookies on Montvale Avenue arranging for the Firemen's Annual Ball when the signal came from Box 61, which is at Thomas Salmon's and means business in the region of Main, Salem and neighboring streets.

The Hookies were first to arrive on the ground, but they were only a minute or two ahead of Hose 6, Capt. Geo. H. Newcomb, who made a close second. Other Companies came in at the top of their speed and not many minutes elapsed before they were assembled and wondering what all the fuss was about.

Mayor-elect Bean was highly delighted with the work of the firemen.

So also was Alderman-elect Davis.

Members of the Press were delegated to act as time-keepers on the score of honesty and accuracy.

The time-keepers were directed to count from the last stroke of the first round of six to the time of the arrival of the apparatus at the box, and the following was the time made:

Chief Engineer,	1m. 51s.
Steamer 1,	1m. 30s.
Hook & Ladder, 1,	1m. 34s.
Hose 6,	3m.
Hose 1,	3m. 2s.
Hose 5,	4m. 40s.
Hose 3,	5m.
Hose 4,	6m. 30s.
Hose 2,	8m. 36s.

There was a slight defect in the alarm at North Woburn and the company lost about three-quarters of a minute, so the driver calculates. Hose 5 stopped a few rods away from the box called in, and several seconds were lost thereby. The Steamer and Hose Companies 2, 3 and 4 responded on a second alarm.

The result was highly satisfactory. When the "dismiss" signal was sounded, each captain was requested to assemble his men at the Ward room in Fox Building. Arriving there they found a collation provided by Caterer Cyrus Tay. When the appetites were satisfied a few speeches were made, the speakers being Mayor Johnson, Mayor-elect Bean, Alderman-elect William F. Davis, Chief Engineer Ferrin and others, and the assembly dissolved after cheering for the Mayors and the Engineers.

The JOURNAL some time ago concluded from what other people say that Woburn was the smartest Fire Department in the Mystic Valley or in any of the towns and cities contiguous to the same. The boys can hear an alarm and get to a blaze about as speedily as it is possible for horseflesh to carry them there, and no time is ever fooled away by any of them in getting streams on the fire. The test last Saturday evening was a good one and highly flattering to our fire lads.

Mishawum Club.

Last Friday evening Mishawum Club, the leading social organization in this city, held a "Ladies Night," which was a regular quality affair. It demanded evening dress suits for the gentlemen and attire in the nature of ball costumes for the wives and daughters. A great deal of fashion and gallantry was on exhibition, and everyone enjoyed the occasion highly. Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lewis, Master and Mistress of the Lewis Music School of this city, gave some very fine pianoforte music, while games, songs, etc. were principal features of the evening. The vocal music by the "Cecilia's" was particularly fine and gave a great deal of pleasure to cultivated ears. A comedy overture by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis was received with much applause while Miss Merlena Bancroft accompanying performances on the pianoforte for the "Cecilia's" were particularly pleasing. There was a vocal solo "The Stirrup Cup," Mr. T. Remick; pianoforte selections, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis; vocal quartet, "Blue Bells of Scotland," Cecilia Quartet; vocal duet, "The Moon has raised the Lamp," Mrs. Phinney and Mr. Remick; vocal solo, "Out on the Deep," Mr. Remick; vocal quartet, "Song of the Triton," Cecilia Quartet.

A fine banquet was served at a seasonable hour and everyone enjoyed it with a keen relish after the pleasing exercises which preceded it. The following was the programme for the very fashionable affair:

Musical Entertainment in Club Banquet Hall, Between 8 and 9 o'clock.
Piano-Forte—Comedy Overture. C. Bohm
Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lewis.
Vocal Quartet—Moorland Ride. Hering

Chief Engineer.

The Common Council, at a meeting held on last Friday evening, re-elected Albert A. Ferrin to be Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, or rather it was a kind of confirmation of his original election. There has been talk through the year that the election of Mr. Ferrin to the office of Chief Engineer last winter was not legal under the then existing city ordinances and to quiet the talk the ordinances were amended to meet the case, although good lawyers took no stock in the criticisms, but pronounced the election legal.

But to dispel all doubts about the matter and to do away with all cause for questioning the legality of the business, President Thompson of the Board suggested the advisability of going through the form of an election, which was done last Friday evening and Mr. Ferrin received the vote of every member of the Council.

Mr. Ferrin is a very competent man for the position and has filled it to the entire satisfaction of the Fire Department and public ever since he first assumed its responsible duties.

The Boston Advertiser.

We have noticed for some time with pleasure the improvement that is being steadily made in The Boston Daily Advertiser by its present progressive and live managers. They now announce that beginning with Jan. 1st, the price of the paper will be reduced to $6 a year, putting it at the same rate as the other Boston morning papers, while at the same time, the features which have made it so valuable for many years will be retained and the news department freshened and brightened up. The management say that no one need expect any cheap sensationalism in The Advertiser, but that it will be the best morning paper for business men and the family published in New England. The Advertiser was for some time under a financial cloud, but the present managers have put a very different face on matters, and are evidently going into the field to dispute it with the papers which have long believed themselves impregnable.

The influenza has again made its appearance in various sections of France.

DeLoriea Was Watched.

Mr. John W. DeLoriea, foreman at Simonds & Co.'s shoe stock factory in the lower part of the city, found himself handsomely watched by the firm's employees under his charge last Saturday evening. He was called to the second floor where he found the whole shop's crew, numbering nearly one hundred persons assembled. He asked them what the trouble was, when Miss Annie Mahoney addressed him and presented him with a beautiful Waltham gold watch. Mr. DeLoriea was greatly surprised and responded, as best he could, thanking them for their kind words which he appreciated more than the gift.

The watch was beautifully chased, and has the three links of the Odd Fellows prominently upon it. On the inside of the case was the inscription. "Presented to John W. DeLoriea by the employes of George A. Simonds & Co.," and the date followed. Mr. De Loriea has been in charge of the Simonds factory for nearly six years.

The whole affair was an exceedingly pleasant one, especially to Mr. DeLoriea who had not the least warning of the plot against him.

Boston Theatres.

The popular romantic actor, Robert Mantell, begins his annual engagement at the Globe Theatre on Monday evening next, on which occasion he will appear in his masterly impersonation of Robert Monbars in D'Ennery's picturesque romantic drama, "Monbars." This play made a good impression here two seasons ago, and Mr. Mantell's interpretation of the title role was warmly commended. Its situations are all cleverly arranged, and the climaxes, especially those of the closing acts, are moving and powerful. The cauterizing of the mad dog bite with a red hot poker in the first act is one of the realistic features of the drama. Mr. Mantell's company is above the average and contains a number of prominent artists.

Commencing Monday evening Dec. 29, Charles L. Davis will appear in his world wide play "Alvin Joslin" at the Grand Opera House. This is his farewell appearance for he settles down with a handsome fortune and a magnificent theatre in Pittsburg, Penn. Alvin Joslin is the funniest of plays and has made millions laugh. Remember this is the last time of his appearance on any stage. Every evening and with the usual matinees, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday afternoons at 2 P. M.

In Commenting Upon, etc.

The WOBURN JOURNAL, in commenting upon the change in the vote of that city from No license to License, gives the city the following first class (?) recommendation:—

"We regret this decision. A temperance victory would have been vastly more satisfactory to the JOURNAL. But considering the character of our population a different result could hardly have been expected."

Don't you want to go to Woburn to live—that is, if you are a toper and like people of that character?—Somerville Citizen.

If the Citizen had put into its remarks what the JOURNAL said about the notorious drinking habits of Somerville people they would have sounded somewhat different from what they do now. It takes a great deal of self-denial on the part of the average denizen of Somerville to vote "No" on the license question, but they do it regularly year after year and, as we said last week, on strict business principles. And then again, it is about as handy for Somerville tipplers to get their rum in Boston as it would be to have it sold in their own city.

Holiday GoodS.

We are now ready with our usual amount of Goods suitable for the Holiday Trade. Those who have visited our stores in the past need not be told of our many attractions, but simply to be reminded that this year's goods are in no way inferior to those of former years. In fact each year we try to improve. Our Booklets and Cards are vastly superior to anything we have ever had, while the juveniles will not fail to suit all the younger ones. And for the older we have Books by the standard authors. Our Fancy Goods are numerous and our Staple Goods are correct in variety, quality and price.

An early examination solicited.

Will be Plenty of Snow.

Weather Prophet Beebe, who lives on a high mountain top on the line between Lee and Great Barrington, in Berkshire County, Mass., was asked what would be the weather in New England this winter.

He said that he had received many letters asking this very same question. The president of the Knickerbocker Ice Company had written him, the president of the Naugatuck Company had written to him, and he has received several letters from Boston earnestly inquiring if there is going to be the scarcity of ice this winter that there was last.

Mr. Beebe says that this will be a cold and severe winter. Ice will be abundant. Snow in New England will be deep, coming on about the first of January and lasting until late in the spring. Berkshire will have something like 90 days of sleighing.

There will be more snow in Boston than usual, and the New England coast will see snow two feet deep before the first of February.

The winds will blow at such a high rate that the winter will be more severe than the one when the forefathers landed on Plymouth rock.

The mercury will often be below zero, and there will be no scarcity of ice anywhere in the Eastern States.

Shipping on the Atlantic coast will be greatly imperilled. Steamers that come in frome Europe will be especially endangered as they approach the Atlantic coast. The waves on the Atlantic will run higher than they have in more than a decade.

The Hudson river will be frozen over earlier than usual, ice will be thick on the Connecticut, and lakes and rivers in the eastern part of Massachusetts will be frozen hard all the winter. Mr. Beebe has struck it right so many times that people in his part of the world [Western Massachusetts] have much confidence in his predictions.—Ex.

A Change of Co-partnership.

It was a matter for regret among the large number of workmen employed at Loring & Avery's tannery on learning that the lease of the buildings were about to expire, and that Mr. Moseley, the owner of the buildings and a special partner had withdrawn from the firm and formed a co-partnership with Messrs. Beggs & Cobb of Woburn, and would take possession of the tannery. Messrs. Loring & Avery have been very considerate to their employees and consequently strikes and labor troubles were unknown. Beggs & Cobb will continue to occupy the Maxwell tannery on Cross street as at present. It is reported that Loring & Avery are negotiating for the Bryant & King factory at Woburn. The employees at Loring's are apprehensive of wholesale discharge, but as the new firm will run the tannery at its full capacity these fears appear to be groundless.—Winchester Star.

Sewage Problem.

The question of the disposal of the sewage of Woburn is seriously confronting that city. The city of Boston is not disposed to longer permit of this sewage being emptied into Mystic Lake, and a permanent injunction restraining Woburn from further doing so has been issued. The sewage problem is also one that seriously affects our town, the gravity of which is becoming more and more apparent year after year, and pending the completing of the Metropolitan sewer, the town cannot hope for additional relief from that belonging to Boston. Five years is a long time to wait before Winchester can provide for its sewage, and even after that time connecting drains will have to be built.—Winchester Star.

North Woburn.

On last Friday evening Mr. Charles Nichols, Jr. opened the door at his home, in response to the ringing of the door-bell and to his great surprise before him stood a large number of his friends, who gave him a most hearty greeting. The evening was passed in a very pleasant manner and games of all sorts were enjoyed after which a fine collation was served. It was an occasion to which those present will look back as one of great pleasure.
